

PRESS RELEASE

DEX ONE AND HCL TECHNOLOGIES TO OPTIMIZE DIGITAL PLATFORM DEVELOPMENT

Partnership Will Accelerate Digital Solutions for Customers and Reduce Costs

CARY, N.C., June 2, 2011 – Dex One Corporation (NYSE: DEXO), a leading marketing solutions provider, today announced plans to energize its digital operations and optimize the development of digital solutions by partnering with HCL Technologies, a leading global information technology (IT) service provider. The initiative is part of Dex One's strategic plan to accelerate delivery of new digital offerings while reducing operational costs.

Dex One will add significant technical expertise and capacity to its product engineering and development teams. The company will strengthen its IT footprint, IT help desk support and quality assurance, and will increase flexibility for future IT growth across mobile and online platforms, including iOS, Android development, cloud-based device testing, Web 2.0 and data warehousing and business intelligence. Dex One and HCL will also develop and integrate new mobile, video and social media channels to further enhance marketing strategies for local businesses.

"By selecting HCL Technologies, we gain solid engineering expertise that complements our Santa Monica, Calif. and Denver digital product development teams. This powerful combination of people and processes will reduce development cycle times and accelerate delivery of new digital solutions to our customers," said Atish Banerjee, Dex One senior vice president and chief technology officer. "Beyond the operational benefits, this partnership reduces our costs and is part of the company's larger effort to record $140 million in cost savings in 2011."

"Our engagement with Dex One is a strategic opportunity for us to work collaboratively with Dex One's product engineering and IT teams, leveraging our world-class media, publishing and entertainment expertise to jointly create Dex One's next generation digital products and services in social networking and collaboration space," said Karan Puri, Executive Vice President, Consumer Services for HCL Technologies.

Dex One will realign its IT operations to integrate and partner with HCL for a number of IT services, which will be supported by HCL locations in Cary, N.C. and India.
