Artemis II lifts off to take humans to satellite vicinity after 50 years; mission to open door for $127 billion lunar economy by 2050

SHINE JACOB
Chennai, 2 April

The Artemis II space mission was launched from Florida, United States, on Wednesday, sending four astronauts on a historic 10-day flyby journey around the moon.

"Flyby" is the journey of a spacecraft to record data.

This will mark the first entry of humans beyond the low-earth orbit in more than five decades.

The National Aeronautics and Space Administration (Nasa) said later in the day that it was part of a larger strategy to set up a "Moon Base".

The mission includes the first woman and first non-white to fly into cislunar space, the area between the earth's orbit and the moon.

The four astronauts are Reid Wiseman, Victor Glover, and Christina Koch from the United States; and Jeremy Hansen from the Canadian Space Agency.

The last time humans travelled beyond low-earth orbit was in December 1972 through Apollo 17.

Nasa's SLS (Space Launch System) rocket lifted off from Launch Pad 39B at the agency's Kennedy Space Center, Florida, at 6:35 pm on Wednesday, sending the four astronauts aboard the Orion spacecraft on a planned test flight around the moon and back.

According to industry sources, this will open up the lunar economy further by 2040, and will create business opportunities for startups and private companies in countries like India.

Based on a PwC estimate, revenues expected from lunar-surface activities between 2026 and 2050 are projected to be $93.9 billion-127 billion, scaling up sharply in the 2040s as commercial markets mature and mission frequency increases.

The mission is designed to test the Orion crew capsule and essential life support ahead of future Artemis missions, including the planned moon landing for Artemis IV in the 2020s.

"Artemis II is the start of something bigger than any one mission. It marks our return to the moon, not just to visit, but to eventually stay on our Moon Base, and lays the foundation for the next giant leaps ahead," said Nasa Administrator Jared Isaacman.

Cislunar leap

- First woman and person of colour set to enter cislunar space on historic mission
- Orion systems to be tested to support upcoming crewed moon landings
- Indian-origin scientists contribute across key areas of the Artemis programme
- Minor onboard glitch detected and resolved mid-flight by crew and ground teams the SLS rocket's upper stage fired to put Orion into an elliptical orbit around the earth.

A second planned burn by the stage will propel Orion, which the crew named "Integrity", into a high-earth orbit extending about 46,000 miles beyond the earth.

After the burn, Orion will separate from the stage, flying free on its own.

"This will be a huge boost for India, which is planning its manned mission to space soon and landing an Indian on the moon surface by 2040. This will help our startups and private players to find new markets," said Lieutenant General (Retd) A K Bhatt, director general, Indian Space Association (ISpA).

However, raising concerns, there were some faults with regard to the toilet of the Orion spacecraft. The Artemis II crew, working closely with mission control in Houston, was able to resolve this quickly.

Ahead of the apogee raise burn on April 1, the Artemis II crew reported a blinking fault light, and mission-control teams assessed the data and worked with the crew to troubleshoot and resolve the issue.

India connection

For the first time, there will be reportedly an Indian connection to one manned moon mission. Though no Indian-owned space company is on the Artemis prime contractor list, several Indian-born scientists are likely to be part of the mission at various stages.

They include Kavya K Manyapu from Hyderabad, who reportedly leads the development of exploration spacesuits for the Artemis programme within the Flight Operations Directorate at Nasa's Johnson Space Centre in Houston, Texas.

Based on a Nasa statement, its prime contractors — Aerojet Rocketdyne, Axiom Space, Bechtel, Blue Origin, Boeing, Amentum, Jacobs, Lockheed Martin, Maxar Space Systems, Northrop Grumman, and SpaceX — currently have more than 2,700 suppliers across 47 states, contributing to the lunar spaceport at the Kennedy Space Center.

During a planned multi-hour lunar flyby on Monday, April 6, the astronauts will take photographs and provide observations of the moon's surface as the first people to lay eyes on some areas of the far side.

Although the lunar far side will only be partially illuminated during the flyby, the conditions should create shadows that stretch across the surface, enhancing relief and revealing depth, ridges, slopes and crater rims that are often difficult to detect under full illumination. Crew observations and other human health scientific investigations during the mission, such as AVATAR, will inform science during future moon missions.

Following a successful lunar flyby, the astronauts will return to the earth and splash down in the Pacific Ocean.

Easter long weekend offers a pre-summer escape window

AKSHARA SRIVASTAVA
New Delhi, 2 April

The Easter long weekend is emerging as a key travel occasion for those seeking a quick break before the summer season sets in.

According to travel platform Pickyourtrail, the long weekend beginning with Good Friday is fast becoming a major getaway window. Bookings on the platform have risen 5-8 per cent year-on-year, pointing to a growing appetite for short, well-planned international trips.

Couples aged 28 to 32, primarily from metro cities, are driving this trend.

"This cohort is financially independent, experience-first in mindset, and increasingly prioritising shared travel moments over material spending — encouraging the rise of premium short-haul trips," the platform said.

On Booking.com, while Bengaluru and Mumbai remain the top-searched hubs due to ease of access, Rishikesh, Varanasi, and Ooty feature among the top five most-searched destinations.

Varanasi has recorded a 135 per cent spike in searches compared to last year, while heritage destinations such as Jaipur and Udaipur continue to

Demand underway

- Short international trips see 5-8% growth
- Young metro couples fuel premium travel demand
- Varanasi, hill stations record sharp search spikes
- Rates rise as occupancies surge, bookings tighten gain traction, with search increases of 75 per cent and 49 per cent, respectively.

"Seasonality is also playing a key role in shaping travel choices. As temperatures rise, travellers are increasingly gravitating towards cooler climates, driving demand for hill stations such as Mussoorie (78 per cent), Munnar (41 per cent), Varkala (39 per cent), Ooty (22 per cent), and Kodaikanal (20 per cent)," the platform added.

At hotels, this demand is pushing up occupancies and room rates.

"The Easter long weekend this year is seeing particularly strong momentum. We've observed a meaningful uptick in both enquiries and confirmed bookings across our portfolio, which are leisure-led destinations," said Amruda Nair, founder of Araiya Hotels & Resorts.

Several properties in the chain, such as Aalia Jungle Retreat & Spa, are already sold out, while those in Uttarakhand are emerging as front-runners. This is driven by a growing preference for nature-led, restorative whycation [purposeful, intentional journeys rather than just sightseeing] getaways rather than travel for its own sake, Nair added.

Room rates at the chain, driven by a dynamic pricing model, have risen by 10-12 per cent during high-demand long weekends starting Good Friday. At luxury villa rental firm StayVista, bookings have risen 35-45 per cent compared to a regular weekend baseline. "For key drive-to markets like Lonavala, Alibaug, Goa, and Coorg, the spike is even higher at 50-60 per cent, driven by early planning and group travel demand," said Amit Damani, cofounder of StayVista. He added that occupancies are expected to touch 90-95 per cent across top destinations, with premium and large villas already nearing sellout.

Damani also pointed out that short-haul destinations within driving distance of metro cities are seeing increased interest, aided by shorter planning cycles of a week to 10 days, compared to two to three weeks earlier.

This demand is leading to a 20-30 per cent increase in average nightly rates during long weekends. For high-demand properties and premium villas, rates can rise by as much as 35-40 per cent.

At the Fairmont Udaipur Palace, demand is also quickly filling up rooms. "The entire city is seeing a surge from places like Mumbai, Delhi, Gujarat and parts of South India. It has lifted occupancies across the city, and we are seeing the same trend," said Rajan Malhotra, director of sales and marketing at the property.

CBSE rolls out new curriculum with AI course

AUHONA MUKHERJEE
New Delhi, 2 April

The Central Board of Secondary Education (CBSE) on Thursday released its new curriculum, which will be rolled out over the next few years. The curriculum includes a compulsory third language from Class 6, a computational thinking (CT) and artificial intelligence (AI) course from Class 9, and optional advanced mathematics and science assessments in Class 10.

The overhaul will also make art education, physical education and wellbeing, vocational education, and interdisciplinary studies compulsory as part of the Board's transition to a new framework aligned with the National Education Policy 2020 and the National Curriculum Framework for School Education 2023. The CBSE has uploaded the new curricula on its website.

Speaking at the launch of the framework, CBSE Chairman Rahul Singh said the Board has begun preparing textbooks and curricular structures for the transition, with several reforms already being implemented for the cohort entering Class 9 this academic year.

"Textbooks for CT and AI for Class 9 are being readied, and are almost ready for implementation. We will introduce the textbooks for Class 9 next year for the 2027-28 academic year," Singh said. The revised curriculum will then extend to Class 10, while at the senior secondary level, it is likely to be introduced as two electives in Classes 11 and 12, added Singh.

Under the plan, CT and AI will become a compulsory subject in Class 9 from the 2027-28 session, with the first cohort appearing for board examinations in 2029.

A day before detailing the broader curriculum overhaul, the CBSE launched a new curriculum on CT and AI for Classes 3 to 8, marking the formal introduction of structured AI education in early schooling.
