Opinion, Insight Out

A dawn of third globalisation?

This could be an era where geo-political issues are a precondition for cross-border integration

The dawn of globalisation ended in 1914. The next globalisation, which took off from the early 1970s, is the foundation of the global economy as we know it today. It was a period of unprecedented growth and integration, driven by technological advances and the liberalisation of trade and investment.

Today, we are witnessing a new dawn of globalisation, one that is being shaped by a different set of forces. This new globalisation is being driven by a combination of technological innovation, the rise of emerging markets, and the need for a more inclusive and sustainable world.
