Stepping stone deal?

A carefully balanced pact with the UK could set the tone and template for India's future free-trade agreements

Prime Minister Narendra Modi and his UK counterpart Keir Starmer shake hands after the trade deal was signed in Chequers, England, on July 24. Seen also are Commerce and Industry Minister Piyush Goyal (extreme right) and UK's Secretary of State for Business and Trade Jonathan Reynolds

The recently signed trade pact with the United Kingdom (UK) will act as a crucial "stepping stone" and a benchmark for the "high-quality" agreements India intends to pursue, Commerce and Industry Minister Piyush Goyal has said. Calling it a "win-win" for both nations, Goyal argued that the deal would also enhance India's credibility in the global trade arena.

The India-UK Comprehensive Economic and Trade Agreement (CETA), signed on July 24 after three-and-a-half years of negotiations, signals that India is ready to face competition and shed its reputation as a high-tariff economy — a "tariff king", as the United States (US) has often labelled it. The pact will cut India's applied trade-weighted average tariff on goods imports from the UK from 15 per cent to 3 per cent.

Balancing red lines

Experts point out that the deal was possible only because both sides respected each other's sensitivities and regulatory autonomy.

For the first time, India agreed to reduce tariffs on automobiles, albeit in a phased manner. The sector had been one of the most contentious points in negotiations. Indian negotiators eventually crafted a compromise: small cars remain protected, while larger vehicles face gradual tariff reductions, opening the segment to greater competition.

Alcoholic beverages, another sticking point, saw a similar approach. India agreed to phase duty cuts on whisky, brandy, rum, vodka, tequila and ciders.

Agriculture, however, remained largely off the table. Dairy products, cereals such as wheat, rice, maize and millets, and key edible oils and oilseeds were excluded from tariff cuts. On the UK side, sensitive items such as milled rice, sugar, pork, chicken and eggs also remained protected.

Mobility, a politically sensitive issue in Britain, was addressed by formalising existing visa rules for short-term and temporary business travel, offering certainty to businesses without intro-

Anatomy of a pact

- India-UK merchandise trade: About $23 billion
- India-UK services trade: About $33 billion
- Trade negotiations started in January 2022, ended in May 2025
- India-UK Comprehensive Economic and Trade Agreement signed on July 24, 2025
- Agreement to come into effect after British Parliament's approval. India's Union Cabinet has already given its approval

Gains for India

- 100% duty-free market access for exports, covering 99% of UK tariff lines
- Zero-duty concessions across the board, with zero-duty tariff rate quota-based concessions on electric vehicles
- All zero-duty concessions will kick in the day the agreement comes into force
- India's major exports — from labour-intensive sectors such as textiles, gems & jewellery, leather and footwear, organic chemical, artisanal products and ceramics to high-value goods like auto parts, machinery, pharma, and processed foods — will gain sizeably from zero-duty access
- Duty-free for nearly all Indian agri-exports, with a few limited exceptions like pork, chicken, eggs, rice, and sugar, will benefit Indian farmers and agri-entrepreneurs
- A double convention contribution signed between both countries will ensure that workers do not end up paying double contributions towards their social security. This will benefit over 75,000 Indian workers and over 900 employers. Industry estimates suggest current annual savings of more than $500 million ducing new concessions. According to Agneshwar Sen, trade policy leader at EY India, the negotiation demonstrated India's willingness to cross its "red lines" to deliver more sophisticated free trade agreements (FTAs) with developed economies. While offering market access to the UK, India has gained reciprocal market access while protecting domestic sensitivities, Sen said.

EU and others, the UK FTA acts as a template for structuring future agreements that blend goods and services trade, professional mobility, and progressive chapters. Its innovative features set a new benchmark, enhancing India's credibility and negotiating strength globally," Sen said.

Implications for other partners

According to the Global Trade Research Initiative, a Delhi-based think-tank, this is the first time India has granted tariff concessions on automobiles under any FTA — a move likely to trigger similar demands from Japan, the EU, South Korea and the US.

However, a deal with the US may prove far more difficult. Washington has turned away from global trade frameworks, and tensions in the geopolitical arena complicate negotiations. Even so, India has signalled that it will continue to draw firm red lines, particularly on agriculture and automobile market access.

The EU talks, too, are expected to be especially challenging. Its member states are major exporters of cars, wines, spirits and agricultural products.

Unlike the UK, which has limited automobile exports to India, the EU represents a much larger auto-exporting bloc, said Jayant Dasgupta, India's former ambassador to the World Trade

A more comprehensive pact

The agreement that India and the UK — the world's fourth and six largest economies, respectively — have signed goes beyond goods and services. It is the most comprehensive trade pact India has ever signed, covering new-age issues such as sustainability, labour standards, digital trade, competition and consumer protection policy, telecommunications, subsidies, and anti-corruption measures.

The deal's timing is significant. With global trade disrupted by geopolitical tensions and trade wars fuelled by US protectionism, bilateral agreements are increasingly shaping the world trade order. India is also trying to sign FTAs with the US, while accelerating and reviewing agreements with the European Union (EU), Latin American, West Asia, and the Asian nations.

"As India pursues talks with the US,
