RAJIV KUMAR, NON-EXECUTIVE CHAIRMAN-DESIGNATE, HDFC BANK

Himalayas can wait

THE BUREAUCRAT HDFC BANK HOPES CAN STEADY THE SHIP STEPS INTO A SEAT A 1985 BATCH IAS OFFICER JUST WALKED AWAY FROM

PRASANTA SAHU

RAJIV KUMAR HAD it all planned out in February, 2025: Four or five months in the Himalayas, he told reporters at his final press conference as Chief Election Commissioner, "to detoxify" — solitude, self-study, a clean break from public life before deciding what came next. It was the kind of line he was known for: a little poetic, a little disarming, delivered with the ease of a man who has spent four decades using charm to deflect hostile questions. The sabbatical didn't last. On Monday, HDFC Bank's board named the 66-year-old former finance secretary its part-time chairman, confirmed subject to Reserve Bank of India approval — and instead of the mountains, Kumar finds himself at the centre of corporate India's most-watched boardroom right now. The appointment follows months of governance scrutiny at the bank that culminated in his predecessor's abrupt exit earlier this year — an exit with an added layer of awkwardness, given that Atanu Chakraborty, who left in a huff, is a 1985-batch IAS officer.

Kumar's mandate, on paper, is narrow: oversight, board leadership, regulatory liaison — not running the bank day to day. In practice, his job is to make HDFC Bank's boardroom unremarkable again, restoring a sense of institutional steadiness at a time when the bank can ill afford further distraction. If anyone in India's bureaucratic class is built for the job of professional calming presence, it might be him. Kumar's résumé reads like a tour of the country's economic firefighting over the past decade. A 1984-batch IAS officer, he served as financial services secretary and then finance secretary between 2017 and 2020, a period when India's banking system was climbing out of one of its worst crises — bad loans, thin capital buffers, governance failures across public sector banks. Kumar was a principal architect of the government's "4R" framework — recognition, recapitalisation, reform — which combined a record recapitalisation exceeding ₹3 lakh crore with the consolidation of 27 state-run banks into 12. Tighter scrutiny of large loans, fraud-detection systems, and a five-fold jump in deposit insurance cover, to ₹5 lakh, all trace back to that stretch. Beyond the ministry, Kumar built an unusually wide footprint across India's financial architecture. He sat on the RBI's Central Board, the Financial Stability and Development Council, and the Bank Board

2020. It is a career built almost entirely around institutional design and oversight rather than operational management — which is, in fairness, close to the job description he has just signed up for at HDFC Bank, if not the scale of commercial risk that comes with it. That last point matters more than it might at first appear. The role he is taking on is less about managing a balance sheet than about projecting credible, independent oversight — and Kumar's most recent job offers a useful, if mixed, preview of how he handles exactly that

Bureau — the body created precisely to professionalise appointments at state-run banks — as well as on the boards of State Bank of India and NABARD. After retiring from the civil service, he briefly chaired the Public Enterprises Selection Board, the agency that vets top management for public sector undertakings, before being appointed Election Commissioner in September

2020. It is a career built almost entirely around institutional design and oversight rather than operational management — which is, in fairness, close to the job description he has just signed up for at HDFC Bank, if not the scale of commercial risk that comes with it. That last point matters more than it might at first appear. The role he is taking on is less about managing a balance sheet than about projecting credible, independent oversight — and Kumar's most recent job offers a useful, if mixed, preview of how he handles exactly that kind of scrutiny. As Chief Election Commissioner from May 2022, he oversaw the 2024 general election — by volume, the largest such exercise in the world — as well as the first Jammu and Kashmir election after the abrogation of Article 370. He also drew sustained criticism from opposition parties over the Commission's handling of complaints during the campaign. Kumar held the line publicly, insisting every decision was taken within the constitutional framework, but the criticism never fully receded — a reminder that institutional roles built around neutrality have not insulated him from accusations of falling short of it. Colleagues describe him as a hands-on administrator who does not let rank dictate how closely he gets involved — a trait that, depending on who is asked, reads as diligence or as a reluctance to delegate. He has spoken often about growing up in Kanpur, attending a municipal school, and learning the English alphabet only in Class VI — a biography he returns to often, crediting education with transforming his life and saying he hopes to teach underprivileged children at some point.

Whether HDFC Bank gains more from Kumar's regulatory fluency than it risks from a track record of presiding over institutions under public scrutiny is the question his new board — and its shareholders — will be watching most closely over the next four years. The Himalayas, for now, will have to wait.

Whether HDFC Bank gains more from Kumar's regulatory fluency than it risks from a track record of presiding over institutions under public scrutiny is the question his new board — and its shareholders — will be watching most closely over the next four years. The Himalayas, for now, will have to wait.

NEWS POINT

SHYAM KUMAR PRASAD

Germany, Netherlands humbled

SANDIP G Boston, June 30

GERMANS ARE MASTERS of penalties, especially at World Cups. They had won the last four shootouts before Paraguay's 6'6" goalkeeper Orlando Gill beat them at their own game. Gill made himself look even bigger to make two crucial saves in the tie-breaker to script a historic South American victory. The Netherlands are known to settle matters in open play. Morocco held them 1-1 for over 120 minutes, and later held their nerve to win 3-2 on penalties. The last kick of the game, a cool calculated strike to the right of the goalkeeper, was by a Moroccan who learned the tricks of the trade in the country he had just eliminated. Ismael Saibari plays for PSV Eindhoven in the Netherlands.

In a matter of hours, two European giants were on their flight home. The global football map was reshaping, and so was continental hierarchy. There was barely an element of surprise in Morocco's triumph as they are ranked above the Netherlands. Germany's exit was a bigger shock. Though a shadow of their past selves, the four-time World Champions faced a team that had not featured in this competition since 2010, and there was a 22-place gap between the teams in the FIFA rankings. Paraguay coach Gustavo Alfaro did not shy away from highlighting the contrast. "They graduate from top-tier academies. We come from the red land, playing barefoot on soil," he said after the upset of this World Cup. This was why the hero of the day for Paraguay, goalkeeper Gill, was mobbed by teammates as he stood by the corner flag with his arms spread. All through the game, he had defied the Germans, looked every bit the man who held up a roof. When it mattered the most, Gill rose. Not once, but twice. Two stunning saves to deny Kai Havertz and Nick Woltemade. The second save, in particular, was the kind that goalkeepers spend careers chasing and rarely get more than once. Two saves from four German kicks, and the door was open.

Four-time champions Germany and three-time runners-up Netherlands, both crashed out against Paraguay and Morocco respectively at the penalty shootouts in the round of 32

Paraguay could not have been closer to the finish line when the timeless Manuel Neuer nearly made the story about himself. The 40-year-old legend, a 2014 WC winner, had come up with a vintage save on the fifth Paraguayan attempt to take the game to sudden death as the scores were tied after five penalties each. Jonathan Tah, who had already had a perfectly good header chalked off by VAR in extra time, stepped up last and could have made himself the night's hero twice over, but he put the ball into the stand behind the goal. Jose Canale did not miss. Paraguay had beaten Germany at a World Cup, and the win belonged to Gill before it belonged to anyone else. Before the shootout, Paraguay sat deep, soaked up wave after wave of sterile German pressure, and waited for the one moment the game was going to offer. There was drama in extra time. In the 119th minute, Tah rose to head in a corner from Nathaniel Brown, only for the goal to be ruled out, Waldemar Anton judged to have fouled Gill in the build-up. The monitor sat wedged into a technical area so narrow the referee had to ask both benches to physically move so he could reach it. It was that kind of night, somewhere short of a classic. Two headers, the only goals from open play across two hours of football, and a shootout needed to find a winner. The goalkeeper who once sold his clothes to keep his family standing finally got his day in the sun. Germany are out, the tournament's first big casualty, but they had lost their aura long ago. The exit was merely a reflection of the rot in their once clockwork system. Paraguay are through to the last 16 on the back of a goalkeeper nobody outside Asuncion could have named a month ago.

WORLD CUP

FOOT NOTES

IN NUMBERS
Canada's progress to round of 16 has been matched by record-breaking television numbers, with an estimated 11.8 million viewers tuning in to witness their team's 1-0 win over South Africa in the first-ever round of 32 match.

Stephen Eustaquio scored for Canada

'HEAT DOME' THREAT LOOMS
Extreme heat will greet fans and players this week at the KOs, as imposing heat dome settles over US and Canada. The phenomenon is a large area of high pressure that traps heat & humidity, leading to dangerously high temperatures (40.6°C to 46.1°C)

VAR CONTROVERSY
Germany lost to Paraguay 3-4 on penalties in the round of 32 after the match ended 1-1 at extra-time. However, the talking point was the VAR controversy that denied Germany the winning goal in the 105th minute — a spectacular header by Jonathan Tah.

NEYMAR TROLLS ECONOMIST
Martinelli led Brazil to a 2-1 comeback win over Japan in the round of 32. Forward Neymar Jr. stole the spotlight when he went on to post a cheeky response on 'X' to German economist Joachim Klement, whose statistical model had predicted Japan would knock Brazil out.

RED ALERT
There have been 10 red cards so far at the ongoing FIFA World Cup, which is more than the previous two editions combined. The 2018 WC in Russia and the 2022 WC in Qatar yielded only four red cards each. —Compiled by Ankit Pattnaik
