Tewari rakes up troop movement row, Congress rebuts his claim

New Delhi, Jan 10

Congress leader Manish Tewari has termed as "unfortunate but true" a media report suggesting a coup attempt by General V K Singh

REIGNITING the 2012 troop movement row, Congress leader Manish Tewari has termed as "unfortunate but true" a media report suggesting a coup attempt by General V K Singh, provoking a strong rebuttal by his own party and derisive denial by the former army chief.

The Bharatiya Janata Party (BJP) questioned the timing of the former Union minister's claim, but the latter stood firm on what he had said.

Replying to a question at a book release function here on Saturday, Tewari virtually dug out the nearly four-year-old controversy from its grave, saying, "At that point of time I used to serve in the Standing Committee on Defence. And it's unfortunate but the story was true. Story was correct."

Tewari, who was minister of state for information and broadcasting in the UPA government between October 2012 and May 2014, said, "I am not getting into an argument. All I am saying is that to the best of my knowledge that story was correct". The Congress leader was asked about media coverage of issues pertaining to defence forces as in the case of the The Indian Express report on April 4, 2012, titled "The January night Raisina Hill was spooked: Two key Army units moved towards Delhi without notifying Govt."

V K Singh, now minister of state for external affairs, dismissed Tewari's allegation saying it has come from a "person who has no work these days".

"He has no work these days. He should be asked to read my book which reveals everything (on the issue)," Singh said. An embarrassed Congress, which had rejected the report when the controversy had erupted for the first time, dismissed Tewari's claim.

"I am again clarifying there is absolutely no truth in it (claims about troop movement in 2012). My colleague was neither a member of the Cabinet Committee on Security, nor any relevant decision making body," Congress spokesman Abhishek Singhvi said, adding some troop movements are necessary. "Inbuilt and inevitable part of the defence mechanism".

"It was inappropriate, unnecessary and completely wrong to suggest that there was any truth in those allegations when made," he said. Singhvi also warned Tewari against not commenting on things he is not authorised to speak about.

"I wish to reiterate that and wish to request and advice on behalf of Congress party that such remarks and observations in respect to which he is neither the authorised spokesperson of the party nor the spokesperson on foreign and defence affairs, nor privy to any of the relevant committee or decision-making body should have been and should be in the future completely avoided," he said. "We on behalf of Congress very clearly and categorically want to deny this report," another party spokesperson P C Chacko said.

Isolated in his own party over his claim, Tewari said, "Whatever I said yesterday, I have nothing more to add or subtract." According to The Indian Express report, central intelligence agencies had reported that on the night of January 16, 2012 there was an unexpected—and non-notified—movement by a key military unit from mechanised infantry based in Hisar in the direction of the capital. On the same night, another unit—identified as a large element of the 50th Para Brigade based at Agra—had also been moved towards Delhi, according to the newspaper report.

It was on January 16, 2012 that Singh had approached the Supreme Court regarding the controversy over his date of birth, an issue which saw him locked in a bitter confrontation with the UPA government.

Questioning the timing of Tewari's remarks, the BJP demanded a statement from former prime minister Manmohan Singh and ex-defence minister A K Antony on the issue. PTI

Will continue to fight against alleged graft in DDCA: Kirti

Kochi, Jan 10: Suspended BJP MP Kirti Azad on Sunday said he will continue to fight against alleged corruption in DDCA and that nobody can deter him from this campaign, a day after the cricket body filed defamation suits against him and Delhi chief minister Arvind Kejriwal.

Unfazed by BJP's disciplinary action against him, Azad also continued his attack against Finance Minister Arun Jaitley on the Delhi and District Cricket Association (DDCA) corruption issue. Reiterating his corruption charges against the cricket body, Azad accused it of "cost escalation without proof" in renovating Delhi's Feroz Shah Kotla stadium in 2008. Azad also said he has sought time from Prime Minister Narendra Modi to explain the case to him.

He was speaking at a meet-the-press programme organised by the Ernakulam Press Clubhere.

Responding to the defamation suit filed against him by DDCA, Azad said he was "grateful" to all those who filed a case against him and warned "there will be more (evidences against corruption) coming out one after the other". "If you want to do PhD in corruption, go to DDCA, you will get your degree in one month," Azad said.

Azad said he would honour whatever decision BJP takes in his case. "But nobody can deter me. I am the son of a freedom fighter. Nobody can deter me from fighting against corruption. I shall do that till the last drop of my blood or breath. It is for the future of our children and we should be together fighting for the good cause," he said.

Suspended Bharatiya Janata Party MP Kirti Azad during a press conference in Kochi on Sunday. PTI

He alleged that politicians of both NDA and UPA are together when it comes to corruption in BCCI.

"All of them, whether it is from my party or from the other party...ruling or opposition, they were all together... united in corruption. So you have a UPA and NDA...in BCCI you have a United Alliance-UA," Azad said.

He also expressed doubts about fairness in a CBI probe into alleged corruption in DDCA.

"₹141 crore spent on the stadium and still counting. Except the initial ₹25 crore approval by the executive committee for allowing contract to EPIL, no proof of cost escalation is available on record. If it all they had changed the building plan, it should have been approved. If this is not corruption, what is it?," Azad said.

He alleged that no further approvals of any cost escalations were written in the minutes of the DDCA executive committee meeting.

"Subsequently, in December, 2012, the executive committee seems to have ratified all expenditure relating to the stadium," the cricketer turned politician said. DDCA had on Saturday filed defamation suits in Delhi High Court against Kejriwal and Azad for allegedly making defamatory remarks against it on its functioning and finances.

BJP suspended Azad after he levelled charges of corruption in the DDCA, at a time Jaitley headed the body.

When questioned about BJP's action against him, Azad asserted that he has nothing to say against the senior BJP leader.

"All I can say is that we kept him informed through 200 letters, 500 emails...I have run from pillar to post...then I reached on the conclusion... It is monumental apathy phenomenal incompetence," he said, adding, it was like when Rome was burning. Nero and his associates were fiddling. PTI

As Britain courts Beijing, golf club rues Chinese takeover

London, Jan 10: London has been cosying up to Beijing in recent years in the hope of attracting Chinese investment, but in one leafy corner of England the love-in has turned to acrimony. Long-time members of Wentworth, a hallowed golf club in the affluent county of Surrey just west of London, accuse the new Chinese owners of using an eye-watering fee hike to get rid of them and turn the club into a preserve of the global ultra-rich.

The dispute has caused diplomatic ripples, with interventions from Britain's Foreign Secretary Philip Hammond, who represents the local area in parliament, and from the Chinese embassy in London. At issue is a plan by Beijing-based property and investment firm Reignwood Group, which bought Wentworth in 2014, that would require members to pay 100,000 pounds ($146,000) to remain part of the club and double maximum annual fees to 18,000 pounds.

"My own personal feeling is that they don't want us," said Michael Fleming, a local dental surgeon and Wentworth member for 28 years who has just ended a term as club captain. As for many members, the club has been central to his family's social life. The club says it plans to invest an initial 20 million pounds to improve facilities, with 10 million being spent in the next two years, as it pursues its vision to make Wentworth "the world's premier private golf and country club".

"We are absolutely clear on the important rule the club plays within the community and we know that it has generated multiple friendships over the years. We very much want this to continue," it told Reuters in an emailed response to questions.

Home to three 18-hole courses and to a striking crenellated clubhouse, Wentworth is famed throughout the golfing world for an old association with the Ryder Cup and as the venue for the annual BMW PGA Championship on the European Tour. It has about 4,500 members, mostly wealthy locals with a smattering of British TV celebrities and professional sportspeople like former England cricketer Kevin Pietersen.

"Like a morgue"

Fleming said he expected about 90 percent of members to leave the club if Reignwood's changes come into force as planned in April 2017, and a significant number had already left.

One member of 18 years, who did not wish to give his name because he did not want public attention, said Wentworth was already exclusive by most people's standards and he could not fathom what Reignwood were trying to achieve.

"If they do have this exclusive membership, the club is going to be like a morgue. There will be nobody there. One of the essential elements of a decent club is it has a certain amount of buzz about it," he said. In December, Fleming delivered a petition signed by over 500 Wentworth members to the Chinese embassy in London. In a response seen by Reuters, embassy official Jin Xu wrote that Reignwood had "established itself as a responsible investor in the UK", concluding that "the group has assured me that their plans for Wentworth Club will serve the long-term interest of its members and local community".

But Hammond, writing in his capacity as the area's member of parliament, described Reignwood's plans as "very disappointing" in a letter to a club member. Hammond has met twice with disgruntled Wentworth members and once with representatives of Reignwood to discuss the dispute.

"It is clear to me that a solution needs to be found... which preserves the great history of the club, delivers important new investment and retains the club's position as a great UK sporting institution," Hammond has said in a statement.

The great British sell-off

In China itself, golf is frowned upon as a symbol of Western values by the ruling Communist Party. In October, the party banned its 88 million members from golf club membership.

This has fuelled theories among the Wentworth community about what could lie behind Reignwood's plans for their club, with some speculating that it would become a place for party cadres to enjoy a discreet round of golf during their travels.

Though confined to a small and well-heeled community, the conflict at Wentworth feeds into a wider debate in Britain over perceptions that prime assets are being sold off to foreigners who may not always have local interests at heart.

Concern is range from absentee Asian landlords snapping up London properties while residents face a housing shortage, to a perceived loss of national prestige and control as foreign firms take over storied British brands.

China is at the heart of the debate, with government critics voicing concerns over a plan to build a nuclear power station reliant on French technical expertise and Chinese money.

A Chinese firm owns the London Taxi Company, maker of the capital's distinctive black cabs, and during a pomp-laden visit to London by President Xi Jinping in October it emerged that a Chinese retailer would take over world-famous toy store Hamleys. At Wentworth, the dispute over what Reignwood euphemistically calls "the new membership structure" has fuelled strong anti-Chinese sentiment. Reuters
