Jaishankar, the first Indian Cabinet minister to visit the US since Joe Biden became President on January 20, met Blinken on Friday.

"Blinken welcomed Jaishankar to the Department of State, where he reaffirmed the US administration's commitment to deepening the US-India Comprehensive Global Strategic Partnership," State Department spokesperson Ned Price said after the meeting.

"Productive discussion today with Dr. S Jaishankar on regional security and economic priorities to include US Covid-19 relief efforts, India-China border situation, and our support for Afghanistan," Blinken said. "As friends, we will work together to address these areas of shared concern," Blinken said in a tweet, hours after the meeting with Jaishankar at the Foggy Bottom headquarters of the State Department.

Quad fills 'very important gap' that has emerged in contemporary times: Jaishankar

PRESS TRUST OF INDIA
Washington, May 29

THE INFORMAL QUAD grouping in the strategically vital Indo-Pacific region comprising Australia, India, Japan and the US fills a "very important gap" that has emerged in contemporary times and New Delhi has clarity on its membership in it, external affairs minister S Jaishankar has said.

The Quad aims at strengthening a rules-based order in the Indo-Pacific amidst China's aggressive actions in the region. Quad today fills a "very important gap" that has emerged in contemporary times, where there are global or regional requirements, which cannot be filled by a single country. It cannot even be tied by one bilateral relationship, and which is not being addressed at the multilateral level," he told a group of Indian journalists as he concluded most of his meetings here on Friday.

Amazon pressed for racial equity review after strong vote tally

REUTERS
May 29

AMAZON.COM INC should review how it is addressing racial justice and equity after a shareholder proposal on the topic won strong backing, New York state's top pension official said on Friday.

A filing on Friday showed 44% of votes cast supported a call for a review of the company's impact on equity, diversity and other areas proposed by New York State Comptroller Thomas D'Napoli at Amazon's annual meeting on May 26, a high total for such a measure.

D'Napoli said the measure would have received a majority but for the 14% stake held by CEO Jeff Bezos, a sign of investor dissatisfaction at the leading online retailer.

"Shareholders sent a loud message to Amazon that they want the company to do more to address racial diversity, equity and inclusion, its time for Amazon to listen to its investors," D'Napoli said in an emailed statement.

Amazon had previously said the measure did not win a majority but it did not give the voting breakdown.

An Amazon representative said the company has "initiated numerous programmes to assess and address racial justice considerations across key aspects of our operations that we believe fully address the objectives of this proposal."

The call for the racial equity audit received the highest level of support among 11 shareholder proposals at Wednesday's meeting.

Another, calling for Amazon to consider adding an hourly worker to its board of directors received support from 17% of votes cast, the filing showed.

Proposals with such low levels of support are rarely adopted, although the figure was about twice what similar calls for workers-on-boards have received at other companies in recent years.

Measure, which received a rare endorsement from Institutional Shareholder Services, was closely watched at the annual meeting after a union organizing effort at the company failed in April.
