Good Pitch to Bet On!

World Cup hasn't even started and the betting market is already on fire

Moments after the first exit polls came out, the election results really caught fire. It was the evening so only television channels caught the benefits, in terms of ratings and viewership. The next morning, when the stock markets opened, the rally was a combination of relief and reassurance. All those who had banked on a horse getting his nose across the line could either book their profits, put more in where they were hesitant before, fearing volatility, or hedge their five-year bets. Once that was over, another market opened up, ever so gently. With the elections out of the way, Indians could actually focus on what is important, such as cricket, with the World Cup around the corner. The numbers are staggering to begin with. In practice matches, where only 10 wickets can fall, but anybody in the 15 can bat—not even real contests—the betting is already through the roof. As India played Bangladesh, £17 million was bet, on a single game of no consequence, on one legal betting platform in England. But, don't be too alarmed by that number. On the same website, £71 million was matched in bets on the Indian Premier League (IPL) final that the Chennai Super Kings (CSK) lost to the Mumbai Indians (MI). It is reasonably expected that every match involving the Big Three—India, England and Australia—will attract something in the range of £50 million this World Cup. And this is on legal betting platforms. It is a fact that even these legal betting outfits rely on money from India, where betting

SHORT OF LENGTH
Steyn to Miss Opener Against England
South Africa will be without experienced pace bowler Dale Steyn for Thursday's World Cup opener against England at The Oval after failing to shake off a recurring shoulder problem. But they are hoping he will be fit to face India on June 5 as he continues to make progress in his recovery after more than a month on the sidelines.

on cricket is illegal, for much of their revenue. While the average punter cannot register a credit card, create an account and bet on these websites there are multiple ways to circumvent the system. Having a family member or friend overseas who can create an account and work through that is the easiest, but this is for the person who has an odd flutter. For serious gamblers, who play money on each game, hedging bets and working spreads—not too different from day traders in the stock market—there exist avenues to park money. "I have to clear my dues on Monday. There are no extensions, no options, nothing to discuss," a regular punter in Mumbai said. "It doesn't matter whether I am busy, I am out of the city or I'm unavailable. Settlement day is settlement day, whether I win or lose." If the numbers are astounding on legal betting operations, they are only a drop in the ocean when it comes to what happens off the books. "Bhai sahab, agar aapko 28% tax dena ho, aap hamare saath karam karoge ya website ke saath?" "I don't have an answer to that question because I don't want my legs broken for defaulting payment and also because I don't bet, legally or illegally on cricket. If you had some spare cash, a decent amount, would you put it on Afghanistan winning this World Cup? They're at 80-1, and obviously a long shot, so perhaps best not. But, in 1983, India were 66-1, and they came through. Forget about winning, Afghanistan are still listed at 10-1 on making the final four. The conversation over legalising betting on cricket and other sports is gaining momentum in India. But key questions remain unanswered. While corporates are lobbying for their voice to be heard, the alternate universe that thrives on betting being illegal is more than happy to take from the pocket and preserve their market. On the legal betting websites you can take punts on the most odd things. Will someone hit six sixes in an over? That's 25-1 if you like. Bhuvneshwar Kumar as player of the tournament, also 25-1. While you watch this World Cup, in the comfort of your home, perhaps keep your money in your pocket as forces much larger have run their algorithms, worked their magic, and found their mark.

25 YEARS & COUNTING...

Arsenal are aiming to win a first European trophy in a quarter of a century in distant Baku tonight and their hopes of doing so appear to rest at the feet of Pierre-Emerick Aubameyang and Alexandre Lacazette. After missing out on a top-four place in the Premier League, the assessment of Unai Emery's first season in charge of the Gunners will be far kinder if they can end the campaign with victory in the Europa League final. It all comes down to this London derby in an unlikely ly setting by the Caspian Sea—if Arsenal win, they will have a first piece of European silverware since raising the Cup Winners' Cup in 1994 and with it the additional prize of a return to the Champions League. And while the Gunners have frequently toiled defensively this season, conceding 51 goals in the Premier League, Emery knows he is the envy of almost every coach in Europe with Lacazette and Aubameyang in his ranks. They have scored 50 times between them this season, with Lacazette getting 19 goals and being named the club's player of the year by Arsenal supporters. His goal tally has been put in the shade by Aubameyang, who has netted 31 times, including a hat-trick in the second leg of their semi-final against Valencia and 22 goals in the Premier League to share the Golden Boot with Liverpool duo Sadio Mane and Mohamed Salah in his first full campaign in England. —AFP

Osaka Survives 'Bagel'

World number one and top seed Naomi Osaka flirted with an opening-round exit at the French Open on Tuesday but recovered from a first-set horror show to beat Anna Karolina Schmiedlova 0-6, 7-6(4), 6-1. The 21-year-old Japanese player, aiming for a third successive Grand Slam title, was allowed only nine points in the first set against the world number 90 from Slovakia. She then let a 3-0 lead slip in the second set before twice having to break her opponent's serve to stay in the match. Once she won the tiebreak, however, her game clicked back into gear and she breezed through the decider: She will be allowed no such lapses in the second round, however, when she faces former world number one Victoria Azarenka.

OSTAPENKO FLOPS AGAIN
Jelena Ostapenko suffered her second successive first-round loss at the French Open since winning the 2017 title as she was beaten by former world No. 1 Victoria Azarenka. Considering the calibre of her opponent, a 6-4, 7-6(4) loss was not as demoralising as last year's defeat by Ukraine's Kateryna Kozlova. But it continued a steep decline for the 21-year-old who also fell in round one at the Australian Open.

ZVEREV DIGS DEEP
Alexander Zverev was made to work hard to reach the second round of the French Open, trashing a racket in frustration in a 7-6(4), 6-3, 2-6, 6-7(5), 6-3 win over

Australian John Millman. The German fifth seed, looking for a major breakthrough on the Grand Slam stage, needed more than four hours to see off the world number 56 and set up a meeting with Swedish qualifier Mikael Ymer.
