ENERGY & DEFENCE COOPERATION DISCUSSED

Rubio visits central Europe to bolster ties

REUTERS
Budapest, February 15

US SECRETARY OF State Marco Rubio vowed to deepen cooperation with central Europe on Sunday as he kicked off a trip to Slovakia and Hungary, whose conservative leaders have warm ties with President Donald Trump.

In Slovakia, which, like Hungary, relies on Russian oil and gas and has uneasy relations with the rest of the European Union, Rubio discussed energy and defence with Prime Minister Robert Fico and President Peter Pellegrini.

It was the first visit in seven years by a US secretary of state to the country of 5.5 million people that borders Ukraine.

"Under President Trump, this administration is going to make not just Slovakia but central Europe a key component of how we engage the continent and the world," Rubio said.

"We are not just going to engage in meetings and pleasantries, but in concrete actions that we will take together in ways that are beneficial to your people and our people."

On Saturday Rubio, who is also Trump's national security adviser, delivered a message of unity at the Munich Security Conference while maintaining the administration's criticism of Europe following a scarring year for Transatlantic ties.

Trump's criticism of Europe, imposition of tariffs on EU countries and his ambition to acquire Greenland from fellow NATO Denmark have prompted Western European leaders to increasingly look at carving an independent path.

"We expect every country in the world to act in their national interest. That is what countries are supposed to do," Rubio said.

"When our national interests are aligned... this is an extraordinary opportunity for cooperation and partnership."

Fico, who has said the European Union is in "deep crisis", visited Trump last month in Florida and showered the Republican president with praise, saying he would bring peace.

Both Fico and Hungarian Prime Minister Viktor Orban, whom Rubio will meet on Monday in the second leg of his trip, have been accused by EU institutions of weakening the judiciary, media and anti-corruption enforcement.

Iran is pursuing nuclear deal with US, says official

REUTERS

IRAN IS PURSUING a nuclear agreement with the US that delivers economic benefits for both sides, an Iranian diplomat was reported as saying on Sunday, days before a second round of talks between Tehran and Washington.

Iran and the US renewed negotiations earlier this month to tackle their decades-long dispute over Tehran's nuclear programme and avert a new military confrontation. The US has dispatched a second aircraft carrier to the region and is preparing for the possibility of a sustained military campaign if the talks do not succeed, U.S. officials have told Reuters.

US Secretary of State Marco Rubio, speaking at a news conference in Bratislava, said President Donald Trump had made it clear that he would prefer diplomacy and a negotiated settlement, while making clear that that may not happen. "No one's ever been able to do a successful deal with Iran but we're going to try."

Iran has threatened to strike US bases in the Middle East if it is attacked by US forces, but on Sunday took a conciliatory line.

Israeli airstrikes kill 11 in Gaza

ISRAEL FIRED AIRSTRIKES across the Gaza Strip on Sunday, killing at least 11 Palestinians, Palestinian officials said, in what the military called a response to ceasefire violations by Palestinian militant group Hamas.

Gaza medics said an Israeli airstrike on a tent encampment housing displaced families killed at least four people, while health officials said another strike killed five in Khan Younis in the south and another person was shot dead in the north.

Airstrikes also targeted what was thought to be a commander of the Islamic Jihad group, an ally of Hamas, in the Tel Al-Hawa neighbourhood in Gaza City.

Xi touts China's market as key to boost local demand

BLOOMBERG
February 15

XI JINPING CALLED for anchoring economic growth around domestic demand as its "main driver" in a speech delivered by the Chinese president at a key policy meeting late last year and released on Sunday.

China should "coordinate efforts to boost consumption and expand investment, and fully leverage the advantages of China's super-large-scale market," according to Xi's remarks published on the website of Qjushi, the Communist Party's flagship journal. "We must focus on improving people's livelihoods and boosting future growth, stabilizing investment."

The blueprint laid out by Xi made clear China is bracing for more uncertainty abroad, after amassing a record trade surplus despite the tariff war with the US.

The address was made in December at the Central Economic Work Conference, which sets economic policy priorities for the coming year.

The language illustrates Beijing's growing resolve to promote consumption among China's 1.4 billion people, as countries around the world increasingly push back against its cheap goods that pose a threat to their local industries. Top officials like Vice Premier

GROWTH DRIVER

■ Blueprint laid out by Xi made it clear that China is bracing for more uncertainty abroad

XI JINPING,
CHINESE PRESIDENT

China should coordinate efforts to boost consumption, expand investment

He Lifeng have also raised the prospect of greater access to China's domestic market to reduce imbalances in trade.

China's economy expanded 5% last year, with record exports compensating for cooling private consumption at home and an unprecedented drop in investment. That lopsided growth model will probably become harder to sustain in an era of rising protectionism across the world.

With trade and geopolitical risks on the rise, China is looking to build up its consumer sector into a key engine of the economy while continuing to lean on emerging new industries for growth.

"We will remain committed to innovation-driven development and accelerate the cultivation and strengthening of new growth drivers," Xi said.

As part of an effort to support demand, Xi used his speech to champion plans to increase the incomes and basic pensions of rural and urban residents and boost the proportion of investment projects linked to people's livelihoods.

Other priorities laid out in his speech include advancing high-quality development, continuing to open up the economy and promoting China's green transition. The president also appealed to officials to curb cutthroat competition among companies — a campaign dubbed "anti-involution" — and stabilise the property market.

Petrol triples share in...

CONSUMPTION HAS CLIMBED to more than 31 million tonne, driven by sustained policy push toward clean cooking fuel access across rural and semi-urban India.

The flip side of this rise is the collapse of superior kerosene oil (SKO). Once the mainstay of India's refining output -- with around 11% share in 2001 and ranking as high as second a few years earlier -- kerosene has now shrunk to just about 0.2% of total demand. Consumption has fallen to negligible levels, effectively marking the end of an era where kerosene defined household energy use.

Industrial fuel use has also been reconfigured

Fuel oil, which once held a 13% share and ranked second in the basket, has slipped to just about 2.6% today. The decline has been driven by tighter emission norms and the shift towards natural gas and cleaner industrial fuels.

In contrast, petroleum coke has staged a striking rise. From less than 0.5% share two decades ago, petcoke now commands about 9% of the basket, ranking fourth. Its ascent accelerated after 2010 when it became the preferred fuel in the cement industry. Although environmental curbs have moderated growth, petcoke remains a significant industrial fuel.

Naphtha, once third in rank with nearly 12% share, has slipped to fifth at under 5%. The diversion of refinery streams towards petrol production has squeezed naphtha volumes.

However, as refiners pivot towards petrochemical integration, naphtha's role as feedstock is expected to gain renewed importance.

Smaller fuels such as bitumen, lubricants and specialty solvents have maintained steady shares, reflecting niche industrial and infrastructure demand.

"The next 25 years will see more churning of the basket and increasing petrochemical intensity in refineries. The rise of CNG and EVs will alter transport fuel shares, but oil is here to stay in various forms," said Pankaj Sharma, former additional director, PPAC.

For refiners, the message from the numbers is clear: the future is not just about producing more diesel. It is about balancing a rapidly evolving fuel mix -- where transport fuels, petrochemicals, cleaner household energy and industrial inputs will increasingly compete for refinery configuration and capital.

India's oil story, in short, is no longer just about growth. It is about transformation within growth.

Valuations moderate, but...

SOUTH KOREA HAS been the standout, delivering spectacular returns of 11.4%.

Concerns that artificial intelligence (AI) could disrupt the business models of IT majors, coupled with modest Q3FY27 earnings that analysts say do not justify current valuations, have triggered bouts of profit-taking.

This comes despite India clinching a trade deal with the EU and an interim agreement with the US.

For a sample of two dozen large companies with turnover exceeding ₹20,000 crore, net sales rose just 6.6% year-on-year in the December quarter. Benign inflation helped contain costs, lifting operating profits by 8.3%.

While mid- and small-cap firms have performed better, most heavyweights have delivered results broadly in line with expectations.

In the week ended February 13, the Sensex fell 1.1% and the Nifty declined 0.9%, reversing gains sparked by the India-US interim trade pact.

That said, FPIs have turned buyers in February, purchasing around ₹19,675 crore worth of equities so far.

The inflows follow three consecutive months of selling, with outflows of ₹35,962 crore in January, ₹22,611 crore in December and ₹3,765 crore in November, according to depository data.

Concerns that AI could disrupt business models of IT majors have triggered bouts of profit-taking

'Summit will position AI as a development tool'

There's a view that faster adoption or diffusion of technology decides which nations are winners in the technological race rather than countries which are innovators of tech. Your views and what's India's approach?

Historically, countries that adopted transformative technologies early, whether industrial machinery, Internet infrastructure or mobile connectivity, experienced exponential gains in productivity, innovation, and global competitiveness. Rapid technology adoption is central to achieving the goal of a Viksit Bharat by 2047, because technology compresses decades of development into a few years. For India, the timing is particularly strategic. We have three structural advantages. First, digital public infrastructure (DPI) that already connects over a billion citizens. Second, an end-to-end 5G stack enabling low-latency AI-driven applications. And third, a large tech-savvy and digitally adaptive population. By using AI on top of these foundations, its adoption in India will be faster and more inclusive.

How will the government ensure regulatory predictability while addressing issues related to technological innovations and their applications?

We are building frameworks around responsible AI, transparency, and ethical deployment. Our philosophy is enabling regulation, not over-regulation. We believe innovation and safety are complementary.

Over the next 12 to 18 months, what milestones should industry and citizens track to assess India's AI strategy?

Our aim is to become a provider of AI services. This is backed by coordinated policy across all five layers of the India AI stack. Through IndiaAI mission, we are creating a common compute infrastructure and developing indigenous foundational AI models. These models are showing good progress and are meeting global benchmarks. At the same time, the India Semiconductor Mission is strengthening domestic hardware capacity to support long-term AI growth. Four out of the ten semiconductor plants approved under ISM have already begun pilot production. Commercial production will begin this year. We have a clear roadmap for moving from mature to advanced nodes.

What will be India's message to the world through this Summit?

India believes that AI should be used for solving global problems like climate change; finding new solutions for better healthcare; and keeping the world safe from the harmful impacts of AI.

Countries should move from competing on building bigger models to working together for deploying AI, to solve real world problems. India Our aim is to make AI a tool for economic growth, social inclusion and environmental sustainability.

India to script AI playbook...

BOARDROOMS ARE BUZZING, investors are jittery and employees are anxious about what agentic AI could mean for white-collar work.

And yet, inside the summit venue, the mood is expected to be one of ambition rather than alarm.

From OpenAI's Sam Altman to Anthropic's Dario Amodei and Google's Sundar Pichai, the world's most powerful AI architects will share the stage with policymakers and 20 heads of state, including French President Emmanuel Macron and his Brazilian counterpart Lula da Silva, to debate safety, regulation, sustainability and the future of work -- even as India rolls out its own AI playbook.

The Delhi summit builds on earlier editions in the UK, South Korea and France, but this time the stakes feel sharper.

Delegates will grapple with uncomfortable but urgent questions: How far can productivity be stretched? Which use cases will scale fastest? How soon can agentic AI be embedded into legacy IT systems to generate real economic value? And can the planet sustain AI's voracious appetite for power and water?

For host India, the event is both showcase and signal. New Delhi wants to be seen not merely as a supplier of data to train global models, but as a serious participant across the AI stack -- applications, models, chipsets, infrastructure and even energy.

Announcements of fresh capital commitments are expected to cross $40 billion.

Officials suggest the country's GPU capacity -- currently about 40,000 -- could double or even triple in short order.

Microsoft has already pledged $17.5 billion to scale up AI and cloud infrastructure in India; Google has committed $15 billion; Amazon has promised significant investments of its own.

The scale of global spending underscores the moment. The four hyperscalers -- Microsoft, Amazon, Google and Meta Platforms -- together spent $376 billion in 2025, with capex projected to surge 65% to $620 billion in 2026.

AI is no longer an experiment; it is a capital-intensive arms race.

India hopes to carve its niche within this race. Indigenous initiatives such as Sarvam and BharatGen are likely to command attention, alongside a clutch of startups showcasing large language models (LLMs) and small language models (SLMs) tailored to Indian languages and contexts.

For long, limited access to compute has stalled the country's ambitions around foundational models.

The summit could mark a turning point if funding and infrastructure commitments materialise.

Indian IT outsourcing majors, under pressure from slowing traditional demand and AI-driven automation, are expected to outline how they plan to re-jig their business models. The key question: which layers of the AI value chain will they play in -- and how quickly can they pivot?

There is also a geopolitical undertone. With China effectively out of bounds for US Big Tech, India has emerged as a strategic frontier. OpenAI and Google are offering AI assistants to Indian users at no cost, underscoring the market's importance. As Abhishek Singh, joint secretary at the ministry of electronics and information technology (MeitY), puts it: "Think of AI, think of India."

Experts say the wager is straightforward. If India can attract capital, it can build intellectual property.

But for every promise, there is a perturbation. The Microsoft AI chief's warning that most white-collar jobs could be automated within 18 months has amplified fears of widespread disruption. New jobs will be created, but enterprises have a narrow window to reinvent themselves. Delay could be costly.

The AI Impact Summit, therefore, is not just a technology jamboree. It is high-stakes reckoning with the forces reshaping markets, business models and labour.

Aminty of external affairs statement says the summit is anchored in three Sutras: People, Planet and Progress which define India's approach to cooperation on AI.
