Iran denies UK allegations over RAF Fairford incident

Iran denied British allegations that it was behind a security incident at RAF Fairford, a UK airbase used by the US military, after Prime Minister Andy Burnham said it was “highly likely” the incident had been coordinated in Iran and “almost certainly” directed by the Islamic Revolutionary Guard Corps (IRGC).

Iran’s Foreign Ministry condemned what it described as “unfounded accusations” by Britain, arguing that the use of phrases such as “highly likely” and “almost certainly” amounted to vague language unsupported by concrete evidence.

Tehran called on the British government to substantiate its allegations, according to Iranian state media.

Burnham told the House of Commons on Monday that Britain had “strong indications” of Iranian involvement in the September 27 incident, which triggered a major security alert at the base in southwest England and led to the withdrawal of US B-1 bombers.

“I can confirm our assessment that it is highly likely to have been coordinated in Iran, almost certainly directed by Iran’s Islamic Revolutionary Guard,” Burnham said. “We will not tolerate these threats on our soil.” The British government summoned

Iran’s ambassador, Ali Mousavi, over the incident, while Foreign Secretary Ed Miliband announced sanctions against two Iranian nationals accused of facilitating hostile activities on behalf of Tehran.

The measures include an asset freeze, travel ban and disqualification from serving as a company director, Miliband said.

The two individuals named were Ruhollah Bazghandi, identified by Britain as the head of counterespionage operations in the IRGC, and Shahram Ali Reza Tamarzadeh Jakki, an alleged facilitator for the Zindashti criminal network.

Burnham said Britain could impose further sanctions on Iran, adding that the government would use its powers to target criminal networks and their funding streams.

Five British nationals were arrested near RAF Fairford on September 27 on suspicion of terrorism and explosives-related offences. They were later released on bail under strict conditions, and another arrest followed days later.

Police had said they were examining the possibility of involvement by a foreign state actor after a local farmer reported suspicious activity involving a group of men and several white vans near the base.

Preliminary reports indicated that investigators found accelerants, including petroleum, in the vehicles, although the viability of any alleged explosives-related plot remained unclear.

The incident prompted the withdrawal of US B-1 bombers from RAF Fairford, while B-52 bombers remained at the base.

Separately, 29 countries issued a joint statement condemning Iran’s use of violent attacks, including alleged lethal plots, arson, sabotage, cyberattacks and other hostile activities against them and their partners. The signatories included the United States, Britain, Australia, Canada, France, Germany, Spain and Ireland.

External Affairs Minister S. Jaishankar’s recent visits to Ghana, Côte d’Ivoire and Ethiopia underline a shift in India-Africa relations from ceremonial diplomacy to transactional partnership. The focus is on trade, investment, critical minerals, agriculture, health and skills - areas where African governments seek diversified partners without replacing one dependency with another.

Critical minerals are central to this engagement. As countries compete for lithium, cobalt and nickel needed for energy transition and industrialisation, Indian companies are expanding across Africa’s mining value chain. India’s National Critical Mineral Mission makes securing raw-material feedstock a strategic priority, while African governments increasingly insist on local processing and value addition. Indian industry is thus becoming an operational arm of India’s mineral diplomacy.

The scale of engagement is substantial. Authorities have recorded over 1,000 India-linked projects in Africa between 1994 and 2026, valued at about $12.07 billion across manufacturing, agriculture, services, construction and trading. India-Africa merchandise trade reached $93.69 billion in 2025-26, up 14.39 per cent, with India importing $48.27 billion and exporting $45.42 billion. New Delhi aims to double trade by 2030.

In Ghana, the outcomes were practical rather than symbolic: agricultural research cooperation on high-yielding tomatoes, cassava and yam; a biodiversity agreement; and Ghana’s entry into the India-led International Big Cat Alliance. Ghana’s bid for BRICS membership also received India’s supportive signal, subject to consensus among members.

Côte d’Ivoire illustrates the commercial logic. Bilateral trade rose to $1.54 billion in 2024-25 from $1.07 billion a year earlier. India imports rubber, cashews, cotton and teak, while exporting rice, vehicles, medicines and machinery. Indian investment in cashew processing and rubber plants supports local employment and export capacity.

India’s broader offer rests on concessional credit—about $12 billion to 42 African countries—and thousands of fully funded training places under ITEC. For Africa, India presents itself as a partner for industrial capacity, food security and human capital. For India, Africa is increasingly indispensable to supply-chain resilience, market expansion and strategic influence in the Global South.

India has extended approximately $12 billion in lines of credit to 42 African countries for infrastructure, healthcare, power, railways and other development projects. Its technical cooperation programmes also provide training and skills development.

The larger strategic challenge is converting diplomatic goodwill into sustainable economic partnerships. If Indian investment supports African industrialisation, local employment and value addition, the relationship can grow beyond commodity trade into a durable partnership serving both sides’ long-term development goals.
