5-stars hooked to sweet taste of food delivery

Premium restaurants see gourmet meals on wheels as a long-term business

SHIVANI SHINDE & SHALLY SETH MOHILE
Mumbai, 20 June

For Keenan Tham, founder and director of Pebble Street Hospitality that owns premium restaurants like KOKO and Foo, delivery was never a focus of the business. But the pandemic changed that.

"During the lockdown, 100 per cent of our business came from delivery," says Tham, adding, "For this we tied-up with delivery partners like Zomato and Swiggy." Before the pandemic, only a tiny segment came from delivery for which the company had partnered with Scotsy. Tham says even once the pandemic is over, delivery will remain a big part of the business.

Tham's decision finds an echo across premium restaurants and five-star hotels, which got into home delivery of food a year ago to plot their way out of the pandemic-induced loss to business. Today, it has evolved as an important ancillary to their core business.

For an industry that counts heavily on experience and personalised touch, this was a first.

Khushnooma Kapadia-senior area director of Marketing-South Asia, Marriott International, says their home delivery brand, Marriott Bonvoy on Wheels (MoW), has done "extremely well over the past one year and continues to grow in popularity and demand". In the past few months, it has seen orders double from key cities like Mumbai, Delhi, Hyderabad, Bengaluru and Pune.

Atul Bhalla, area manager, West, ITC Hotels, agrees. "We started small but kept growing month-on-month because there was a lot of pent-up demand." Since not everything that is served at these premium restaurants can be delivered, a good amount of research goes into crafting the delivery menu. "ITC's pulao and biryani menu has been a big hit," he says.

Going far with food

Marriott International, which has a network of 76 hotels in the country, now delivers meals in over 26 cities through its food delivery brand, Marriott on Wheels. ITC presently delivers meals in 18 cities through its network of 24 hotels.

And Indian Hotels, which has a network of 32 hotels in India, delivers in 14 cities through Qmin, its in-house e-commerce app. It has served over 20,000 meals to date for weddings, board meetings, conferences and summits across the country. Both ITC and Marriott cater to their guests through multiple channels that include food-delivery apps, web-based platforms and hotel apps.

Partner pangs

Working with delivery partners, however, has its bitter-sweet side, as many are now finding out. Some say negotiations over commission is an ongoing exercise and these can go up to 30 per cent.

Requesting not to be named, some other industry players say that commissions can range between 16 per cent and 25 per cent, and these keep changing depending on the value of the order.

That's why premium players are also creating their own delivery systems.

While ITC has partnered with Swiggy, Zomato and EazyDiner, it also has its own app. This is especially beneficial for locations that are beyond the periphery of its delivery partners and it allows ITC to make deliveries up to 22-30 km.

Marriott is working on expanding MoW's reach to more cities and plans to have the exercise completed by later this year. "While developing our own app is not part of an immediate plan, we do have a web-based platform, marriottbonvoyasia.com, through which people can avail of the home delivery service," Kapadia says. Tham shares, "Last month, close to 40 per cent of orders came from our own website."

The other side

For delivery partners, meanwhile, such tie-ups have proved sweet. While Swiggy had started to talk about tie-ups with premium outlets before the pandemic, the lockdown pushed the number of such collaborations to over 3,000.

"This partnership has also supported luxury hotels to access and acquire a new set of consumers through Swiggy, while catering to their existing customer base with home deliveries," says a Swiggy spokesperson.

Home-delivered meals from five-stars are also cheaper by 15 to 20 per cent as compared to eating at the destination outside.

Zomato, which has partnerships with establishments like Marriott, ITC Hotels, IHG, Hyatt, Accor, Hilton, Radisson, The Park, Sarovar Group, The Leela, and many others, says food delivery has emerged as an important part of every restaurant's service portfolio. Hotels, restaurants and delivery partners both agree that this is a long-term tie-up, but these big brands are also looking for exclusive tie-ups with other delivery partners.

For instance, Delhi-headquartered Pidge, which has been working with premium brands for long, is convinced that niche players like themselves are more suited to deliver the experience that these premium brands promise.

"Businesses that are listed on such food aggregator platforms either have to pay hefty commissions, which eat into their margins, or settle with reduced independence and control over their own brand recognition and identity," says Ratnesh Verma, founder and leader, Pidge. Pidge has partnerships with luxury hotel chains such as Taj Hotels, Radisson Hotels and Meridian Hotels. It also delivers for some cloud kitchens in the luxury space, such as Dinner Box, across the Delhi National Capital Region.

The culinary cosmos is clearly expanding with fine dining moving out of its confines.

A tour of China's space station

DEVANGSHU DATTA
New Delhi, 20 June

REUTERS

China's establishment of a permanently crewed space station and the successful docking of the first three-person crew last week propels it into the league of space superpowers. Unlike the International Space Station (ISS), China's Tiangong space station was designed and constructed by a single national space agency.

Given multi-fold advances in technology, the Tiangong is likely to be more efficient than the ISS in many respects. This was evident in the crew transfer. The flight to the station, followed by the transfer of the crew, took a total of about six hours — on average, the same process takes nearly 24 hours for the ISS. Chinese state media broadcast the whole process of launch and transfer live.

Space stations are built in modules, which can be stuck together much like gigantic high-tech Lego parts. The ISS has at least 160 modules and components, with five collaborative space agencies — the US Nasa, the European Space Agency, Russia's Roscosmos, Japan's JAXA and the Canadian Space Agency — providing different design inputs. It has a mass of more than 400 tonnes and at least six crew members in residence (there are seven beds but given shifts, more can be accommodated) at any given time. There are two major sections, one run by the Russians and the other being a collaborative effort.

The Tiangong will be much smaller. It will probably be around 80-100 tonnes in mass when completed. All operations are controlled from the Beijing Aerospace Centre. This station is actually Tiangong-3 and the culmination of a programme that started with the launch of Tiangong-1 in 2011.

Tiangong-1 was the first experimental attempt to put a crewed lab in orbit and it worked fine, with three crewed missions including female astronauts. Tiangong-2 was a space laboratory. Both earlier versions have been decommissioned and helped China perfect automated docking procedures.

Unlike the International Space Station, China's Tiangong space station was designed and constructed by a single national space agency

The station orbits in low-Earth orbit between 340 and 450 km, much the same orbital distance as the ISS. Tiangong includes a core cabin module, Tianhe, which has living quarters for three crew members, and includes guidance and navigation controls. This module also has the power, propulsion and life support systems as well as the docking hub.

There is a robotic arm of Canadian design, for external work, and a backup arm is placed with one of the two other laboratory modules, Wentian and Mengtian. These two extra labs will also have additional navigation avionics and propulsion control as backup functions. All three modules have pressurised environments, allowing crew to move around without suits. Every waste product is recycled as well.

The power mainly comes from solar panels, with rocket fuel flown up from Earth and stored for the propulsion systems. Tiangong, like the ISS, will have to make constant little course corrections to avoid being hit by debris. There is a rocket with a space habitat docked there for emergency evacuation in case of a meteor strike or any disaster.

Experiments miles above Earth

Apart from demonstrating the ability to keep people alive and healthy for extended periods in a hostile environment, space stations can also conduct experiments that simply cannot be done, except in space.

Gravity is lower there, at around 90 per cent of Earth surface levels. But since the space station is continuously in motion, everything in it is actually in a state of freefall, which effectively makes it a micro-gravity environment.

We don't know many things about the way human, plant and animal bio-systems respond to microgravity and varying gravity, so that in itself is a vast experiment with many ingenious scientists trying to figure out how various things function in such conditions. For example, there is an experiment designed to see how cancer cells respond to this environment. Presumably like the ISS, there will also be attempts to grow various plants, culture bacteria, etc.

Apart from this, we don't fully understand the dynamics of fluid flows in microgravity, etc. In addition, the radiation is much higher there than under the protective umbrella of the atmosphere. This, too, is potentially lethal and certainly worth studying since Mars and the Moon are both high-radiation environments. Experiments may be done externally to test for responses to cosmic rays, solar winds (energised particles flowing from the sun) and hard vacuum as well.

It isn't yet clear what the scope of Chinese experimentation will be, and they may add modules as time goes by. Tiangong is expected to host experiments from Belgium, France, Germany, India, Italy, Japan, Kenya, the Netherlands, Mexico, Peru, Russia, Saudi Arabia and Spain in addition to the China experiments. China also says it's open to foreign crew members.

India's hope of home in the skies

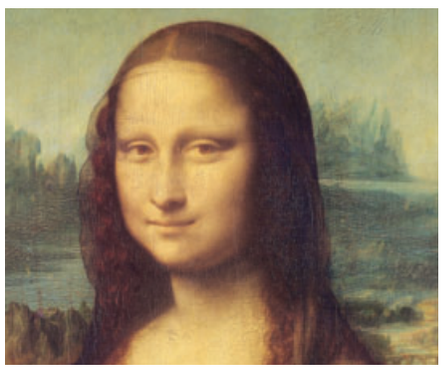

THE BIGGEST JUMP IN technologies required to sustain a successful space station is perhaps in the realm of the biological.

The Indian Space Research Organisation (Isro) announced in 2019 that it would put up a space station as part of the Gaganyaan programme. This would be a small 20-tonne module. Isro already has a grasp of most of the technologies required to build and launch a space station into orbit. But it will take five to seven years to develop the expertise required to keep humans healthy under such conditions and to train astronauts to live there.

Why people want Bezos to eat Mona Lisa

An online petition that started as a joke has gone viral, becoming a kind of performance art piece all of its own

ANNA P KAMBHAMPATY
20 June

In order to "imagine a new art, one must break the ancient art", the French author Marcel Schwob wrote more than 100 years ago. Today, that call to action has been boldly made in the form of a Change.org petition demanding that Jeff Bezos buy and eat the Mona Lisa.

The petition, which at press time had over 10,500 signatures, was started by Kane Powell, a resident of Stevensville, Maryland. "Nobody has eaten the mona lisa and we feel jeff bezos needs to take a stand and make this happen," his petition reads.

Powell isn't wrong, in a matter of fact: Since it was painted by Leonardo da Vinci in the early 1500s, people have stolen the Mona Lisa, copied the Mona Lisa and thrown a teacup at the Mona Lisa — but no one has ever eaten it.

Powell came up with the idea for the petition — which, to be clear, is a joke — while at an Applebee's with his fiancée and two friends before the pandemic. The four had dinner and started ordering from the $1 drink menu, and that's when the ingenuity started to flow. "Jeff Bezos was in the news at the time," Powell said. "We were like, 'what if he bought it and ate it?' It would be stupid and outlandish."

Only in the past week or so has the petition gained any sort of traction. Powell said that he'd long forgotten that he had even made it.

Sophie Grange, the deputy director of communication at the Louvre, where the Mona Lisa is on permanent display, said in an email: "We have seen the petition but the Musée du Louvre will not comment."

In his call to action, Powell is making a statement about the absurdity of massive amounts of accumulated wealth, as well as the bizarreness of the internet era. "We all know that Bezos has more money than needed," Powell said. "It'd just be amusing to have a person of that kind of power be funny with their money because, let's be honest, they don't need it, and I think it would just be entertainment."

It's an interesting thought experiment.

Bezos, the Amazon founder, has a net worth upward of $200 billion. In 1962, according to Guinness World Records, the Mona Lisa was assessed at $100 million, then "the highest known insurance valuation for a painting". In today's dollars, that would roughly translate to over $850 million. Though Bezos could theoretically afford it, the Mona Lisa isn't for sale, and France likely wouldn't be willing to give it up.

"As a general rule, the French Heritage Code states that works in French national collections (eg, the Louvre) are deemed to be French national treasures. Other provisions of French law provide that national treasures are inalienable," Stephen Urice, the director of the arts law track, University of Miami School of Law, said in an email.

In his call to action, Powell is making a statement about the absurdity of massive amounts of accumulated wealth, as well as the bizarreness of the internet era

Even if the Mona Lisa were sold for $60 billion (as the French tech executive Stephane Distinguin has advocated), Bezos could still theoretically afford it. Eating it might prove more difficult but it would really depend on Bezos' stomach.

"You might get indigestion, but there is nothing stopping you under US law from eating the Mona Lisa if you own it," said Amy Adler, an art law expert and professor at the New York University School of Law. "We only protect works for the life of the artist, with a few minor exceptions, but that's basically the rule under the Visual Artists Rights Act."

In France, droits moraux, or "moral rights," would typically protect an artwork from such an act. "Moral rights protect artists from the alteration, mutilation, or harm to their works that would be damaging to their reputation," said Urice. But Leonardo da Vinci's works aren't covered by them, he added.

रिक्षावाले मेटाकुटीस; दीड हजारांचे अनुदास मिळवण्यास तांत्रिक अडचणी

ठाणे, दि. २०, (प्रतिनिधी) : कोरोनाच्या निर्बंधामुळे आर्थिक संकटात सापडलेल्या रिक्षाचालकांना राज्य सरकारने दीड हजाराची आर्थिक मदत जाहीर केली असली तरी त्यासाठी रिक्षाचालकांना ऑनलाइन अर्ज करणे आवश्यक आहे. मात्र हा अर्ज करताना रिक्षाचालकांना अडचणी येत असून या अडचणींबाबत नुकतीच रिक्षा संघटनांचे पदाधिकारी आणि आरटीओ अधिकाऱ्यांची ठाणे आरटीओ कार्यालयात बैठक पार पडली.

या बैठकीमध्ये अडचणींबाबत चर्चाही झाली. कोरोनाचा वाढता प्रादुर्भाव रोखण्यासाठी सरकारने लॉकडाउनचा निर्णय घेतला. परंतु हा लॉकडाउन हातावर पोट असणाऱ्यांसाठी मोठा अडचणीचा ठरला. त्यामुळे गरिबांना गहू, तांदूळ अशा अन्नधान्यासह आर्थिक मदत देण्याचा निर्णय सरकारने घेतला. यापैकी काही घटकांच्या बँक खात्यात दीड हजार रुपये देण्याचे ठरवले आहे. यामुळे ठाणे आरटीओतील परवानाधारक सुमारे ८५ हजार रिक्षाचालकांना फायदा होणार आहे. मात्र बहुतांशी रिक्षाचालक हा फायदा घेण्यासाठी फारसे उत्सुक नाहीत. आर्थिक मदत जाहीर झाल्यापासून अवघ्या नऊ हजार रिक्षाचालकांनी अनुदानाची प्रक्रिया पूर्ण केल्याची माहिती आरटीओ सूत्रांनी दिली.

अनुदान मिळविण्यासाठी रिक्षाचालकांना ऑनलाइन अर्ज करणे आवश्यक आहे. ऑनलाइन अर्जाची प्रक्रिया सुरू झाली आहे. मात्र अर्ज करताना रिक्षाचालकांना काही अडचणी येऊ लागल्या आहेत. याबाबत नुकतीच उप प्रादेशिक परिवहन अधिकारी यांच्या दालनामध्ये आरटीओ अधिकारी आणि रिक्षा संघटनांचे पदाधिकारी यांची एक बैठक पार पडली. या बैठकीमध्ये उप प्रादेशिक परिवहन अधिकारी जयंतकुमार पाटील यांच्यासह इतर अधिकारी तसेच ठाण्यातील विविध रिक्षा संघटनांचे पदाधिकारी उपस्थित होते.

प्रामुख्याने रिक्षाचालकांना आधारकार्डवर लिंक असलेला मोबाइल क्रमांक आणि बँक खात्याचा मोबाइल क्रमांक यात तफावत असणे, काही महिला रिक्षाचालकांचे बँक खाते नसणे, काही महिला रिक्षाचालकांचे लग्नाआधीचे नाव आणि लग्नानंतरचे नाव भिन्न असणे यामुळे अर्ज सादर करता येत नाही. ज्या रिक्षा परवानाधारकांना जुन्या अभिलेखानुसार मॅन्युअल रिक्षा परवाने जारी करण्यात आले आहेत, त्यांच्या परवान्यांचा अभिलेख संगणकीय अभिलेखावर अद्ययावत करण्यात आलेला नाही. परिणामी ऑनलाइन अर्ज भरताना अडचणी येत असल्याचे रिक्षाचालकांचे म्हणणे आहे. मंगळवारी झालेल्या बैठकीच्या वेळी एकता रिक्षा चालक मालक संघटना, शिवप्रेरणा रिक्षा चालक मालक संघटना, विजू नाटेकर रिक्षा टॅक्सी चालक मालक युनियन, न्यू संघर्ष रिक्षा टॅक्सी संघटना, काँग्रेस रिक्षा टॅक्सी युनियन, लोकहितवादी रिक्षा टॅक्सी संघटना आदी रिक्षा संघटनांचे प्रतिनिधी उपस्थित होते.
