All Members,

Sub: Application Programming Interface (API)- Trade download

NCL provides facility to download trade via NCMS system of NCL. The download can be currently done at a defined time interval through NCL provided front end application. The front end also provides the data in a fixed file format which is used by the end user for further processing. As a continual endeavor to support market participants it is proposed to achieve straight through processing without any manual intervention there is a need to provide Application Programming Interface (API). Using the API members shall be able to integrate their end systems with NCMS system of NCL.

To start with NCL, is proposing to introduce an Application Programming Interface (API) for trades download. The details of API protocol for trade download is attached as Annexure 1.

NCL shall communicate the availability of test environment and implementation date separately.
