Kashmir hopes Mohali will set peace ball rolling

OPTIMISM J&K leadership looking forward to meeting between prime ministers of India, Pak

Arun Joshi
arun.joshi@hindustantimes.com

JAMMU: While the rest of the country will be watching the outcome of Wednesday's India-Pakistan World Cup semifinal clash in Mohali with bated breath, Kashmir will be looking for an opening for peace in the meeting of the prime ministers of the two countries.

With Prime Minister Manmohan Singh inviting his Pakistani counterpart Mohammad Syed Yousuf Raza Gilani and Pakistan president Asif Ali Zardari to watch the match — and Gilani accepting the invitation — hopes have risen in the troubled valley.

Jammu and Kashmir chief minister Omar Abdullah described Singh's invitation to the Pakistani leaders as "an act of statesmanship which speaks of his given understanding that symbolism plays a great role in reducing suspicion and distrust — and whenever that happens, Jammu and Kashmir is the direct beneficiary."

Violence in Kashmir has claimed more than 50,000 lives since 1989 and left the valley's economic and social fabric in tatters.

Singh's is not the first instance of cricket diplomacy.

On April 18, 2005, the then prime minister Atal Bihari Vajpayee had in an unexpected move extended the hand of friendship to Pakistan from the Sher-e-Kashmir cricket stadium in Srinagar. Pakistan was quick to respond and it led to confidence building measures between the two countries.

A similar element of surprise has greeted Singh's invitation to the Pakistani leaders. Again, Pakistan has seized the opportunity.

Abdullah said he hoped the meeting between the two prime ministers would help bring the derailed dialogue process back on tracks. "It augurs well for us because we have seen positive changes in the state whenever there is an improvement in the relations between the two countries," the chief minister said.

Senior separatist leader and former chairman of the Hurriyat Conference Abdul Ghani Bhat hoped that the "intervention at the highest level would result in addressing all issues, including the issue of Jammu and Kashmir".

He said, "It is an opportunity, which I hope that the two prime ministers would avail to full measure."

PDP president Mehbooba Mufti said Singh's invitation was a "catalyst to improve ties" and she was enthused by the "reciprocity by the Pakistani prime minister".

Though it is a small step, it can act as a catalyst to improve relations between the two countries

No boycott of Sampat Singh: Khap

HT Correspondent

KISAR: The state president of Jat Arakshan Sangharsh Samiti, Jhaw Singh Sangwan has denied the decision of social boycott of Congress MLA Sampat Singh, even as leaders of several Jat community khaps have released a statement saying that no resolution was taken in or passed against him, as reported in the Jat rally on Saturday. The statement has been signed by Jat leaders Chatar Singh, Har Sarayan, Mir Singh, Subhash Dhillon, Hejl Lal, Rajbir Lamba, Joginder Gurana and Bijender Sarpanch.

They said that no such issue was on the agenda and the person conducting the rally and holding the stage announced the decision of Sampat Singh's boycott on his own. The person belongs to an opposition party.

Pak interior secretary arrives, talks amity

ATTARI: A day ahead of the home secretary-level talks between India and Pakistan, a six-member delegation headed by Pakistan interior secretary Qamar uz Zaman Chaudhry crossed over through the Attari border on Sunday morning.

"I have come here with the message of friendship from Pakistan. Our priority will be to discuss various issues for improving relations between the two countries," Chaudhry said.

Lauding Prime Minister Dr Manmohan Singh for inviting the Prime Minister and President of Pakistan for the Cricket World Cup semi-final in Mohali, Chaudhry said, "Pakistan has welcomed the gesture. The Prime Minister and President have sent a message of appreciation. We are hopeful that the gesture will bring the two nations closer."

On cricket diplomacy, he said, "People of both countries love the game. It is good to have common things."

Chaudhry stated that there was a need for improving people-to-people contact between the two countries. "This will be one of the issues we are going to raise during the two-day talks with our Indian counterparts. We will talk about easing visa norms so that people of both nations can meet more frequently," he added.

WELCOMES MANMOHAN SINGH'S GESTURE OF INVITING PAKISTANI LEADERS FOR WORLD CUP SEMI-FINAL

When asked about the mood in Pakistan regarding the March 30 semi-final, Chaudhry said, "It is very upbeat. Pakistan has a huge cricket following and almost everyone wants to come here. There are constraints, but hopefully many fans will be able to make it. I will be watching the game."

Earlier, BSF IG Himmat Singh welcomed the Pakistani delegation at the India-Pakistan gate at the Attari border.

The interior secretary was given a guard of honour by the BSF jawans and rewarded the red-carpet welcome. Chaudhry arrived in a chopper that landed on the other side of the border and from there he crossed over on foot.

Later, the interior secretary paid obeisance at Harmandir Sahib.

WikiLeaks revelation has exposed BJP, says Hooda

HT Correspondent
chandigarh.bureau@hindustantimes.com

ROHTAK: Haryana chief minister Bhupinder Singh Hooda on Sunday said the latest revelation of WikiLeaks has exposed the true face of Bharatiya Janata Party (BJP), and comments made by BJP leader Arun Jaitley about Hinduism, have proved that BJP is becoming Hindutva only for garnering votes.

Talking to reporters after listening to the grievances of people at the local Canal Rest House, Hooda said the revelation of WikiLeaks had somehow saved the conviction of Congress Party that BJP had been adopting double standards until it had nothing to do with the interests of the common people. "This party had a different face before coming to power and after getting power, it completely changed its norms. BJP has neither a set-defined policy nor it has any programme for the welfare of the common people," he said. Hooda said, "When it comes to getting votes, the BJP is reminded of Ram Mandir and after elections it completely forgets the Mandir and Hindutva, which clearly shows that the party is indulging in the politics of self-interest and it had nothing to do with the common people. BJP is misguiding the people in the name of religion."

BHUPINDER SINGH HOODA
Haryana chief minister

Chief minister Hooda, flanked by Ipoel MLA Udi Bhan, chief minister's political advisor Professor Virender and PCC (R) president Ajaideep Bhankar said it had become clear from the revelation of WikiLeaks that the BJP's stunt was self-contradictory, as whenever anything was said about the Congress Party by the WikiLeaks, the leaders of BJP made hue and cry taking it as truth and whenever accusing finger was raised by the same towards BJP, its leaders refused to believe it. Politics based on false and baseless issues could not survive for long, he added.

The chief minister said a delegation of farmers had met him on Sunday morning and they praised the policy of land acquisition of the state government. The members of delegation had urged him to expedite their land for the extension of IMT, Rohtak.

Similarly, they also urged the chief minister to get the mini-mum industries set up in the IMT so that their children could get employment opportunities. The chief minister said he had asked the members of the delegation to submit a written memorandum to this effect so that further action could be taken on it.

"We will bring Punjab back to the Number 1 position in the country. We will end the rule of individuals for the rule of law. The youth will get quality education and jobs, or we will ensure their overall development," he added.

The PPP also became the first party in the country to bar its members from becoming ministers, parliamentary secretary after the age of 70, or if any of their blood relatives were already appointed to such a position. "Besides, the party's constitution does not allow any member to hold these positions for more than 10 years at a stretch," Manpreet said.

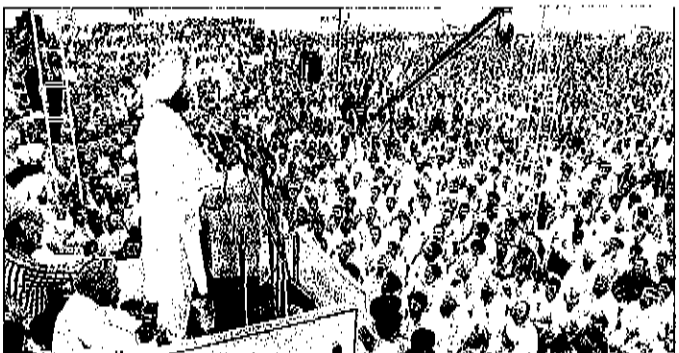

The party would also accord preference to educated candidates while deciding the assembly poll ticket.

In another unique initiative, the PPP made a constitutional provision to set up committees of experts from various fields to advise the party on important issues, including women's empowerment, NRIs, environment, youth affairs, labour and employment, underprivileged classes, agriculture, trade and industry, education, health, governance reforms, media, and culture.

The party has also proposed to set up a "corps of volunteers" to further the social agenda at the grassroots levels. "The volunteers will serve humanity in times of calamity or distress.

THREAT TO LIFE?

Apparently hinting at a threat to life, Manpreet said none was sure what would happen to him in future. "I am not bothered if something wrong is to happen to me. But, in that case, the people of Punjab would continue to adhere to the path shown by our martyrs to ensure a progressive state," he said.

During peace time, they will organise activities such literacy and health camps," the coalition said.

In a clever move aimed at gaining goodwill, Manpreet announced that Abhey Sandhu, nephew of Bhagat Singh, and Bharat Bhushan Thapar, nephew of Shaheed Sukhdev, will be party candidates in the coming assembly elections.

The entire gathering later observed a half-minute silence to pay homage to the martyrs.

Manpreet also launched his website (www.manpreetbadal.com), twitter page (twitter.com/badalmanpreet), Facebook page (facebook.com/manpreetbadal) and blog (blog.manpreetbadal.com) at the rally. "It will help me connect better with young supporters as well as those abroad. India is a country of young people, and it is the duty of every politician to seek their opinion," he added.

Cricket not always a winner

STICKY WICKET Cricket diplomacy has not worked in past, but experts hope Mohali will be different

Jayanth Jacob
letters@hindustantimes.com

NEW DELHI: Cricket can bond both India and Pakistan together. But, going by the past, using cricket diplomacy to cement the ties between the two countries has not gone too far.

But a high-level India-Pakistan meeting with cricket as the primary context has a saving grace, reckons many — the expectations that ride high on formal summit-level meetings can be brought down, and leaders get an informal environment to understand each other's mind.

So, will Manmohan Singh become luckier in his second stint with cricket diplomacy?

Also, for the first time, a democratically-elected prime minister from Pakistan is partaking in cricket diplomacy, though many in the Indian system doubt the power of the present-day government in Islamabad to push ahead with the dialogue process with India.

"I think, Manmohan Singh is very serious and has the intentions to take the peace process forward. The meet coincides with the resumption of the dialogue process," says former foreign secretary Salman Haidar, who helped midwife the dialogue process between the two countries that had been abandoned after the 26/11 attack. Though there is always an opportunity to begin afresh, the cricket diplomacy of the past is not so inspiring.

> THOUGH THERE IS AN OPPORTUNITY TO BEGIN AFRESH, CRICKET DIPLOMACY OF THE PAST IS NOT SO INSPIRING

PAST IMPERFECT

When he had come to Jaipur in February 1987 to watch the second day's proceedings of an India-Pakistan test match, President Zia-ul-Haq had drummed up the visit as part of his "cricket initiative" and his trip came after many years of suspended cricketing ties.

But by 1989, things had gone terribly wrong with Kashmir situation going from bad to worse.

MUSHARRAF MAGIC

In March 2004, when India toured Pakistan, ties were on an upswing.

In January that year, President Musharraf assured the then PM Vajpayee that Pakistan will not permit any territory under it's control to be used for terrorism in any manner against India, laying the ground for composite dialogue.

Both Rahul Gandhi and Priyanka Gandhi watched a match in Karachi and then national security advisor Brajesh Mishra was seen during a match in Lahore.

In 2005, Manmohan Singh invited Musharraf to watch an India-Pakistan one-day match in New Delhi, which again created the right atmospherics and statements, including the resolve the terrorism should not have hamper the peace process.

MOHALI MANIA

What about this time? "If something goes wrong, the peace process can go wrong, too. It doesn't mean India and Pakistan shouldn't engage each other", adds Salman Haidar.

Soaring inflation forces IIM-A to increase fees by 5%

AHMEDABAD: Persistently high inflation has forced the Indian Institute of Management, Ahmedabad (IIM-A), to increase fees for its various courses by a little more than 5%, the third hike by the premier business school in the past three years.

With this, the fee for the institute's popular programme, the post-graduate programme in management (PGP), is ₹14.46 lakh for the batch 2011-13.

The PGP fee stood at ₹13.7 lakh for the academic term 2010-2012. It was ₹11.6 lakh in 2008-10 and was raised to ₹12.5 lakh in 2009-11. Another important course the institute offers is a one-year programme in management for executives (PGPX), which will now cost ₹20.31 lakh. It has been increased by about ₹1 lakh. "We had to hike the fees to meet the increasing cost caused by high inflation. However, this rise is still roughly half the inflation rate," IIM-A director Samir Barua said.

The business school does not receive government funding to run its programmes because such financing is limited to developing infrastructure for accommodating students under the other backward classes quota. The institute says the expansion of facilities to accommodate OBC students will be completed in 2011-12 for the PGP and 2012-13 for the PGPX.

The new fee structure for various programmes was approved in the meeting of the board of governors on Saturday, just before the 46th convocation presided over by Prime Minister Manmohan Singh. During the NDA regime in 2003-04, the union HRD ministry under Murli Manohar Joshi had cut fees by almost 80% for the PGP. HTC

Advani keeps mum on PM-in-waiting remark

NEW DELHI: Senior BJP leader L K Advani on Sunday refrained from commenting directly on Prime Minister Manmohan Singh's remark in Parliament that he was waiting endlessly to become PM.

But, in his blog, Advani quoted from a former Union home secretary's latest book to show that "except for the BJP, Communist and leftist parties, almost all other political parties in India are family concerns."

"Most of the so-called young MPs and MLAs who are touted as the induction of young and fresh blood in political parties are the sons, sons-in-law, daughters, daughters-in-law, grand-nephews, uncles and so on of those in power," Advani quoted Madhav Godbole as writing in his book, "India's Parliamentary Democracy on Trial."

Advani's reference to Godbole came two days day after senior party leader Arun Jaitley's statement that Dr Singh's remark was not intended for Advani but "was addressing someone else," meaning the Congress first family.

Advani noted Godbole's comment that "Sonia Gandhi, President of the Congress party for the last 12 years and the real power behind the throne in Delhi, is Italian by birth; the Speaker of the Lok Sabha, Meira Kumar, and the Chairman of the Rajya Sabha, Hamid Ansari, are retired Indian Foreign Service officers, and Manmohan Singh, Prime Minister, is a retired officer of the Indian Economic Service! Who could have imagined that India, with its population of over a billion, would be so bereft of leadership, drawn from the masses, 60 years after practicing parliamentary democracy?"

Advani praised Sushma Swaraj and Jaitley for their performance as Opposition leaders in Parliament in the just-ended budget session, wherein they had taken on the government on the issues of appointment of CVC, demand for a JPC into the 2G scam and cash-for-vote scam.

Advani said the government should have fine-tuned the schedules of Parliament and elections in five states to ensure that the just-concluded budget session had all the sittings.

He felt, "If the government and the Election Commission had had an informal interaction early in January, this situation could have been avoided." HTC

Modi gets praise for cricket team!

WHILE admitting that politics had taken the back seat compared to cricket as the budget session of Parliament ended, LK Advani saw the composition of the Indian cricket team as another example that Gujarat was faring well under Narendra Modi. In his latest blog post, Advani quoted the speech of BJP spokesperson Shahnawaz Hussain to push the point there were three Muslims — Zaheer Khan, Munaf Patel and Yusuf Pathan — in India's World Cup squad on the basis of merit. Advani then added all of them were from Gujarat, thus making a point that Muslims were doing well under Modi.

IIT-K B Tech students can opt for double degree

a.katiyar@hindustantimes.com

KANPUR: The Indian Institute of Technology, Kanpur (IIT-K) will start offering double degree programmes from the forthcoming academic session, making it the first engineering institute in the country to do so.

"A B Tech student will now be able to opt for the second degree after completing the second year of B Tech course and before completion of the third year," IIT-K director Sanjay G Dhande told mediapersons on Saturday.

"The student will be free to choose any stream of his liking for the double degree course.

"However, their performance in B Tech will be assessed before allowing them to opt for the second degree," Dhande said.

The Institute has also abolished the integrated five-year MSc degree, replacing it with a four-year MS (Master of Science) degree.

If a student prefers to take the degree of BS (Bachelor of Science) in economics, physics, chemistry, aerospace or in any other stream they could do it along with MS in five years.

Thus they will get two degrees of MS and BS within five years, the director said.

"The new system will open wider horizons of acquiring knowledge of the subject of one's interest and will not restrict the courses to MS degree," Dhande said.

PERAMBALUR: The hall-cum foyer where former telecom minister A Raja used to grant audience to people in Perambalur today serves as headquarters for the campaign of M Prabhakaran, an Indian Oil gas dealer and newcomer candidate for the DMK.

The functional table and chair in one corner of the hall-cum-foyer of the three-storeyed tastefully done house served as his durbar every 14 days until Raja was jailed in early February in connection with the 2G spectrum scam. His canted chair is still wiped clean every day.

DMK district secretary (Perambalur) P Duraisamy was among the dejected lot, when Prabhakaran was fielded. Duraisamy had met Raja in jail in Delhi to seek his blessings for his nomination from Perambalur, the latter's hometown. "But when the list came, we were shocked. Now we have no option but to work for Prabhakaran's victory," he said.

Raja's close aides such as S Jayaprakash, a youthful party leader, are monitoring and mounting the campaign for the person blessed by Raja for the Perambalur assembly constituency, 300 km south of Chennai. In Kunnam in Perambalur district, another Raja aide SS Sivasankar has got the party nod.

Jayaprakash thinks nothing of the heartburn among local DMK leaders over fielding Prabhakaran.

"Some people were disappointed, but after the name came to us, our job is to ensure his victory. For us, anyone Raja wants in a person to work for," he says. Supremely confident of Prabhakaran's victory, he says "spectrum is not an issue at all. Ask anyone here, they will tell you the work Raja has done".

A shopkeeper across the road tended to agree that the spectrum scam was not much of a factor but said it was not something that people could forget easily. But Raja has done so much for the area that people would find it difficult to think of anyone else, he says. N Karuppaswamy, a farmer, is sad that the man who supposedly brought life into the region is behind bars. "He is innocent and is in jail only because of (Chief Minister) M Karunanidhi's family. He will be back," he said when Hindustan Times caught up with him.

JAIPUR: A man who was beaten up mercilessly on being mistaken for a burglar, died here after the police left him unattended instead of taking him to a hospital. The incident took place in Kanthani police station area of Jaipur city on Thursday when the 25-year-old unidentified man allegedly entered a house in Bindayan colony.

On hearing the screams of the help of the house, five men — Pankaj Sharma, Bahram Jat, Gopal Jat, Kanchan Bhati and Dharmendra Jat — allegedly rushed in and thrashed the man suspecting him to be a thief.

They then tied him to a tree and continued beating. Neighbours witnessing the scene called the police who arrived and rescued the man.

Instead of taking him to a hospital for medical treatment and questioning, the cops dumped the badly injured man in the nearby forest area, said Surrendra Singh, station house officer, Kanthani. Subsequently, the man died and his body was recovered on Friday evening.

India's only MBA-holder sarpanch dazzles at UN meet

UNITED NATIONS: There was disbelief among ministers and ambassadors when the chairperson of the 11th Info-Poverty World Conference at the United Nations introduced the jeans-clad Chhavi Rajawat as head of a village in India.

For, from a distance one could easily mistake Rajawat, an articulate, computer-savvy woman, for a model or a Bollywood actress. But she is the sarpanch of Soda village, 60km from Jaipur. Rajawat, 30, India's youngest and only MBA to be a village head, quit her senior management position with Bharti-Tele Ventures of Airtel Group to serve her beloved villagers as sarpanch.

Rajawat participated in a panel discussion on March 24 and 25 on how civil society can implement its actions on achieving Millennium Development Goals (MDGs). Rajawat said she sought full support from outside agencies and the corporate world.

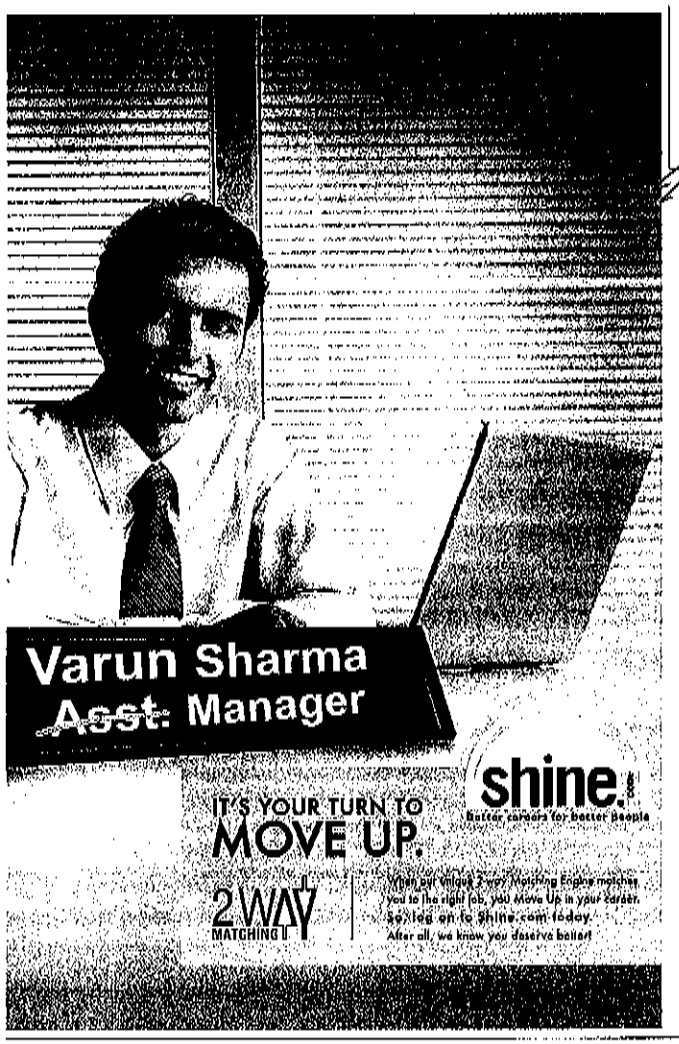

"I thank United Nations office for Partnerships (UNOP) which had signed an MoU to advise in India Mr Babu Lal Jain to visit Soda and extend all support in the opening of the first bank in the village. That made all the difference."

"It is necessary to re-think through various strategies of action that includes new technologies like e-services in achieving MDGs in an area where resources have become limited, she told the delegates of the international conference.

"If India continues to make progress at the same pace as it has for the past 65 years since Independence, it just won't be good enough," she told delegates at the conference. "We'll be failing people who are without having water, electricity, toilets, schools and jobs. I am convinced we can do it differently and do it faster," she said.

"In three years I will transform my village. I don't want money. I want people and organisations to adopt projects in my village as often projects fail owing to lack of local connect and that is what I am here to provide by bridging that gap."

"I want the conference to help bring about faster change so that this generation can enjoy that kind of life that I and you in this audience take for granted."

Under-pressure players don't need diplomatic burden

ThirdEye

PRADEEP MAGAZINE

Once again demands are being made on cricket to resolve the deep-rooted prejudices of people divided by political and religious ideologies that have plagued only for hatred.

The World Cup all of a sudden finds itself being propelled to a stage where the two teams pitted against each other find it impossible to keep apart away from the politics of the region.

The Indian Prime Minister's initiative of inviting his counterpart from Pakistan to watch the semi-final with him is seen as a diplomatic move to break the ice between the two nations post the 26/11 terrorist attack in Mumbai.

As someone who has in the past been a great votary of taking cricket for people to people contact and someone who in the 1999 World Cup drove to the stadium in Manchester with a Pakistani friend, holding the flags of both nations, I am now very uncomfortable with the cricket being used as a metaphor for peace.

Those who have been to Pakistan on that memorable 2004 tour would vouch for what cricket did to bring the people of the two nations together. For someone whose autographs were sought in Lahore's Qaddafi stadium for being an Indian on that tour, I should have no reason to disagree.

There are many other such memorable off the field moments when the two countries have played, which raised hopes of a better future ahead. Sadly, instead of a way ahead, the two nations keep worrying against each other. And if today India and Pakistan are clashing on a cricket field, it is not as if the two nations plonked it. It has happened inadvertently because the World Cup is being held in India.

Sure enough, if the Indian PM wants to use this opportunity for making overtures of peace and create an atmosphere of camaraderie and not divisiveness, it is to be welcomed. May be this is needed in a nation whose middle class is reaping the benefits of an economic boom and is peopled with ultra nationalists who can't differentiate between patriotism and jingoism; between a sporting contest and a war.

Since this semi-final clash has cartoon a boon for commercial interests, the use of war symbols is one day more profitable than advertising cricket as a pure sport, a contest between two sets of skills, where the best moments need are not guns but bat and ball.

In this mish mash of various vested interests, the ultimate casualty becomes the very asset and its ambi protagonists, people whom we all nothing, regardless of which nation they belong to.

When in 2004 an atmosphere of goodwill and peace was being created in India, and the players were told they were ambassadors of love, a senior player had told us we: "Yes, it does feel great, but please don't burden us with your expectations. We are mere cricketers and know only how to play and beyond a point this pressure is hard to handle."

Imagine the plight of this Indian team. They are already burdened with the hope of a nation which is demanding the World Cup from them as if that is their birthright. And now comes this contest with Pakistan, which for many is a bigger prize than winning the Cup.

A shudder to be in the shoes of a cricketer today, Indian or Pakistani. They are not only supposed to win, they are also defending the honour of their motherland and by a strange twist of logic they are also supposed to be embassies of peace.

HISTORY REPEATS

- 1987: Then Pakistan president Zia ul Haq came to watch a Test between India and Pakistan in Jaipur at the invitation of the late prime minister Rajiv Gandhi. The two leaders held bilateral discussions in Delhi after that.
- 2005: The Delhi-born Pak president Pervez Musharraf came to watch an India-Pakistan ODI in New Delhi that was also seen as an attempt to build bilateral relations on the sidelines of the cricket pitch.

As good as it gets for the Black Caps

Wrong 'Un

ANIL KUMOLE

On Tuesday, both Sri Lanka and New Zealand will be thanking themselves for having made "The Other" semi-final. Frankly, apart from people in Lanka and New Zealand, no one's really concentrating on the first semi-final, which is probably to their advantage.

What isn't to their advantage is that they played in very limited conditions in Mirpur, in a high-pressure match against South Africa, pulled off an upset and have often had to travel a fair bit – once to Colombo, to more humid but very different conditions, against a team that feasts on its own turf. And they have only two days in between from the time they land to a World Cup semi-final.

Unlike, I might add, India or Pakistan, who've had a much longer break. In Sri Lanka's case, while I don't think two days is enough either, at least they're playing at home, and with Dilshan and Tharanga doing the job against unfed-shocked England, the nine other members of the playing XI played only half a game.

KIWIS UP AGAINST IT

Unfortunately for the Kiwis, who played some very solid cricket to upstage South Africa, I think the odds are stacked against them in Colombo, given the host's terrific home record. The Kiwis will have to play very well better than they did against South Africa and it will still be tough. Sri Lanka, meanwhile, will be looking to Muralitharan to play a big role, which he's always done against New Zealand.

Though the Kiwis have a stellar record in making it to the semi-finals of big events, they haven't really won anything at the upper level even when they beat India in the Champions Trophy final in Nairobi (Gymkhana), but some how, I don't see a repeat in the offing.

Their beating the Proteas though was a combination of very smart and focussed playing by them and South Africa drowning in the baggage of their own history.

FAILURES MEAN LITTLE

But all credit to the Kiwis for sniffing blood and going for the kill. Unlike the Proteas, they are not dependent on any one player, haven't really been since Richard Hadlee, and their campaign has been strikingly similar to India's in 2003. The Kiwis lost badly to Bangladesh and India when they were in the subcontinent, India, you might remember, lost to New Zealand and even to Kenya. It is the head up. New Zealand even have the same coach, in John Wright.

Knocking India, he would have worn his heart on his sleeve and worked to ensure they fight till the last ball. Against Lanka, we hope they'll do that. HAWKEYE

FADING CHANCES Shoaib may be sidelined unless team opts to go in with three pacers

Atreyo Mukhopadhyay

CHANDIGARH: Prospects of a turbulent career coming to a tame end are looming large. Shoaib Akhtar is retiring from international cricket after the World Cup, and has yet to turn in a memorable performance in the tournament.

The lure played in just three of the seven matches Pakistan have played so far and doesn't stand a strong chance of making the 11 in the semi-final against India on Wednesday. Left armer Wahab Riyaz is partnering Umar Gul, and unless Pakistan go in with three quick bowlers, Shoaib's chances look bleak.

Apart from that, Shoaib has already been fined twice. Once in Bangladesh before a practice game for being late in returning to the hotel and then in Sri Lanka for badmouthing Kumar Akmal after the wicketkeeper dropped a few catches against New Zealand.

He had to shell out $2000 ($100/100) on both occasions.

Somewhat in sync with his present status in the team, Shoaib put a lonely figure when the Pakistani players swanned up with a round of football at the Punjab Cricket Association Stadium on Sunday morning.

He was one of the least involved figures, standing idle mostly at the right-out in a conventional football match would.

Not many were passing the ball to him either. His involvement level increased when the players took part in catching and throwing drills, but not being among the quickest of movers or the cleanest of catchers, Shoaib caught attention more for missing the catches.

Also, he dropped more catches than he took.

The only time Shoaib came close to be his real self was when the team went for nets. He rested for a while before the activities started and after some early movement, sent a few screaming past the bat of opener Mohammad Hafeez.

There wasn't much bounce on the practice wickets, prompting the team management to put a marble slab on the pitch reserved for throwdowns so that the ball skids after pitching.

Even then, bowling in the other nets, Shoaib got a few to jump off the good length and nearly hit Hafeez on the gloves with one of those deliveries. On other side of a short break, he bowled for a long time.

Wise-captain and senior batsman Misbah-ul-Haq refused to comment on Shoaib's chances of playing against India, but said that his presence at the nets helps the batsmen. "Facing him during practice means good preparation for us. Having him in the side means the opposition is under pressure."

Shoaib has to wait to know whether he gets another chance to put pressure on the rivals the way he prefers.

Technology needs to be used to provide definites

Ankush Chopra

What's the most fundamental reason for trusting technology over human competence? Accuracy. I'd assume. If that is achieved, there shouldn't be a doubt on exploiting it to its utmost. Yet, if its design doesn't allow an infallible fact finding system, it must start a debate.

ISSUES WITH HAWK EYE

Most of us have all along admitted that some of the technology being used is actually foolproof. Like in the case of a hot spot that would show the edges and a nick would do the same. Hawk Eye, however, has been the bane of ours – a section for many. Would it have tracked the path of Shane Warne's famous 'ball of the century' to Mike Gatting had it hit some part of Gatting's body or equipment? Javagal Srinath, an ICC match referee, removed all my doubts. He told me that the predictive path is 100% accurate because it doesn't take the conditions into account while showing us what would have happened had the ball not been intercepted.

MAKING THINGS CLEAR

If this settles the debate then let's embrace the predictive path shown by the Hawk Eye to get accurate decisions. Hawk Eye was considered 100% accurate for other readings like the pitching of the ball and the point of impact, two extremely important aspects while judging LBW. There has been the issue of batsmen being more than 2.5 metres away from the stumps at the point of impact. Hawk Eye is not 100% accurate when the ball has to travel more than 2.5 metres and hence it was decided that the predictive path must show the ball hitting the middle of the middle stump in order to be adjudged out. It was done to allow the buffer of a few centimetres, for if it hitting the middle stump, even with the possibility of not hitting the shown spot, it would not miss the stumps.

NEED FOR CLARITY

Despite this, there are certain 50-50 decisions, which are being referred back to the on-field umpires. Perhaps it is interpretation that is leaving third umpires confused.

Introspection and anticipation

Waugh zone

STEVE WAUGH

Before the quarters there was a lot of enthusiasm about England's resilience and hope of the prediction that they were hitting inherently the best games they had played in the tournament. However, it always seemed to me that the team had played very sensibly cricket ever since their Ashes victory.

Perhaps they could look at giving Ashes hero Alistair Cook a go because they are still not off to a good opening pair.

SA MUST SOUL SEARCH

The other team that needs to do some serious soul-searching is South Africa. They've yet to win a knock out game in this tournament, and like years, they were my favourites for the World Cup. Graeme Smith's poor form with the bat and inexperience in the middle order had a telling effect on Friday. Mark Boucher was perhaps required in the middle earlier just for his mental toughness, and in his absence, there was a bit of panic whenever the game went past the top order.

KIWIS ON A HIGH

The New Zealand line-up at noon, particularly when you saw the amount of effort Daniel Vettori has put into this team over the years. Deservedly they had been thrashed at this venue by Bangladesh a few times last year and perhaps that helped them understand the wicket. Lately, New Zealand have some fine players, however, and they normally get results when the whole team rather than just one guy contributes. The other factor that has always helped New Zealand is the availability of a talented and fresh Ocean. He has always been a talismanic figure for them. He was exceptional the other night and might blossom at the Premadasa on Tuesday.

THE FINAL WORD

To say that Sri Lanka are favourites would be an understatement. However, New Zealand have a team in that dangerous mental state of having nothing to lose. They have good spinners and a veering seam attack and could challenge the hosts. But it remains to be seen whether they can hold it all together once again against the calm and class of the Sri Lankan side. GAMEPLAN

Germany crush Kazakhs to top group

Reuters

KAISERSLAUTERN, GERMANY: Thomas Mueller and Miroslav Klose both scored twice as Germany eased to a 4-0 victory over Kazakhstan to open up a commanding eight-point lead in Euro 2012 Group A qualifying on Saturday.

Germany have maintained the momentum from their third place World Cup finish last year, winning all five of their qualifiers to top the group with 15 points, conceding only one goal and scoring 17 in the process.

Klose scored in his sixth consecutive international, topping in from close range after three minutes and 200 World Cup top scorer Mueller struck twice before the break, both times set up by Real Madrid's Mesut Oil.

UNITED STATES DRAW AGAINST ARGENTINA

EAST RUTHERFORD, NEW JERSEY: American teenager Juan Agudelo pounced on rare defensive hesitation from Argentina to earn the United States a 1-1 draw in a friendly international at the new Meadowlands Stadium on Saturday.
