Thank you for commitment to making sure democracies deliver: Biden to Modi

SHUBHAJIT ROY
New Delhi, May 24

SETTING ASIDE THEIR differences over the Russian invasion of Ukraine, Prime Minister Narendra Modi told US President Joe Biden in Tokyo Tuesday that the India-US strategic partnership is truly a "partnership of trust" as the two sides launched a slew of initiatives in a range of areas: from critical and emerging technologies to vaccines and defence, from artificial intelligence to data science.

Biden, in his opening remarks at the Quad leaders' summit in Tokyo, made a direct

PM Narendra Modi (second right), and Japanese PM Fumio Kishida (right) feed carp before their dinner at Akasaka Palace state guest house in Tokyo on Tuesday

At the Modi-Biden bilateral on the sidelines of the summit in Tokyo, the White House said, "President Biden condemned Russia's unjustifiable war against Ukraine. The leaders committed to continue providing humanitarian assistance, and discussed how to cooperate to manage disruptions caused by the war in Ukraine, in particular the rise in energy and food prices, to protect their respective citizens and the world."

The Indian statement issued by the Ministry of External Affairs avoided any reference to the situation in Ukraine.

"Our shared values, and our common interests in many areas, including security, have strengthened the bonds of this trust... I am confident that the friendship between India and USA will continue to be a force for good for global peace and stability, for the sustainability of the planet, and for the well-being of mankind," PM Modi said. The Ministry of External Affairs (MEA) said the meeting "resulted in substantive outcomes" which will "add depth and momentum" to the bilateral partnership.

Critical tech: Both sides announced a major partnership to boost cooperation in critical and emerging technologies between their leading security agencies: the India-US Initiative on Critical and Emerging Technologies (iCET) co-led by India's National Security Council Secretariat and the US National Security Council. The MEA said the iCET would forge closer linkages between the government, academia and industry of the two countries.

Vaccines: India and the US extended the longstanding Vaccine Action Programme (VAP) until 2027 to continue joint biomedical research which had resulted in the development of vaccines and related technologies.

● TONY FADELL,
PRINCIPAL, FUTURE SHAPE

'Metaverse isn't what we should be spending money on'

After two decades of making its mark, Apple recently phased out its iPod. Tony Fadell, principal of Future Shape, was the inventor of the iPod and co-inventor of the iPhone. He also founded Nest Labs — which was later sold to Google.

As principal at Future Shape, Fadell currently mentors start-ups. In an interaction with FE's Devina Joshi, he elaborates on his new book, 'Build', and the future of the tech world. Excerpts:

makes the old positioning-based logic less relevant. They don't have many assets, either. They create value through relationships and networks, not via physical goods or infrastructure, so arguments built around asset ownership are equally challenging. These firms are also looking to grow the market — by increasing the flow of people and goods — rather than capture more of the existing market.

What is the biggest career lesson you have highlighted in your new book, 'Build'?

The biggest lessons always come from the biggest mistakes. Early in my career, I got a job at a company called General Magic. It was the early '90s and the company decided to build a touchscreen mobile communication and entertainment device that would let you email and call from anywhere, buy online plane tickets, play games, and send emojis... it

In India, Apple closed CY 2021

As the smartphone reaches into every community, Apple should find new ways to make its products more accessible to those without as high a per capita GDP was the iPhone, 15 years before the iPhone. Genius technology but we were building it for each other, not for a real customer.

Nobody needed the thing we created, so nobody bought it. It was one of the biggest failures in Silicon Valley history as we focus on what we could make rather than why we were making it.

at only 4.4% of the smartphone market share. How should it approach emerging markets?

Apple is an aspirational brand; it always has been, in the developed world, too. As the smartphone reaches into every community, Apple should find new ways to make its products more accessible to those without as high a per capita GDP. These countries shouldn't get many years-old products, and Apple has been addressing that already with new low-cost update accessible iPhones. However, I think they can innovate further to reach much wider customer audiences. Ideas could include 'subscription per month' pricing, for countries where there are fewer financing alternatives due to a lack of credit infrastructure and immature lender environments. Apple has a lot of cash on its balance sheet — it can think about becoming a short-term lender.

Big tech firms like Apple and Google are trying out cars, drones and VR glasses, with limited success. How far is too far, when it comes to product innovation?

Innovation is a continuous process. I believe if you're not solving a real problem, you can't start a revolution. For instance, take Uber. The founders started with a customer problem — that they experienced in their daily lives — and then applied technology. When it comes to innovation; it's all trial and error.

Most of these ecosystem orchestrators, like Google, Alibaba and Uber, don't make the things they sell; they exist to link others together, and this

What is the intersection of technology products and Metaverse looking like?

We need to make sure we are solving real problems with AR and VR technologies — which I admire and respect. However, some definitions of the Metaverse are about building communities with real human connections. We have already seen over the past 20 years, that when we disintermediate each other with more technology and anonymity in the middle, we invite more toxic behaviours. We saw this first with toxic blog comments, then again with the photo and video focussed social networks. Why do we trust that they will get any better in the so-called 'Metaverse'? Metaverse isn't what we should be focussed on or spending tons of money on. We have much bigger issues like climate change that need funds and innovation.

There's Samsung's Fold/Flip series, the Motorola Razr reboot, and Google's rumoured foldable Pixel. Gimmicky, or are foldable phones the way forward?

When I saw the announcement about a Razr reboot, my initial reaction was, "How cool!" Then, I thought about it for 15 more minutes and said, "It's just a gimmick, a parlour trick." The Razr was cool for one real reason — making phone calls. But only a few people make phone calls today; they are messaging, browsing, playing, etc.

No one wants to flip open their smartphone for each of these things — the flip makes the device way more cumbersome to use.
