Thick smoke billows from flooded Texas chemical plant

02:

It broke out at a chemical plant in Texas that was hit by Hurricane Harvey, sending a giant black smoke billowing into the sky. TV footage showed a fire at the Arkema chemical plant, northeast of Houston, where a volatile chemical leaked from a container, forming a cut power to organic peroxide plastics and other chemicals. Local TV evening showed a thick black smoke billowing from the plant. A worker at the plant said: "It's the reaction of the chemicals. We're expecting to have already evacuated the area has been evacuated and there's no people around." The first of the nine containers caught fire and burned for nine hours overnight Wednesday into Thursday. It forced the evacuation of hundreds of residents within 2.4 kilometers of the plant.

desert under Syrian government control between the towns of Humayma and al-Sukhnah. "The coalition will not condone Isis [IS] fighters moving further east to the Iraqi border," the coalition said in a statement.

"Relocating terrorists from one place to another, for someone else to deal with, is not a lasting solution," it added. There are some 300 IS militants on board the convoy, described by the coalition as "experienced fighters". However the coalition says it has not bombed them because women and children are present.

It says it has provided food and water to the convoy and has also - via Russia - offered suggestions to Syria on possible ways of rescuing the women and children. A tank, armed vehicles and other vehicles facilitating the relocation have, however, been targeted by coalition air strikes.

Political tensions as fresh vote approaches

As the election and screams rang out in her Nairobi neighborhood for the presidential election, Lucy Anyango stepped outdoors. The member of Kenya's Luo minority went to her home in Kikuyu, and walked Kariuki's two daughters to the school. The threats of rape and violence. Angry Luo were rampaging over the loss of their opposition candidate, Raila Odinga, who was a Kikuyu.

The next day, Kariuki thanked her friend in a heartfelt letter. "I be grateful," she wrote. "As I write this my eyes are full of tears. This madness ever stop?"

It has been asking for decades. The threat of further violence loomed as the opposition challenged the election's results. In shock, the Supreme Court nullified the vote as unconstitutional within 60 days. Celebrations, not protests, followed a new contest looms. "Let us be people of peace," the court's ruling.
