Delhi govt schools choke, private ones turn to air filters

SOPHIA MATHEW &
DRISHTI JAIN

New Delhi, December 19

INTHE NURSERY section of an elite South Delhi school this week, the head of Junior School conferred urgently with a class teacher whose students had left the room for a few minutes at the change of periods.

"What are the PM2.5 levels?" she asked. "How can the CO2 levels be so high?" she demanded to know, her eyes on an air quality monitor. "Did the children just leave the room?"

The carbon dioxide level had just crossed the safe limit of 1,000 parts per million (ppm); the PM2.5 reading was around 200 micrograms/cubic metre. The class teacher told her the reason: yes, the 30-odd children had left just a few minutes ago, and yes, the classroom door had been left slightlyajar.

At the school, a close and constant watch is kept on fluctuations in air quality and pollutant concentrations, the Junior School head said.

All the classrooms are in a "YOGA Clean Air Bubble", an air-purifying technology that claims to combine "traditional ventilation with modern filtration science" to create a "closed-loop bubble" in any indoor space.

Teachers at the school have been trained to monitor readings throughout the day, and to adjust windows and vents as needed, the Junior School head said. It was essential to ensure that small children who, along with the elderly, are the most vulnerable to air pollution, are kept safe, she said.

As part of its standard operating procedure (SOP), this school stops physical education lessons and all outdoor activity if the air quality index (AQI) is between 200, where "poor" begins, and 350,

- As part of its SOP, schools have stopped PE lessons & outdoor activity if the AQI is between 200 and 350 which is halfway into the 'very poor' zone. Other top schools in the city have similar SOPs – at an international school, it is a "Red Day" if the AQI reaches 300, and it becomes compulsory to wear masks outside classrooms.

When the PM2.5 level becomes 40 times the WHO safe limit of 15 µg/m (24-hour average), attendance is no longer compulsory.

Jai Dhar Gupta, who formulated the design response action plans for The British School and The Ardee School, said air purifiers were "a big no". The solution for any classroom is filtered ventilation, as recommended by the American Society of Heating, Refrigeration and Air-Conditioning Engineers," he said.

Gupta, who was part of the Delhi government's air pollution task force in 2015, said most schools were not prepared for pollution-related health emergencies.

"Schools can't wait for a health advisory. Every school needs its own GRAP," he said.

No reliable data on total costs is available, but most schools said the annual cost of maintaining each air purifying unit came to around ₹12,000 on average.

'English would not touch hearts in anti-elite era'

HEENA KHANDELWAL
Mumbai, December 19

OVER THE YEARS, stand-up comedian Zakir Khan has broken ceilings and defied norms. But when he recently headlined a full-length show at New York's iconic Madison Square Garden — the first time the venue hosted a Hindi stand-up — it became a moment everyone back home came together to celebrate.

Speaking at the Express Adda in Mumbai on Thursday, Khan reflected on how stand-up comedy in India naturally leaned heavily on English initially. "The art form comes from abroad, so everybody was performing in English," he said. "But when I saw it, I personally felt it was a foreign language and wouldn't touch people's hearts. So I held my ground."

Born and raised in Indore, Madhya Pradesh, into a middle-class Rajasthani Muslim family, Khan said he consciously tried to take "the language I am comfortable in to the maximum number of people."

The initial years, he admitted, were tough. "I personally feel this is an anti-elite era," he said, explaining how he eventually found an audience that resonated with his voice and language.

Insecurity, he said, becomes permanent companion. "You live with the constant fear that something will go wrong tomorrow, that everything could be taken away. You wake up with this thought every day because you have no backing. You are walking on a thin margin."

"The world is divided between the haves and the have-nots — the cool and the uncool," he said. "I have always been the leader of the uncool group. The cool group may let you enter their world, give you a seat at the table, but they are not your friends. The margin for error is razor-thin. If you slip once, you are out. Their own people can make a hundred mistakes without consequence. I walk around with the awareness that I have no margin for error."

However, when it comes to his craft, Khan said he feels completely secure. "I carry no insecurity in my work."

On stand-up comics having been targeted for what they say, Khan said restraint was essential.

"You can't operate with the idea of 'I'll say whatever I feel like.' Every culture and country has its ethos and sensitivities. There are certain things you simply cannot say, and one must keep that in mind."

Drawing a parallel with global pop culture, he said, "If kids in India are willing to learn Korean because of content, I believe the day will come when people outside India will want to learn Hindi because of our conversations and stories."

Khan said "there is hegemony in language, classism around how one should speak."

"But the way you speak," he added, "comes from context — where you're from, which school you went to, which region you belong to. It's the same with Hindi."

Khan, who was in conversation with Anant Goenka, Executive Director, The Indian Express Group, and Devendra Pandey, Deputy Associate Editor, The Indian Express, kept the audience engaged through candid reflections, punctuated by humour that surfaced effortlessly through the conversation.

When asked whether he, as an artist at the pinnacle of success, feels insecure, Khan spoke at length about class, inheritance and the absence of safety nets. "I pay a lot of attention to people who come from generational wealth, or from families that have been in the same profession for two or three generations, or even royal families," he said. "I respect them a lot, because they have a hand to hold, and we don't."

"No matter how tall a building we construct, our foundation is fragile," he continued. "I was supposed to be a music teacher in some school, and yet I'm standing here. No matter how much I prepare myself or reassure myself, I know my foundation is weak. I don't have that training, that inheritance of

Trump suspends green card lottery programme

Washington, December 19

PRESIDENT DONALD TRUMP has suspended the green card lottery programme that allowed the suspect in the Brown University and MIT shootings to come to the United States.

Homeland Security Secretary Kristi Noem said in a post on the social platform X that, at Trump's direction, she is ordering the United States Citizenship and Immigration Services to pause the programme.

"This heinous individual should never have been allowed in our country," she said of the suspect, Portuguese national Claudio Neves Valente.

Case studies of popular air purification systems installed in Delhi's top schools claim significant success in combating this situation. This clean air obviously has a cost.

Neves Valente had studied at Brown on a student visa begin-

It was not immediately clear where he was between taking a leave of absence from the school in 2001 and getting the visa in 2017. The diversity visa programme makes up to 50,000 green cards available each year by lottery to people from countries that are little represented in the US, many of them in Africa. The lottery was created by Congress, and the move is almost certain to invite legal challenges.

Nearly 20 million people applied for the 2025 visa lottery, with over 131,000 selected when including spouses with the winners. After winning, they must undergo vetting to win admission to the United States. Portuguese citizens won only 38 slots. Lottery winners are invited to apply for a green card. They are interviewed at consulates and subject to the same requirements and vetting as other green-card applicants.

Trump has long opposed the diversity visa lottery. Noem's announcement is the latest example of using tragedy to advance immigration policy goals. After an Afghan man was identified as the gunman in a fatal attack on National Guard members in November.
