Young partners in law companies face growth crisis

JIOTSNA BHATNAGAR
Ahmedabad, October 3

AT A GLANCE

- Profitability per partner is significantly low
- It gets hard for young partners to either get promoted to "equity partners" or find new jobs elsewhere
- Cyril Amarchand Mangaldas has a staggering 148 salaried partners
- It has 67 equity partners
- The corresponding figures for JSA is 92 and 62
- For Khaitan & Co, its 58 and 9
- Trilegal follows only an equity partner structure and has a reported headcount of 142
- Equity partner roles are fewer and more competitive

Mangaldas, admits the problems that young salaried partners face. "For equity partners, it's a lucrative time as they often move in mass to other firms where they can get a larger chunk of the pie."

Abhijeet Shinde, head, litigation at the home textiles major Welspun Group, says "law firms are increasing focussed on revenue generating ability of lawyers. Many competent lawyers find this very challenging", he says, adding that almost 60 to 65% of the really talented young partners in law firms are "just stuck and floating around".

Most lawyers agree that the glut at the young partner level is largely because a talent war is going on where firms are competing to retain people. And to do that, they are offering faster routes to partnership, more attractive compensation (including variable incentives), and sometimes novel structures like non-equity or fixed income partners to recognise "partner-level" talent without requiring full equity.

Although senior positions are increasing, becoming an equity partner has become harder. Some firms offer non-equity partner paths, which may give partner title but not full ownership or profit share; while equity partner roles are fewer and more competitive.

Gaurav Dani, a founding partner of CMS-Indus Law avers, "Institutional clients, often large, prefer to stay with the firm as long as the firm can demonstrate the ability to execute ongoing matters. However, younger partners for their own professional growth should also focus on client relationship development and management."

Adani Power, Reliance among 6 private firms interested in BSMRs

PRESS TRUST OF INDIA
New Delhi, October 3

AT LEAST SIX private companies, including Reliance Industries and Adani Power, have evinced interest in setting up Bharat Small Modular Reactors (BSMRs) and identified 16 probable sites across six states.

Hindalco, Jindal Steel, Tata Power and Reliance Industries have submitted the documents specified in non-disclosure agreement.

JSW Energy and Adani Power have submitted documents for signing the NDA and the same are under evaluation and further processing, the NPCIL said.

The BSMRs will be constructed and operated under NPCIL's supervision. The state-run company will retain operational control and asset ownership, while the successful bidders will hold beneficial rights over the net electricity generated.
