Banking will go all digital in 10 years: Vaghul

bl interview

Hamsini Karthik
Mumbai

From Indira Gandhi's doodling as a meeting to discuss issues based by the banking industry to how various powerful Ministers at the Centre and State tried to influence decisions at public sector banks, Narayanan Vaghul's book, Reflections, is full of interesting and hilarious anecdotes that give a glimpse into the functioning of India's banking sector after its dependence.

In these edited excerpts, the 90-year-old veteran banker tries to understand how he perceives the banking sector today. Vaghul is optimistic that banking will increase high-tech and digital, model in a decade from now and professionals and professionally managed boards would increase in the boards of the sector. Excerpts:

How do you see the future of the banking sector?

You cannot just suppose the present with the future, which is going to be very different from today. The speed with which things are getting transformed, banking in 10 years time will be digital. It will be fintech-oriented. Loans will be granted online. One of the reasons why I did not continue in the Piramal board, though could have continued for one more year, is because I didn't understand the language.

My language became irrelevant. People speak a new language, new terminology. The sinew way people of this generation in the next decade will be banking very differently. We are not lagging in technology.

These days we would go abroad and just look at the ATM machines. Today, it is not like that we are leading in the space with cutting edge of technology.

> Corporates will not be dominating banks. It will be professionals dominating the sector
> NARAYANAN VAGHUL
> Veteran Banker

Do you use UPI, digital banking?

Naturally. I use it in everything that I do. Because ICICI Bank is the one that I use. I use I-Mobile, make all payments through that.

There's a question about the need for privatisation in your book, and the government is in the process of privatising IDBI Bank. Are the right steps being taken?

ICICI Bank, HDFC Bank and Axis Bank are the largest private sector banks, and the characteristics of these banks are that they are public-owned and more professionally managed. Management roles are not by inheritance but by selection.

There are the characteristics I think which we have to import. We should really divide this space into three – one is the state-owned, the other is public-owned, which is the likes of HDFC Bank, and the third is the private sector, where the likes of Sandeep Bakshi, N S Kannan, Sandeep Batra, V Vaidyanathan, Kalpana Morparia and Shikha Sharma, and all of them of we are thrilled to be there to listen to hear their guru.

ASSET QUALITY

What Vaghul is equally pleased and amazed with is the asset quality of the Indian banking system. "See what has happened at ICICI Bank. It [net NPA ratio] is at 0.48 per cent. I can't believe that. We could never have dreamt of those numbers. That is an issue about is great," he said, while explaining the reasons for his optimism about the health of the banking sector.

At this juncture, he believes there is nothing as a pain to the asset quality in the system as such. "There is systemic stability, and there is nothing to worry about."

How do you see the future of the banking sector?

You cannot just suppose the present with the future, which is going to be very different from today. The speed with which things are getting transformed, banking in 10 years time will be digital. It will be fintech-oriented. Loans will be granted online. One of the reasons why I did not continue in the Piramal board, though could have continued for one more year, is because I didn't understand the language.

My language became irrelevant. People speak a new language, new terminology. The sinew way people of this generation in the next decade will be banking very differently. We are not lagging in technology.

These days we would go abroad and just look at the ATM machines. Today, it is not like that we are leading in the space with cutting edge of technology.

development happens by way of succession, which is quite normal there. I want more people in the middle space.

Ultimately [in privatisation], you are looking for the bidder. For that first you have to strengthen the bank by having a proper board and by a proper chief executive to lend credibility in the market.

Once you lend credibility to the market, you don't need to sell the bank to anybody. They will approach funds.

You also talk about building a fund to pump capital into banks...

That has all because mandated. Today, what is really happening is that if you have a good management team that is prominent, then it is simple to raise money from the public. We don't need to have a fund or anything.

Today, capital adequacy is 18-19 per cent and 99 per cent of it has not been contributed by anybody. It is raised from the public. That is the only way in which we could contribute to trade, that we are sure where is sound money and sound hand. That is the way of safeguarding the interests of shareholders. That is the way in which the country should go forward.

The standards of corporate governance has increased in India Inc. Does it set a positive premise for them to get into the banking space?

Corporates will not be dominating banks. It will be professionals dominating the sector. For diversified public holding, what the public would want first is professionals boards and approaches of selection rather than by succession. This manners a lot of difference. So, that's the way forward in the next 10 years.

'Banking in India is by far the best globally'

Hamsini Karthik
Mumbai

As a banker since 1955, who has seen the nationalisation of banks, liberalisation of policies and now digitalisation of the economy, Narayanan Vaghul reckons that India's banking sector has moved ahead of the rest of the world.

"Today, banking in India is by far the best in the world I can say," Vaghul told Business Line on the sidelines of the launch of his book, Reflections.

"Overall, I find that the banking which we did was very simple and nothing very romantic about it. But today, the language is different, the process is different, and there's very high use of technology.

"The current digital banking has no boundaries. All these things make banking reach a common man. I'm just amazed that I'm living through it's."

Reflections is a collection of anecdotes that offers more than a glimpse into the visionary leadership and generosity of the veteran banker. In it he was privileged to have been part of, events that he had pre-empted years before they occurred, and processes that have unfolded as a result of course — these went on to become everything that is strong and sustainable in the Indian financial sector today.

The book launch event was graced by Finance Minister Nirmala Sitharaman, who called him a big inspiration and motivation for her family. The grand auditorium was filled with the doyens of the ICICI Group, both past and present, such as Sandeep Bakshi, N S Kannan, Sandeep Batra, V Vaidyanathan, Kalpana Morparia and Shikha Sharma, and all of them of we are thrilled to be there to listen to hear their guru.

REFLECTIONS. Finance Minister Nirmala Sitharaman, along with veteran banker Narayanan Vaghul, during the launch of the latter's book, in Mumbai, on Friday.

Google pays entire penalty of ₹1,337.76 cr imposed by CCI

KR Srivats
New Delhi

In a significant move, Google has paid the entire penalty amount of ₹1,337.76 crore imposed by the Competition Commission of India (CCI) in its October 20 ruling last year in the Android case.

The entire penalty amount has been deposited in the Consolidated Fund of India within the thirty-day time period stipulated by the National Company Law Appellate Tribunal (NCLAT), said sources familiar with the development.

It may be recalled that NCLAT had, on March 29, upheld the penalty of ₹1,337.76 crore imposed by the CCI on Google for its anti-competitive conduct in the Android ecosystem.

The NCLAT Bench comprising Ashok Bhushan, Chairperson, and Alok Srivastava, Member (Technical), had, in its 169-page order, given 30 days time for the tech giant to pay the fine and implement the order.

The NCLAT order also brought some partial victory for the tech giant with four of the 10 non-monetary conditions imposed by the CCI getting set aside by the Appellate Tribunal.

The four directions set aside related to allowing users to uninstall the pre-loaded apps, allowing sideloaded apps, sharing of APIs, and allowing of third-party app stores in Play Store.

The NCLAT had set aside the CCI's direction on allowing third-party app stores in Play Store.

The CCI's direction to allow the uninstallation of Google apps was also set aside. Further, the CCI directions to Google to give its API to third-party was also set aside.

Swiggy charges ₹2 platform fee for food orders in 3 cities

Yatti Soni
Bengaluru

Food delivery major Swiggy has started charging ₹2 platform fee on food orders in Bengaluru, Hyderabad and Chennai. However, the platform fee is not applicable on Swiggy's grocery delivery service, Instamart.

Interestingly, this platform fee is applicable for Swiggy One users as well. Swiggy One is a paid membership programme that offers benefits across Swiggy Instamart, food delivery, Dineout and Swiggy Genie.

Commenting on this decision to charge platform fee, a Swiggy spokesperson said: "The platform fee is a nominal flat fee charged on food orders. This fee helps us operate and improve our platform and enhance app features to deliver a seamless app experience."

While the spokesperson did not comment on the number of cities where the platform fee is being piloted, according to industries like research, the fee is not yet live in any other metro beyond Bengaluru, Hyderabad and Chennai.

Interestingly, Swiggy's competitor Zomato does not charge a platform fee as of now. This development comes at a time when growth rate for food delivery has slowed down when compared to Swiggy's projections, according to an e-mail sent by Sriharsha Majety, Swiggy CEO, to employees earlier this year.

Zomato, too, said in February that food delivery business has slowed down after Diwali (October), and that growth in key metrics has also been muted. In Q3, Zomato reported a 0.7 per cent jump sequentially in the gross order value of its food business.

More than 90% of cabin crew, majority of pilots have accepted the new contract: Air India CEO

Forum Gandhi
New Delhi

Over 90 per cent of the cabin crew and a majority of the pilots have received and accepted the new compensation package, said Campbell Wilson, MD & CEO, Air India. This comes amid the tussle the airline is facing with its pilots.

In an internal communication on Friday, Wilson said: "I'm pleased to report that 90 per cent of cabin crew and a majority of pilots have received and accepted the new compensation package offered last week, which will be backdated to April 1, 2023."

According to sources, Air India has over 3,400 pilots and close to 6,000 cabin crew on its payroll. This number includes pilots from Air India Express as well. Last week, Business Line reported that during a town hall, the new compensation structure, contract contours and upgrades were discussed. The airline has been facing employee unrest after this.

A group of 1,900 pilots wrote a letter to Ratan Tata, Chairman Emeritus of Tata Sons, seeking his intervention. They stated that they were not being treated with respect and dignity by the HR department of the airline, which was affecting their morale. Some employees also took to Twitter to air their grievances.

Tata Sons took over the airline in January 2022 after years of the government trying to disinvest it due to mounting losses. The company has since decided to merge them into one airlines.

KEY QUESTIONS

In his internal communication, Wilson also spoke about the fact that the top management conducted a meeting with the cabin crew to discuss the Jeppesen rostering tools, which is expected to be operational in August. He said so far two interaction sessions have been conducted. These interactive sessions are to keep the crew informed of the developments, and also share with Jeppesen issues being faced by the crew.

"The key questions resolved around crew fatigue and current roster instability, rotations, duty and block times, time and golden offs, among others. Our crew ambassadors and the implementation team will continue to engage, so stay tuned for the next round of sessions," he added.

On Thursday, Air India issued an advertisement stating that it is looking to hire over 1,000 pilots. The airline has placed a record order of 470 aircraft with Boeing and Airbus to fuel its expansion plans domestically and internationally.
