Gym workouts turn into high-stakes fitness races

RANJITA GANESAN
Mumbai, 10 April

In what could be called a “workout-cation”, Ashu Jain will fly from Dehradun to Bengaluru for her first fitness race this April. Since January this year, the 58-year-old has blocked her calendar, tracked macronutrients, and started simulated trials for Hyrox, a race that combines running with eight functional workout movements.

“It is a lot like preparing for an exam,” says Jain, who earned a PhD from IIT Delhi in her 50s, and has now set sights on the Hyrox finishing line. At ₹60,000 for event tickets, travel, and gear, the exam is stretching Jain’s budget and muscles alike.

Ever since races such as Hyrox and Yoddha launched in India last year, gym goers with a competitive streak have been signing up to sprint, lunge, and burpee their way to a personal record. Sporting experiences are already boosting discovery of services in the fitness space such as specialised coaching subscriptions, and products, including active footwear and apparel. Event organisers are betting on growing access to and awareness about foundational fitness — recent estimates put the number of gyms in the country at about 200,000 — and a thirst for experiences among those with the propensity to spend.

“Gym is the first thing people do to get fit, not cricket or tennis. But the gym-going public never had a clear, quantifiable goal they could chase,” says Deepak Raj, coach and CEO of Yoska, which brought the German-origin Hyrox, and the Ironman triathlon before that, to India. Raj competed at Hyrox in Vienna and found the format lets people measure their performance in eight workstations, the running track, and overall circuit. Compared with 1,350 at Hyrox’s India debut last year, registrations have swelled to 8,200 for the Bengaluru fixture, now a two-day event. Though races happen in metro cities, racers are attending from smaller towns and overseas, too.

Besides giving people key result areas to meet outside the office, the races help them find belonging, and show off their wins online. Zeba Zaidi, cofounder of Spectacom Global, an early mover in this space, observes: “The experiences are built around the idea of how to make the day extra special

Yoddha, launched by Spectacom in 2025, combines running and strength exercises

Muscle might

- Fitness, workouts becoming ticketed events
- Participants spending big on entry, travel, gear, coaching
- Registrations surge with growing interest beyond metro cities
- Races offer clear measurable goals for gym-goers
- Brands, gyms, and event companies building a full-stack ecosystem and difficult to recreate. They give people brag-worthy moments where they’ve won a medal, or had a great Sunday, or met someone interesting.”

Spectacom launched Yoddha, which combines running and strength exercises, in 2025, but its obstacle race, Devil’s Circuit, has wooed fitness enthusiasts since 2012. Zaidi’s race concepts — where women and men participate in equal numbers — include surprise elements, a concert stage, brand drops, and food.

Unlike marathons, which typically attract those in their 30s and 40s, at these newer events, which are open to anyone over 16, 20- to 35-year-olds are the biggest takers. “We set up the space like a studio where you can shoot the entire race. No other format, be it a marathon or triathlon, lets you follow the person you are supporting from three feet away,” says Hyrox India’s Raj. Participants often pay more to opt for official photographs to be clicked and mailed to them.

Zaidi and her husband, Adnan Adeb, organised their first obstacle race over a decade ago, because they missed similar events from their time living in Dubai.

Life turned full circle for the couple last year, when they exported Devil’s Circuit to Dubai. They plan to expand into London and Malaysia next. “At first, people were asking why they should pay just to work out so hard. That changed with Covid when we saw firsthand the effects of not focusing on health.”

Brands, from protein shakes to pain balms, are benefitting from the shift. Puma India’s head of marketing, Shreya Sachdev, expects social activities with a fitness angle to rise further, particularly among young couples and families. Half of those racing in Bengaluru this April will likely sport Puma’s bright pink Hyrox-branded shoes, which retail at over ₹20,000.

Gyms are seeing potential, too. Coaching couple Tom Saxena and Vidushi Kumar have had podium finishes at both Hyrox and Yoddha. Clients at CalFunc, their calisthenics and functional fitness chain, are increasingly registering for high-priced event-specific training. Since working on the same eight movements can be repetitive, Saxena is considering mini fitness events at his venues, with rock climbing and games thrown in. “When people see improvements, a competitive switch is turned on and they want to be in every race that exists,” he says.

That rhymes with Jain’s experience. After Hyrox in Bengaluru, she plans to travel to Delhi for Devil’s Circuit and Yoddha, and run more half marathons. “I started strength training four years ago because I could not walk more than 2 km. I can do 10 km now,” says the grandmother-turned-fitness influencer. “Once you have developed the capability, you have to maintain it.”

Treatment to trend: Slimming drug boom sparks misuse concerns

SOHINI DAS
Mumbai, 10 April

The surge in weight-loss injections across India, particularly among young women chasing rapid slimming ahead of weddings or other special events, is raising alarm among doctors, who are calling for tighter medical oversight as cheaper semaglutide generics expand access to GLP-1 therapies and heighten concerns over cosmetic misuse.

The fast-growing GLP-1 market, propelled by lower-cost generics following patent expiry, is widening availability beyond patients with obesity and diabetes — but also driving unsupervised, appearance-led demand, according to doctors. BNP Paribas estimates the market at around ₹1,000 crore, with strong growth expected as prices fall, though adoption remains concentrated in tier-1 and tier-2 cities.

The lapse of Novo Nordisk’s semaglutide patent has triggered one of the most crowded drug rollouts in India’s recent pharmaceutical history. More than 40-50 branded generics are

Disciplined scaling

What studies suggest

■ A 2024 study in The Lancet EClinicalMedicine highlights the rapid global adoption of GLP-1 receptor agonists, emphasising the need for robust long-term safety monitoring, especially as use expands beyond clinical obesity

■ A 2024 analysis in The Lancet Diabetes & Endocrinology finds that Asian populations face metabolic risks at lower BMI levels than Western populations, underscoring the importance of physician-led screening and careful patient selection in countries like India expected, with prices 50-90 per cent lower than innovator levels. Some Indian versions are now priced from about ₹1,290 per month, a fraction of earlier costs.

Dr Shashank Shah, a bariatric surgeon at Apollo Spectra Hospital in Pune, said falling prices and social media are accelerating demand, especially among younger women seeking rapid results. While these drugs — many originally developed for diabetes — can suppress appetite and support weight management, he cautioned they are not universally appropriate and require careful evaluation of body composition, health status and underlying causes of weight gain. Side effects such as nausea, dizziness, indigestion, fatigue and constipation are common, he added, stressing that sustainable weight control still depends on diet, exercise, sleep and stress management.

Dr Aparna Govil Bhasker, consultant bariatric surgeon at MetaHeal Clinic and Namaha Hospitals in Mumbai, underscored that GLP-1 therapies are prescription medicines designed to treat obesity as a disease, not tools for cosmetic slimming. They are typically indicated for patients with a BMI above 30, or above 27 with related co-morbidities, and require ongoing monitoring as they can alter diabetes and hypertension treatment needs. “They are not meant for cosmetic weight loss. Indiscriminate use can lead to complications,” she said.

Dr Bhasker warned that misuse may result in gastrointestinal distress, nutritional deficiencies, muscle loss, gallstones and, in rare cases, pancreatitis. She pointed to mounting social pressure, particularly around weddings, as a key driver, with unrealistic beauty standards, amplified by social media, pushing women towards short-term medical fixes.

Meta tightens content norms for teenagers on Instagram

AASHISH ARYAN
New Delhi, 10 April

Meta-owned image and video-sharing platform Instagram has announced that its updated age-appropriate content ratings and limited content settings will now be available in India for children aged 13 and above. The feature was initially rolled out in the United States, the United Kingdom, Australia and Canada.

The updated content settings will mean that teenagers in India will be able to view only content similar to what they would likely see in an age-appropriate movie. All users under 18 will be placed in this category going forward, and will not be able to change the settings without parental permission, Meta said in a blog post.

“Just like you might see some suggestive content or hear some strong language in a movie rated for ages 13+, teens may occasionally see something like that on Instagram, but we’re going to keep doing all we can to keep those instances as rare as possible. We recognise no system is perfect, and we’re committed to improving over time,” Meta said.

Additionally, teenagers will not be able to follow accounts that regularly share content deemed inappropriate for users under 18. Accounts indicating such content through their name or bio will also be restricted.

Isro conducts second integrated air drop test for Gaganyaan

Space agency Indian Space Research Organisation (Isro) has successfully conducted the second integrated air drop test (IADT-02) for the upcoming Gaganyaan mission at the space station in Andhra Pradesh’s Sriharikota.

The system is essential to ensure safe recovery of the crew module — the capsule in which astronauts sit during a human flight — during re-entry and landing.

Union Minister Jitendra Singh congratulated the Indian Space Research Organisation (Isro) for successfully conducting the test.

The IADT-02 follows the successful completion of the first IADT, which took place on August 24, 2025 at the Satish Dhawan Space Centre in Sriharikota. Air drop tests recreate the last leg of a spacecraft’s return to the Earth. An aircraft or helicopter drops the spacecraft from a height to test various systems under different scenarios. PTI
