The proposed cooperation will initially focus on Lithium Iron Phosphate (LFP)-based Battery Energy Storage Systems (BESS), covering capacities from 100 kWh to 5 MWh, including Commercial and Industrial (C&I) energy storage applications and integrated hybrid solutions combining solar power, diesel generators and battery storage. Plans to enter into Utility Scale projects are currently under review. The partnership will explore manufacturing and technology licensing opportunities with the objective of addressing India's growing demand for reliable, efficient, and sustainable energy storage solutions.

Driven by plummeting lithium-ion costs and stringent green mandates, India's Commercial and Industrial (C&I) BESS opportunity is transitioning from a sub-1 GWh base in 2025 to a massive 22–31 GWh projected capacity by 2032, capturing a sub-market CAGR of 36.2% (contributing heavily to a broader national sector projected to grow at a 91% CAGR up to 302 GWh by FY32).

Aartech Solonics Limited's participation in the MP Solar + Storage Expo 2026 further reflects the company's interest in understanding emerging technologies and exploring opportunities in the energy storage sector.
