Coforge's $5 bn growth sprint hinges on big deals

Company bets on organic expansion and acquisitions

RAM PRASAD SAHU
Mumbai, 17 June

Mid-tier information technology (IT) major Coforge plans to double its revenue over the next four years. While its current revenue, including the Silicon Valley-based digital engineering firm Encora's acquisition, stands at $2.5 billion, the company is targeting the $5 billion mark by 2029-30 (FY30). This implies an annual growth rate of 19 per cent from 2025-26 (FY26) through FY30, with organic growth estimated at 15 per cent during the same period.

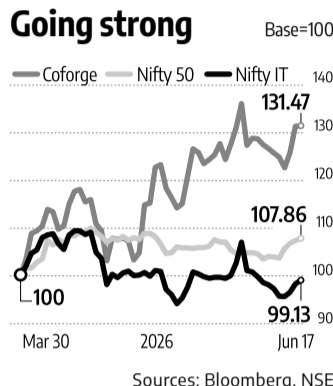

Though the company has executed well so far, the integration of the Encora acquisition, scaling up of large deals, and tapping artificial intelligence (AI)-led opportunities will be key to growth. The stock (trading at ₹1,465) has outperformed the Nifty IT, delivering a return of 31.5 per cent over the past three months. Gains from these levels will depend on the company's ability to deliver on its expressed goals.

The company expects growth going ahead to be driven by organic expansion and acquisitions. This would entail gaining a higher share of wallet, scaling up large accounts, sustaining large deal momentum, and deepening penetration among existing clients.

Its large deal wins offer strong revenue visibility. Large deals have increased from 11 in 2021-22 to 21 in FY26, while the 12-month executable order book expanded to $1.75 billion from $720 million over the same period. The management also highlighted that order intake has nearly doubled over the past four years.

Analysts Piyush Pandey and Heet Shah of Centrum Research said Coforge maintains a strong growth outlook, supported by a robust deal pipeline and a $1.75 billion executable order book (up 16.4 per cent year-on-year/Y-o-Y), with supplementary framework deals providing further upside.

The company also indicated that its profitability profile has improved on account of portfolio rationalisation, acquisition integration, and productivity initiatives, supporting margins at levels above historical averages. Operating profit margins in FY26 expanded to 18.6 per cent, 430 basis points (bps) higher Y-o-Y, supported by portfolio actions, AI-led productivity improvements, and integration benefits from acquisitions.

What should help improve margins are decisions to exit underperforming businesses. The company divested AdvantageGo (loss-making and cash-negative), leading to a 60-bp improvement in margins and a $10 million improvement in cash flows. It also exited its Indian government business, which had $50 million in annual revenue but low margins and adverse working capital, and the business will wind down from the first quarter (April-June/Q1) of 2026-27. However, these actions will lead to flat sequential organic growth in Q1, though performance may improve in the second quarter (July-September/Q2).

Analysts Abhishek Pathak and Keval Bhagat of Motilal Oswal Research believe Coforge's margin profile appears structurally stronger than historical levels. That said, continued investments in sales capabilities, AI assets, partnerships, and talent could mean that margin progression may not be linear, they added. The brokerage has a "buy" rating on the stock with a target price of ₹1,900, given the improving margin profile, strong deal wins, and consistent growth outperformance.

The company is also utilising AI solutions to drive growth across verticals and improve efficiencies. ICICI Securities pointed out that Coforge has rebuilt its offerings by embedding agentic AI across all its solutions. This, according to analysts at the brokerage, led by Ruchi Mukhija, is leading to AI deflation or cannibalisation of revenue but, at the same time, is lifting revenue in new areas such as AI-led application management services, technology modernisation, and AI-native product engineering. The brokerage has maintained a "buy" rating with a target price of ₹1,690.

Should you go for passive funds in smallcap space?

HIMALI PATEL

The launch of ICICI Prudential Nifty Smallcap 250 Exchange-Traded Fund (ETF) has brought passive smallcap funds back into focus. Investors now have 27 passive smallcap funds to choose from 17 index funds and 10 ETFs. They should carefully assess whether an active or passive approach suits them better in this segment.

Conventional advice

Financial advisors have traditionally recommended passive funds for the largecap space and active funds for the midcap and smallcap spaces.

The largecap segment, they say, has become more efficient, making it harder for active largecap funds to outperform. "Active largecap funds have seen declining outperformance in recent years, so passive funds tracking largecap-oriented indices with a proven long-term record are preferred," says Jiral Mehta, senior manager, research, FundsIndia.

In the largecap segment, most of the information is already known to market participants. The smallcap segment is different. "Smallcap stocks are less researched and more volatile, giving skilled fund managers a better chance of spotting winners early," says Harsh Vira, chief financial planner and founder, FinPro Wealth.

"Actively managed funds offer the potential to generate alpha through stock selection in the smallcap segment," says Chintan Haria, principal - investment strategy, ICICI Prudential Asset Management Company (AMC).

Active funds: Strengths and weaknesses

Active smallcap funds have a sound track record. "A reasonable number of them have outperformed the benchmark over a market cycle," says Mehta.

Their managers can manage risk better by raising or reducing exposure to specific sectors and stocks. "They can respond to evolving business fundamentals," says Shweta Rajani, head - mutual funds, Anand Rathil Wealth.

Fund managers can avoid weaker businesses and potential value traps. They can also invest beyond the Nifty Smallcap 250 universe and identify promising businesses that are not yet part of the index.

These funds, however, have their downsides. "Not every active fund manager succeeds in the smallcap space," says Vira.

Double-digit returns over medium to long term

Index	Returns (%)
	1-year	5-year	10-year
Nifty Small Cap 250 Momentum Quality 100	-4.1	12.5	16.6
Nifty Small Cap 250 Quality 50	-9.9	13.4	14.9
Nifty Small Cap 250	0.4	15.8	14.7
Nifty Small Cap 50	2.0	13.3	11.8

There is no guarantee that the fund an investor chooses will outperform its benchmark. Investors also pay higher fees in active funds, irrespective of whether the fund outperforms.

Passive funds: Benefits and limitations

A passive strategy gives investors diversified and cost-efficient exposure to the segment. "Passive funds are cheaper, simpler and remove the risk of choosing the wrong fund manager," says Vira.

The risk here is that passive funds own every stock in the index. "A market-cap-weighted smallcap index can carry junk exposure by default," says Nitin Agrawal, chief executive officer - mutual funds, InCred Money.

Passive funds also have a limited ability to respond quickly to changing market conditions.

Which route suits you?

Some experts recommend proven actively managed smallcap funds. "Active management remains more suitable for the core smallcap allocation because of the inefficiencies and dynamic nature of the segment," says Rajani.

Others say only investors who can select and monitor fund managers, and who seek the possibility of higher returns, should opt for active funds. "Those who want a low-cost, hassle-free approach and do not want to worry about manager performance may be better suited to passive funds," says Vira.

Smart-beta option

Six smart-beta funds exist in the smallcap space. "Smart-beta smallcap funds apply rules-based factor filters over the smallcap universe," says Agrawal. These strategies can reduce exposure to weak companies. However, smart-beta investing has a limited track record.

Factor investing is also cyclical and may underperform for long periods. "Smart-beta funds also carry the risk of sector or style concentration," says Rajani.

Regular passive or smart-beta?

An ordinary smallcap index fund is suited to investors who want pure, low-cost exposure to the smallcap segment. "A smart-beta smallcap fund suits evidence-driven investors who understand factor investing and can accept a different, or sometimes higher, risk profile," says Agrawal.
