Kellton Acquires Kumori Technologies to Strengthen Global ServiceNow and AI-led Intelligent Automation Capabilities

27th November 2025, Gurgaon, India — Kellton, an AI-led digital transformation and technology consulting company, today announced the acquisition of Kumori Technologies, a specialized ServiceNow services provider. The acquisition strengthens Kellton's global ServiceNow delivery capabilities and advances its vision of building integrated, intelligent automation ecosystems for enterprises worldwide.

The move is part of Kellton's broader strategy to deepen the company's expertise in high-demand digital platforms while expanding its ability to support Fortune 500 enterprises and high-growth digital-first businesses across markets.

"We are not in the volume game; we are in the value game," said Niranjan Chintam, Chairman, Kellton. "At Kellton, we align technology, data, and AI to create outcome-driven transformation for our clients. ServiceNow is central to that mission, powering intelligent automation and unified enterprise workflows."

The acquisition of Kumori Technologies significantly expands our ServiceNow capabilities and deepens our ability to deliver connected, data-driven operations.

This step advances our digital and AI vision and positions us to drive faster time-to-value and sustained operational excellence for our clients."

"This acquisition marks a strategic step in our journey to build future-ready digital enterprises," said Karanjit Singh, CEO, Kellton. "The combined strengths of Kellton and Kumori will help enterprises move from fragmented tools to unified digital architectures powered by AI and automation. Together, we are enabling the next phase of digital transformation, one that prioritizes resilience, scalability, and sustained business growth."

Kumori Technologies brings deep specialization in the ServiceNow platform, proven implementation frameworks, and strong experience, enabling enterprises to drive efficiency and visibility across their workflows.

"Enterprises today are moving away from siloed systems toward unified digital platforms," said Ravi Narang, Managing Director, Chief Technology Officer, & Founder, Kumori Technologies. "Joining Kellton allows us to scale that mission globally. By combining Kellton's digital transformation expertise with our ServiceNow platform strengths, we are better positioned to help clients accelerate automation, improve decision-making, and create long-term value."

The acquisition reinforces Kellton's commitment to helping organizations build connected, intelligent digital ecosystems, where automation, integration, and human ingenuity come together to drive measurable business results. We are grateful to Anreya Capital Advisors for playing a crucial role as the exclusive M&A advisor to Kumori Technologies in this transaction.
