Host of issues delaying publication of draft data protection rules

SOUMYARENDRA BARIK
New Delhi, November 10

BEHIND THE SEEMING delay in the publication of the draft rules for data protection is the government's attempts at getting its own house in order. A number of its internal discussions have centred on whether some of the institutions it controls — schools, colleges and hospitals — would be ready to comply with the law, or need a longer timeframe, The Indian Express has learnt.

The Digital Personal Data Protection Act, 2023 was enacted last August, but is yet to be made operational as subordinate legislation — at least 25 rules — necessary to add contours to the law are awaited, meaning that the law has not come into force more than a year since it received the President's assent.

"There are so many public colleges and hospitals that are in far flung areas, and many of them are operating on rudimentary technology. But, they do handle a lot of personal data on a daily basis. We have to carefully accommodate these institutions. We discussed a lot on these accounts while framing the rules," a senior government official said, requesting anonymity.

The data protection Act has an exemption clause for the government and its agencies, however, it is unlikely that it could be used for institutions like colleges and hospitals.

The IT ministry did not respond to a request for comment. There are other things that have held up the rules as well. For instance, the law said that entities that deal with the personal data of children — individuals below the age of 18 — would have to seek consent for processing their data from their parents or guardians. However, the government soon realised that it could be difficult to pre-script a particular mechanism or technological intervention to gather such consent, and is understood to have given up on the idea.

Now, the IT Ministry is expected to leave it to the discretion of the companies on how they want to seek consent under the upcoming data protection rules. The law has received pushback from the civil society, and opposition.

The Niti Aayog, the government's main think tank, has also criticised some provisions in the law that could potentially dilute the Right to Information (RTI) Act, The Indian Express had earlier reported.

Another major point of contention has been the wide-ranging exemptions that the law offers to the government's agencies. According to Section 17 (2) (a) of the data protection law, "The provisions of this Act shall not apply in respect of the processing of personal data — by such instrumental data of the State as the Central Government may notify, in the interests of sovereignty and integrity of India, security of the State, friendly relations with foreign States, maintenance of public order or preventing incitement to any cognizable offence relating to any of these..."

The law requires companies to gather personal data of users through a consent-based mechanism, even as it allows some relaxations to that end for certain "legitimate uses". The penalty for not being able to take enough safeguards for preventing a data breach could go as high as ₹250 crore.

Bankers to get a shield against probe agencies

ACCORDINGLY, THE Central Vigilance Commission set up the Advisory Board for Banking and Financial Frauds (ABFF) to vet corruption cases before prosecution is sanctioned. The ABFF examines all bank fraud cases of ₹3 crore and above involving officers in the rank of assistant general manager and above.

However, there have been cases when senior bankers face police arrest without sanction, both serving and retired, giving rise to concerns. Former SBI chairman Pratip Chaudhuri, for instance, was arrested by the Rajasthan Police in a loan scam case in 2021. In 2018, the Maharashtra Police had arrested the CEO and MD of the Bank of Maharashtra.

"Unless and until there is a clear-cut involvement of senior officers in a case, the matter should not be referred to CBI. How it will be done, needs to be worked out," a senior official said, without elaborating.

Also, public sector banks want protection for their top management on the lines of the National Bank for Financing Infrastructure and Development (NaBFID), which was set up through an Act in 2021.

The competent authority will be the Union government if the offence is alleged to have been committed by the chairperson or other directors of NaBFID. The protection for the NaBFID top brass was aimed at providing a conducive environment to the proposed development financial institution for infrastructure financing.

"This will help in faster decision-making in loan processes to improve credit climate and address the fear of bankers of harassment post-retirement," the official said.

After the gross non-performing assets (GNPA) of PSBs rose to a record 14.5% as of March 2016, the government took a slew of measures such as strengthening the banking regulatory framework, amending the recovery laws, enacting comprehensive insolvency and bankruptcy legislation, and establishing a public sector asset reconstruction company. These measures have nursed the credit sector back to sound health, and the GNPA ratio shrank to 2.8% in March 2024.

Brisk start to PM Internship Scheme

OUT OF THIS, ₹500 will be contributed by the participating companies subject to attendance and conduct of the intern. The remaining ₹4,500 will be provided by the government via direct benefit transfer to an intern's Aadhaar-seeded bank account.

It is envisaged that top 500 companies — based on their average corporate social responsibility (CSR) expenditure over the last three years — would participate in the scheme voluntarily. However, other companies, banks or financial institutions can also participate with approval from the MCA, especially if they represent under-represented sectors. In addition, if a participating company cannot provide internship opportunities directly, it can collaborate with companies in its forward and backward supply chains (such as suppliers, customers, vendors) to provide such opportunities.

The scheme allows for the firms to offset the training and administrative costs associated with the scheme from their CSR funds. Announced in the Union Budget for 2024-25, the scheme kicked off on October 3.

COP29 begins today under Trump shadow

AMERICA'S GREAT UTILITY within the climate architecture is also its unmatched ability to mobilise global financial resources. Its role is crucial to the success of COP29. Trump has not made any remarks on climate change after his election, but his known scepticism, and past record, hangs heavy over the talks here.

The finance agreement that Baku is trying to stitch together is not just about a ten-fold increase in the quantum of financial flows — from US$ 100 billion each year that developed countries are currently obligated to raise to at least a trillion dollars a year from 2026. That is just the headline statement. Baku is supposed to deliver a comprehensive package on finance that is expected to result in greater transparency and better access to countries that need it the most.

"COP29 should not only focus on raising the quantum of climate finance but also improving its quality. Climate finance must be consistent, convenient, catalytic, and credible. No developed country has delivered 100% of its pledged climate finance. As we debate the New Collective Quantified Goal, the question is not just how much is needed, but how reliably it will be delivered," Arunabha Ghosh, CEO of Delhi-based Council on Energy, Environment and Water, said.
