INDIA'S FIRST JUDICIAL AI PLATFORM IS RESHAPING COURTS

Nyaay AI puts judiciary on the global tech map

JYOTSNA BHATNAGAR
Ahmedabad, August 29

EVEN AS INDIAN law firms race to adopt artificial intelligence to boost efficiency, Nyaay AI—the country's only AI platform built specifically for the judiciary—is quietly setting global benchmarks.

Founded in 2022 by Pan-Science Innovations in collaboration with RailTel, a subsidiary of Indian Railways, Nyaay AI was conceived to tackle some of the most intractable problems plaguing India's judicial system: mounting pendency, filing defects, procedural backlogs, and shortage of judicial staff.

Two years on, it has emerged as a globally sought-after solution. The platform is already working with the Supreme Court, 16 of India's 25 High Courts (HCs), as well as the Supreme Court of Singapore, which became its first paid client last year. Countries including the UK and Brazil have approached the firm to help them set up similar judicial platforms.

"Our suite of products spans defect detection, e-filing automation, case clustering, metadata extraction, bench allocation, headnote generation, live transcription, multilingual translation, and judgment analysis—all designed to make courts faster, more efficient, and more accessible," Anshul Pandey, founder and CEO of Pan-Science, told FE.

Judiciary-first approach

Unlike most legal AI solutions, which began with law firms, Nyaay chose the tougher judiciary-first route. Pandey recalls a chance meeting with former Chief Justice of India D Y Chandrachud—credited with

DY CHANDRACHUD,
FORMER CHIEF JUSTICE OF INDIA

Embedding AI has reduced time between filing and hearing significantly by streamlining procedural aspects of court system

fast-tracking the e-Courts project—with shaping that vision. "From the get-go, under Justice Chandrachud's tutelage, we chose the less lucrative and infinitely more laborious judiciary-first approach, working directly with judges, registrars, and court staff," Pandey recalls.

That choice has paid off. Today, Nyaay AI not only has a proven adoption model with pilots running in multiple high courts, district courts, and the Supreme Court, but also global validation.

"What makes Nyaay so effective is that it was co-created with the judiciary," Pandey explains. "Concept notes, pilots, and product roadmaps were all shaped in collaboration with high courts and the Supreme Court, ensuring alignment with real judicial needs."

Justice Chandrachud underscores the importance of such technology. "The purpose of AI is to make the judicial system transparent, efficient and accessible. Embedding AI has reduced the time between filing and hearing significantly by streamlining procedural aspects of the court system."

Tackling India's unique challenges

According to legal experts, be coded to flag defects before filing, saving time for registries and allowing them to focus on accuracy and preventing process abuse," he says. "It would be short-sighted to restrict AI deployment to assisting judicial work alone."

Sovereignty, security and scale

Another factor making Nyaay AI adaptable to India's judicial context is its architecture. It can run on local servers without relying on the cloud—critical for data-sensitive environments like courts where sovereignty and security are paramount.

"The Indian Constitution and judicial framework are structurally unique," Pandey explains. "Our models are trained on Indian judgments and filings, ensuring they interpret terms, procedures, and precedents in the correct constitutional context—something generic global AI tools cannot offer."

Unlike point solutions that tackle only fragments of the judicial process, Nyaay AI covers the entire courtroom workflow—from filing and defect detection to case clustering, allocation, live hearings and judgment summarisation. It also integrates smoothly with NIC and e-Courts systems, reducing resistance to adoption.

By proving its technology in courts before extending it to law firms and corporates, Nyaay has inverted the global playbook for legal AI. "We wanted to bridge the judiciary and private sector," Pandey says.

"Nyaay is the first to prove its solutions in courts before taking them to firms—reversing the usual 'law firm first' strategy."

URJIT PATEL, EXECUTIVE DIRECTOR, INTERNATIONAL MONETARY FUND

The 'owl' on a new perch

THE FORMER RBI GOVERNOR WAS WIDELY COMMENDED FOR HIS MEASURED HANDLING OF THE LIQUIDITY SHOCK, HIS PUSH FOR PROMPT CORRECTIVE ACTION FRAMEWORK, AND HIS FIRM STANCE ON CENTRAL BANK AUTONOMY

MAHESH NAYAK

MOST ACCOUNTS OF Urjit Patel, who has just been appointed executive director at the International Monetary Fund, has described him as a well-respected but "low-key" figure—basically, a man of few words. But when he spoke, it was with great effect. The former Reserve Bank of India governor once famously characterised the central bank as an owl and not a hawk or a dove.

There are other examples, too. When the massive bank fraud involving Punjab National Bank came to light in 2018, Patel had said that like the "Neelakantha", the RBI will consume poison and facebrickbats, but will persist with endeavours to become better with each trial.

Patel was to resign at the fag end of that same year—the first RBI governor since 1990 to resign before the completion of his term—citing a terse "personal reasons" amid public disagreements with the government over issues such as surplus fund transfer from the RBI's reserves and regulatory oversight of public sector banks.

His return to the IMF is more than a personal milestone. As ED, he will play a crucial role in shaping India's voice on global financial matters at the IMF. Leading India's representation on the IMF's Executive Board, he would be representing a constituency comprising India, Bangladesh, Bhutan, and Sri Lanka. His presence at the G20 and BRICS forums has strengthened his role as an influential voice in international economic diplomacy.

Patel's IMF appointment comes after the premature removal of Krishnamurthy Subramanian from the post in May 2024. In a sense it's a home coming for the 61-year-old whose career began at the IMF in the early 1990s, where he worked on country desks for the United States, India, Bahamas and Myanmar. His early exposure to macroeconomic surveillance and policy design laid the foundation for a career defined by analytical clarity and institutional discipline. Currently, Patel serves as Chairman of National Institute of Public Finance and Policy, an autonomous research institute under India's Ministry of Finance.

Born in Nairobi, Kenya, in 1963, Patel pursued his undergraduate studies in Economics at the London School of Economics, followed by an M.Phil in Economics from Oxford University. He later earned a Ph.D. in Economics from Yale University, where his doctoral research focused on India's fiscal policy and debt dynamics.

He returned to India in the 1990s as the IMF's Deputy Resident Representative, advising on financial sector reforms during a pivotal phase of India's liberalisation.

He served as a consultant to the Ministry of Finance from 1998 to 2001. His public policy trajectory gained momentum when he joined the RBI as Deputy Governor in 2013. During this tenure, he chaired the committee that recommended the adoption of a flexible inflation-targeting framework, which became the cornerstone of India's current monetary policy.

In September 2016, he was appointed the 24th Governor of the RBI, and in two months, the Government of India announced the demonetisation of all ₹500 and ₹1,000 banknotes of the Mahatma Gandhi Series. It also announced the issuance of new ₹500 and ₹2,000 banknotes in exchange for the demonetised banknotes. Patel's departure in December 2018 was viewed as a stand for institutional independence, reinforcing his reputation as a professional committed to policy integrity.

He was widely commended for his calm and measured handling of the liquidity shock, his push for banking sector clean-up through the Prompt Corrective Action framework, and his firm stance on central bank autonomy.

Beyond the RBI, Patel has held various roles in international institutions, including a stint as vice-president for Investment Operations at the Asian Infrastructure Investment Bank (AIIB), where he oversaw sovereign and non-sovereign lending portfolios across Asia. He also served as a Director at the Bank for International Settlements (BIS), contributing to global financial stability frameworks and participating in key discussions on monetary policy coordination.

He has also worked with corporations such as Reliance Industries, IDFC, and Gujarat State Petroleum Corporation, and has served on several high-level government committees, including the Kelkar Committee on Direct Taxes and the Prime Minister's Task Force on Infrastructure. He is currently an independent director on the board of Britannia Industries.
