POLITICAL FAREWELL | Prez defends record, endorses Harris

America, I gave my best to you: President Biden

Agencies

President Biden used his valedictory address at the Democratic National Convention here on Monday to deliver a lengthy defense of his own record aimed at cementing a 50-year legacy of public service. Even as he passed the reins to Vice President Kamala Harris as the new face of the party he led until just weeks ago...

US President Joe Biden gets emotional during his speech at the Democratic National Convention

I've given my heart and soul to our nation, and I've been blessed a million times in return

Joe Biden
US President

Speaking to a rapturous arena filled with Democrats who chanted "We Love Joe!" and gave him a three-and-a-half-minute standing ovation, Biden grew emotional as he delivered what amounted to a political farewell to his most fervent supporters...

She's experienced. And she has enormous integrity," Biden said. Selecting Harris as his vice-president, he added, "was the best decision I made my whole career."

In some ways, his praise of Harris during the 52-minute address seemed secondary to his desire to recount the greatest hits of his career in a speech he might have given as the party's nominee. One by one, Biden ticked through a litany of achievements from the stump speeches of his now-ended campaign: $35 inlun; prano Denyce Graves for presidents of both parties. "America, I gave my best to you," he said, repeating a line he used during his inaugural address nearly four years earlier. Describing his one-term presidency as a successful rescue of a country reeling from a pandemic and suffering from the effect of political violence, Biden denounced former President Donald J. Trump, the 2024 Republican nominee, as not worthy of serving in the White House during his first term — "not then, not now, not ever."

'It is time for Kamala to break the glass ceiling'

Former First Lady Hillary Clinton hopes that Vice-President and presumptive Democratic presidential candidate Kamala Harris can finally break the "highest, hardest glass ceiling" in America by becoming the first female president. Speaking at the Democratic National Convention on Monday, Clinton said Harris had broken a glass ceiling of her own by becoming the first woman to win a major party nomination for president.

Kamala Harris after Biden delivered his speech at the Democratic National Convention

"When a barrier falls for one of us, it clears the way for all of us," Clinton said, echoing her convention speech from eight years before. But while Clinton's bid for the presidency in 2016 was historic, it ultimately ended in defeat when she lost the election to Donald Trump.

Now, as the Democratic Party takes its next step at putting the first woman in the White House, Clinton told a crowd of thousands in Chicago the time had come to pass the torch. "Together, we've put a lot of cracks in the highest, hardest glass ceiling," Clinton said. "On the other side of that glass ceiling is Kamala Harris raising her hand and taking the oath of office as our 47th President of the United States."

Times have changed since Clinton's presidential bid, according to several women delegates and politicians attending the 2024 DNC in Chicago. Back then, she had her gender a central part of the campaign — a move Harris has seemingly chosen to avoid. Whether the political backdrop has transformed enough for the vice-president to reach the nation's highest office remains an open question. Clinton "shattered a lot of glass for many people," Mignon Moore, the chair of the Democratic National Convention Committee, told reporters on Monday morning. But, she added: "It's not easy. We're trying to shift the mindset of people." Women politicians and delegates who spoke to the BBC said they faced a number of barriers in politics, both in running for office and while serving their communities.

'Complex issues over Gaza ceasefire persist'

AP

US Secretary of State Antony Blinken says that Israel has accepted a proposal to try to reach a ceasefire and hostage release in Gaza. He called on Hamas to do the same.

US Secretary of State Antony Blinken

Blinken on Tuesday was on his ninth urgent mission to the Middle East since the war in Gaza began more than 10 months ago. He did not say whether the "bridging proposal" addresses concerns cited by Hamas. Even if the militant group accepts the proposal, negotiators will spend the coming days working on "clear understandings on implementing the agreement," Blinken said. He said there are still "complex issues" requiring "hard decisions by the leaders," without offering specifics. Blinken is travelling to Egypt and Qatar on Tuesday for further negotiations after meetings in Israel on Monday.
