Cement capacity buildup risks surplus supply

Expansion may outpace demand, putting pressure on prices

PRACHI PISAL
Mumbai, 15 September

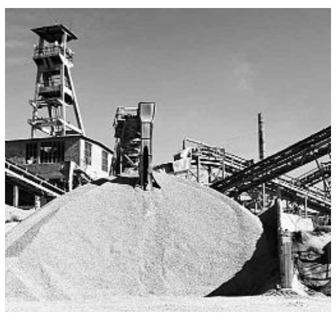
India's cement industry is likely to see capacity additions outpace demand growth over the next two financial years, raising the risk of lower utilisation and pricing pressure in the near term. Utilisation, though, is expected to remain above its long-term average, limiting the risk of a severe industry-wide oversupply. Faster supply growth may keep a lid on stock prices even as the Nifty Cement index is at a three-month low, unless companies post faster earnings growth.

Installed grinding capacity of the domestic cement industry stood at an estimated 720-730 million tonnes (mt) as of March 2026, according to Anand Kulkarni, director at Crisil Ratings. The industry added around 55 mt of capacity in 2025-26 (FY26), while another 115-125 mt is expected to be added over 2026-27 (FY27) and 2027-28 (FY28), he said.

Cement volumes grew at a compound annual growth rate of 5.5-6 per cent between 2024-25 (FY25) and FY26, broadly matching effective capacity additions and keeping utilisation at around 70 per cent, similar to FY25, according to Crisil. With capacity additions expected to outpace demand in FY27 and FY28, utilisation could moderate to 68-69 per cent.

"Cement capacity additions tend to be chunky because of long gestation periods, and large additions may lead to demand-supply imbalance in the short term," Kulkarni said. Over the medium term, demand and supply growth are expected to remain balanced, he added.

Mohit Kapoor, associate director, investment banking, at Equirus Capital, expects cement demand to grow 7-8 per cent over the next two to three years, slightly ahead of gross domestic product growth, while capacity is expected to increase by 8-9 per cent annually. Industry capacity utilisation, currently around 69 per cent, could decline by 100-150 basis points over the next two to three financial years, he said.



Taking stock

- Supply growth set to outrun demand through FY28
- Utilisation seen easing to 68-69%, still above the 10-year average of 65%
- Top five players' capacity to hit 580-590 mtpa by FY28
- North India's capacity to jump 38%, adding nearly 50 mt by FY28

Even then, utilisation would remain above the 10-year rolling average of around 65 per cent. "There are (cost) pressures, especially on the fuel side. Supply growth is expected to exceed demand growth in the near term, which could result in some pricing pressure," he said.

The expansion is also increasingly concentrated among larger players. According to Akshay R Shetty, research analyst at Mirae Asset Sharekhan, the top five cement companies are expected to have a combined capacity of 465-470 million tonnes per annum (mtpa) in FY26, rising to 580-590 mtpa by FY28.

Cement companies, however, remain confident about demand growth and capacity utilisation.

Jayakumar Krishnaswamy, managing director of Nuvoco Vistas, said in an interaction with Business Standard earlier in July that while almost every cement company had announced aggressive expansion plans about a year ago, the industry has since adopted a more realistic outlook. "The industry's expansion plans reflect that long-term confidence rather than short-term demand fluctuations," he said.

Atul Daga, chief financial officer of UltraTech Cement, during the company's FY27 first-quarter (April-June/Q1) earnings call in July, said, "Demand remains strong. The challenge will be that we don't have capacity. We have to expand."

Vinod Bahety, whole-time director and chief executive officer of Ambuja Cements, said India's long-term demand fundamentals remained compelling, supported by infrastructure, urbanisation, industrialisation, logistics investments, and housing demand.

According to Ambuja Cements' Q1 FY27 investor presentation and the company's internal analysis, the industry capacity is estimated to be at 958 million tonnes against the demand of 621 million tonnes by FY30. The company estimates FY26 industry capacity at 751 million tonnes and demand at 474 million tonnes.

Analysts believe that regional markets could see differing impacts. Kapoor expects North, West, and Central India to face weaker utilisation over the next two to three years. Maximum capacity additions are expected in the North, followed by the South and East, while demand growth is expected to be relatively stronger in the East and South-East, he said.

RERA OR CONSUMER COURT

Homebuyers should choose complaint forum carefully

SANJEEV SINHA

Homebuyers in delayed or stalled projects can seek relief under the Real Estate (Regulation and Development) Act, 2016 (Rera), and the Consumer Protection Act. A recent National Consumer Disputes Redressal Commission (NCDRC) ruling shows why their choice matters. The NCDRC rejected a complaint seeking a refund already granted by Karnataka Rera in Nikhil Mehta & Anr vs Gardenview Abode Pvt Ltd & Ors, bringing the doctrine of election into focus.

Implications of ruling
On March 5, 2026, the Supreme Court held in Kabra and Associates & Ors vs Rekha Rajkumar Hemdev & Ors that buyers who pursue Rera cannot later approach a consumer commission for the same cause.

"The ruling, based on the 'doctrine of election', reinforces that buyers cannot pursue parallel remedies or switch forums after choosing one for the same dispute. The recent NCDRC ruling follows the same principle," says Adnan Siddiqui, partner, King Stubb & Kasiva, Advocates and Attorneys.

Doctrine of election: Meaning
A party that pursues one remedy generally cannot switch later to the other. "Homebuyers cannot use both forums simultaneously or switch forums simply because the first remedy is slower or less satisfactory. Once a Rera order attains finality, the same dispute generally cannot be reopened before another forum," says Siddiqui.

In Imperia Structures Ltd vs Anil Patni (2020), the Supreme Court held that Rera does not bar consumer fora: Section 79 bars only civil courts, while Section 88 provides that Rera remedies are in addition to other legal remedies. However, the Court reaffirmed the doctrine of election in Ireo Grace Realtech vs Abhishek Khanna (2021) and Kabra and Associates & Ors vs Rekha Rajkumar Hemdev & Ors.

Once Rera orders a refund with interest, a buyer may struggle to claim additional compensation from a consumer commission for the same default, even if the compensation is for mental agony, litigation costs, rental expenses, or other losses.

"A buyer should avoid duplicating the same claim before both forums. Switching, or pursuing parallel proceedings, can lead to objections based on election of remedies and multiplicity of litigation," says Piyush Kumar Ray, associate partner, Aquilaw.

How to choose a forum?
Match the forum to the nature of the grievance and the relief sought. Rera may be suitable for cases of delayed possession, refunds, project completion and statutory interest. Consumer commissions are better suited for issues like deficient service, unfair practices and consequential damages.

"Buyers should also consider limitation, enforcement, cost and likely duration. Consumer complaints generally have a two-year limitation period, while Rera does not prescribe a specific limitation period under Section 31," says Ray.

Assess the relief sought and practical enforceability before choosing a forum, as switching later may not be possible.

Typical mistakes

- Pursuing same relief before multiple forums can trigger doctrine of election
- Seeking possession in one forum and refund in another can weaken case
- Enforce a favourable order rather than filing a fresh case for same relief
- Insolvency proceedings should not be used as a debt-recovery tool
- Do not hide previous complaints and orders

Source: BMR Legal

If developer defaults on refund
If a developer ignores a Rera refund order, pursue its enforcement instead of restarting the dispute in another forum.

"Section 40 of Rera provides an enforcement mechanism. The Supreme Court's Newtech Promoters judgement clarified that refund and interest can be recovered as arrears of land revenue. The buyer can seek execution of the Rera order and issuance of a recovery certificate for action by the revenue authorities," says Shankey Agrawal, partner, BMR Legal.

If enforcement fails, supervisory or constitutional remedies may be considered. Difficulty in enforcement does not entitle a buyer to seek the same refund before a consumer commission.

Can buyers change the remedy sought?
A buyer may switch from seeking possession to seeking refund if the former becomes unrealistic. Section 18 allows an allottee to exit a delayed project and seek a refund with interest. Changing relief in an ongoing case differs from switching forums, which can trigger the doctrine of election. "If a project stalls or the developer's financial position deteriorates, place the new developments before the existing forum and seek appropriate relief rather than restart the same dispute elsewhere," says Agrawal.

Be prepared to explain source of fund or risk tax scrutiny

A bank deposit may look like an ordinary transaction, but it can become a tax headache years later if you cannot establish where the money came from.

A recent Income Tax Appellate Tribunal (ITAT) case involving an 83-year-old woman highlights the importance of maintaining a clear financial trail. The taxpayer had not filed an income tax return. The assessing officer treated a ₹2.42 lakh credit, ₹1.06 lakh in cash deposits and ₹1.50 lakh as estimated regular income. The taxpayer later produced bank records showing that the ₹2.42 lakh was the maturity proceeds of a ₹2 lakh fixed deposit (FD) made earlier. Earlier cash withdrawals of ₹2.45 lakh also helped explain the ₹1.06 lakh cash deposits. The ITAT deleted all three additions, finding that the estimated income had no proper supporting basis. The case shows that a deposit is not necessarily taxable simply because it appears in a bank account. What matters is whether its source can be satisfactorily explained.

What taxpayers should keep:

- Bank statements and passbooks for the relevant period
- FD receipts, maturity and renewal records
- Records of earlier withdrawals
- Pension and income records
- Documents supporting sale, gift or succession proceeds
- Cash book to establish the movement of cash
- Copies of relevant tax forms and supporting documents
