Fake licence: Renewal won't make it valid

CONSUMER PROTECTION

JEHANGIR B GAI

Akshay Deep Singh, the owner of a TATA LPT-909 vehicle, had his vehicle covered under an insurance policy purchased from New India Assurance's Kaithal Branch. The policy was valid from August 23, 2011 and August 22, 2012.

On January 28, 2012, while being driven from Ladwa to Kurukshetra, the vehicle was involved in an accident. Singh informed his insurer and subsequently submitted a claim, comprising ₹3,000 for towing charges and ₹2,28,319 for repairing the damaged car. The insurer then appointed a surveyor, who evaluated the loss at ₹1,85,579. On September 6, 2012, the insurer repudiated the claim on the ground that the driver of the vehicle did not hold a valid driving licence.

Aggrieved by the repudiation, Singh filed a complaint with the Kaithal District Consumer Forum. In its defence, the insurer maintained that the repudiation was warranted since Ramdhan Mewa Singh, the driver at the time of the accident, didn't possess a valid driving licence. The insurer drew attention to the fact that the licence produced was first issued by the Hyderabad Licensing Authority, and was later renewed by the Kaithal Regional Transport Office (RTO) in Haryana. However, upon verification, it was discovered that the Hyderabad RTO had not issued such a licence, thereby proving the document to be a forgery.

Akshay countered that even if the original licence was counterfeit, its subsequent renewal by the Kaithal RTO, which had been done legitimately, made the licence legally valid, and hence the claim should be settled.

The District Forum backed Akshay's complaint, directing the insurer to settle the claim by paying ₹1,85,579 for the assessed repair costs and ₹5,000 as compensation. The insurer challenged this order, but its appeal was subsequently dismissed by the Haryana State Commission.

Unsatisfied with the decision, the insurer filed a revision petition challenging the orders of the District Forum and the State Commission. In its judgment, the National Commission pointed out that there were four RTO offices in Hyderabad, but the surveyor had only sought clarification from one that the driving licence had not been issued by it. It pointed out that Singh should have made an effort to verify the authenticity of Ramdhan's driving licence, but he had not done so. Moreover, it noted that Akshay did not even take the plea that he had employed Ramdhan under the misconception that he possessed a valid licence. Given that Singh chose not to contest the revision proceedings lodged by the insurer, despite having been awarded and paid the cost of defence, the Commission felt that it had no option but to accept the insurer's submissions. The National Commission further concluded that even a genuine and valid renewal cannot legitimise an originally counterfeit driving licence and awarded the cost of defence, the Commission felt that it had no option but to accept the insurer's submissions.

The National Commission further concluded that even a genuine and valid renewal cannot legitimise an originally counterfeit driving licence. Consequently, by its order dated July 6, 2023, delivered by Justice Sudip Ahluwalia and Inderjit Singh, the National Commission deemed the insurer's repudiation to be justified. It set aside the orders of the District Forum and the State Commission and dismissed the complaint.

Delay in filing claim for flood damage risks rejection

Refrain from commencing repairs until the insurer's surveyor has inspected your house or car

SANJAY KUMAR SINGH & KARTHIK JEROME

Several parts of North India were ravaged by floods in July. The Insurance Regulatory and Development Authority of India (Irdai) has urged insurers to fast-track flood-related claims. It has asked them to activate and publicise 24-hour helplines and set up special desks at the district level with dedicated teams to process claims speedily. If your house or vehicle was affected by the recent inundation, and you have insurance covers for them, apply for claim settlement without delay.

HOME INSURANCE Is flooding covered? If you have an insurance cover for your home and its contents, you will receive compensation for damage due to inundation. Says Kapil Mehta, co-founder, Secure Now: "Storm, Tempest, Flooding and Inundation (STFI) risk is a standard component of most home insurance policies. Since flooding is an Act of God, claims for it generally get covered."

Any damage that was pre-existing in nature is not covered. "If the surveyor assesses that the damage was due to the insured's negligence, or due to lack of proper maintenance, or the insured failed to take preventive measures, the damage will not be covered. Any deliberate or wilful loss is also not covered," says Shashi Kant Dahuja, chief underwriting officer, Shriram General Insurance.

The basement, which is most vulnerable to flooding, should have been reported at the time of purchasing the policy. "If you did not report it, your claim could be rejected," says Mehta. The insured must understand the deductibles and exclu-sions that apply in his policy. "Claim up to the deductible amount is not payable. Exclusions mentioned in the policy document are also not covered," says Dahuja.

Steps the insured should take: The insured should inform the insurer about the damage immediately via email or phone calls to the toll-free number. "Don't delay in informing the insurer. The longer you wait, the more difficult it becomes to get a claim," says Mehta.

The insured should also take reasonable steps to prevent further loss or damage to the house and its contents.

"The insured needs to submit a claim form with the details of his policy. This should be accompanied by photographs or videos of the flooding to justify the damage. The insured should also submit an estimate of the cost of repair from a contractor," says Mehta.

The insured will follow a few standard procedures. "An investigator will survey the home and its contents and take photographs. The insured must answer the surveyor's questions truthfully regarding the damage to his home and contents," says Dahuja.

Mistakes to avoid: The insured should not sell, remove or replace any of the damaged items for which he is making a claim without the insurer's approval. He should also not carry out any repairs without the surveyor's approval, unless it is urgent.

The insured should avoid exaggerating the cost of repair and instead provide a reasonable assessment.

Always keep a soft copy of the insurance contract in your email, Google Drive, Dropbox, etc, in

VALIDATE CLAIM WITH PROPER DOCUMENTATION

Home insurance
■ Fully filled insurance claim form

■ Layout plan of the building or affected area (if required by the insurer)

■ Loss estimates and engineer's quotation for repair or construction

■ Photographs and videos of the flooded area

Motor insurance

■ Fully filled insurance claim form

■ Vehicle's registration certificate

■ Copy of driver's licence

■ Photographs or videos of the submerged vehicle case the physical copy gets lost.

If the insured raises questions about the claim, don't react angrily. "Answer all the questions rationally instead of arguing or fighting," says Mehta.

MOTOR INSURANCE

Will the claim be covered? If the policyholder only has the mandatory third-party cover, then damage caused by flooding will not be covered. "Damage due to flooding will only be covered if the policyholder also has the Own Damage component of motor insurance," says Sandeep Saraf, head-motor insurance renewal, claims and customer experience, Policybazaar.com.

The policy will cover the cost of retrieving a fully submerged vehicle and repair or replacement of its damaged parts.

If the flood water enters the cabin or the engine, then flushing and cleaning of the engine and other affected parts will be covered under the Own Damage policy. However, the insured can't make a claim for any consequential loss that occurred during the floods, damaging the engine and other parts.

"Negligence can lead to water seeping into different parts of the car. Such damages are considered consequential damages, which may not be covered," says Kunal Jha, head-motor product,

Digit Insurance.

One consequential damage that occurs is if the customer tries to switch on the engine after it has got flooded. This can lead to hydrostatic locking of the engine—a damage that is expensive to repair. "Such damage will only be covered if the customer has purchased the engine protection add-on cover," says Saraf. He also recommends that customers purchase add-ons like zero depreciation cover and cost of consumables cover.

Steps the insured should take: The insured should disconnect the battery. He should then inform the insurer and have the vehicle towed to the workshop recommended by the insurer. The workshop generally provides support in evacuating the vehicle from the flooded spot.

The insured should also take photographs and film videos of the interiors and exteriors of the car at the site where it was flooded to support his case.

A surveyor appointed by the insurer and the experts at the workshop will then determine the extent of damage.

Mistakes to avoid: Customers should not attempt to drive their cars through flooded areas. Any damage due to such driving is considered consequential loss, which is not covered.

The key mistake customers should avoid is attempting to start the vehicle once the engine has got flooded. "Any attempt to start the vehicle can damage the engine and other electronic equipment. Such damage is not covered by a standard motor insurance policy," says Jha.

As mentioned above, you will have to pay for the repair of this damage out of your own pocket unless you have the engine protection add on cover.
