MANAGEMENT DISCUSSION AND ANALYSIS

Background:

Transwarranty Finance Limited is a non-deposit accepting Non-Banking Finance Company ("NBFC"), holding a Certificate of Registration from the Reserve Bank of India ("RBI") engaged in a wide spectrum of financial services, both advisory and fund based lending.

The Company is headquartered in Mumbai and has a capital market subsidiary engaged in equity & commodities broking.

Economic Scenario:

India experienced strong inclusive growth between 2003 and 2011, with average growth above 8% and the incidence of poverty cut in half. This reflected gains from past structural reforms, strong capital inflows up to 2007 and expansionary fiscal and monetary policies since 2009. These growth engines faltered in 2012. Stubbornly high Inflation as well as large current and fiscal deficits left little room for monetary and fiscal stimulus to revive growth. The prospect of "tapering" monetary stimulus in OECD countries and the reversal in capital inflows, as well as the difficulty to pass reforms to remove growth bottlenecks in the run-up to the 2014 general elections further weighed on India's economic performance. In 2014, the economy has shown signs of a turnaround and imbalances have lessened. Fiscal consolidation at the central government level has been accompanied by a decline in both inflation and the current account deficit. Confidence has been boosted by on-going reforms to the monetary policy framework, with more weight given to inflation. The large depreciation in the rupee has also helped revive exports. Industrial production has rebounded and business sentiment has surged, triggered by a decline in political uncertainty. Reducing macroeconomic imbalances further is key to sustaining consumer and investor confidence and to containing external vulnerabilities – this will require adhering to the fiscal roadmap and implementing the proposed changes to the monetary policy framework.

Structural reforms would raise India's economic growth. In their absence, however, growth will remain below the 8% growth rate achieved during the previous decade. Infrastructure bottlenecks, a cumbersome business environment, complex and distorting taxes, inadequate education and training, and outdated labour laws are increasingly impeding growth and job creation. Female economic participation remains exceptionally low, holding down incomes and resulting in severe gender inequalities. Although absolute poverty has declined, it remains high, and income inequality has in fact risen since the early 1990s. Inefficient subsidy programmes for food, energy and fertilisers have increased steadily while public spending on health care and education has remained low.

Recent economic developments and projections

The economic slowdown since mid-2011 has been more pronounced in India than in the OECD area and many other emerging economies. In 2013, GDP growth measured at market prices was at its weakest since 2003 – 4.7% compared to an average of 8% over the period 2003-11 – and the manufacturing sector contracted in volume terms for the first time since 1991. By contrast, financial and business services continued to grow at 10% or more. On the demand side, investment and private consumption have been weak, while exports rebounded in the second half of 2013 following the rupee depreciation. Weaker exports of goods during the first months of 2014, however, suggest that competitiveness remains an issue.

Structural bottlenecks have taken a toll on economic growth and on the manufacturing sector in particular. Lengthy authorisation processes and uncertainty surrounding land acquisition have held back infrastructure investment, while corporate investment has suffered from rising input prices which have squeezed corporate margins. Job creation has been sluggish and most jobs remain informal despite some pick-up in formal employment, mostly in services.

Consumer price inflation has remained much higher than in the OECD area and in other BRICS. A series of one-off factors have contributed to inflation, including: adverse weather conditions, adjustment in administrative prices for core food items, oil products, electricity and railways; the extension of the National Rural Employment Guarantee Scheme (NREGS), which established a wage floor in rural areas; the rupee depreciation in the summer 2013. Supply-side constraints in the food sector – including the lack of cold storage and refrigerated transport facilities – have also contributed to food price volatility. The decline in inflation in the first half of 2014 is encouraging but inflation expectations have remained stubbornly high.

Prospects and risks

Activity is projected to pick up gradually. Private consumption should grow steadily, in particular in rural areas, reflecting past rises in agricultural minimum support prices (MSPs) and rural wages. Investment should recover as the decline in political uncertainty has boosted business sentiment. If successful, efforts to put large stalled infrastructure projects back on track would also raise investment. The projected rebound in external demand should boost exports. Tight monetary and fiscal stances and high corporate leverage will restrain domestic demand. Inflation and inflation expectations are projected to decline gradually, reflecting some moderation in wages and food prices as well as the implementation of the new monetary policy framework. Current risks are broadly balanced, although for the medium term risks are on the downside, contingent on the implementation of reforms. Exports, which have been showing signs of recovery after the rupee depreciation in the summer

2013, may be restrained by supply-side bottlenecks. High corporate leverage and deteriorating asset quality in the banking sector may put the investment recovery at risk. Poor weather conditions (a deficient monsoon) could weigh on agriculture and add to inflation pressures.

A slower than projected recovery, coupled with the impact of the depreciation of the rupee on oil and fertiliser subsidies, could make the planned fiscal consolidation more challenging, potentially undermining macroeconomic stability. On the other hand, a firm commitment to contain both inflation and the fiscal deficit would boost confidence and thus investment and consumption. Implementation of badly needed structural reforms would boost growth and, if properly designed, could also hasten the short-term recovery.
