Tapioca farmers in Salem feel the chill wind of price crash

SNEHA SIVASHANMUGAM @ Salem

A massive drop in the price of tapioca, from ₹14,000 per tonne last year to ₹4,500 this season, has left farmers struggling in Salem as they are unable to even cover the production costs.

Once considered a drought-resistant crop, the drop in tapioca price is now pushing cultivators into crisis mode or forcing them to abandon the crop altogether.

In Salem district, which contributes a major share of the state's tapioca output, farmers say they cannot even take the production cost back unless the price touches at least ₹6,000 per tonne.

"Last year, we managed to sell at ₹12,000-₹14,000, but this year it has dropped drastically. Once a farmer friendly crop, tapioca has now become risky business," said S Jayaraman, a tapioca farmer and president of the Salem District Farmers Club Federation.

In its 2021 Assembly election manifesto, the DMK assured that a MSP would be fixed for tapioca through. However, farmers say the promise has not been kept.

"Unlike processed products such as sago or starch, tapioca has a very short shelf life of less than 24 hours after harvest. During monsoon or peak summer months, difficulties in harvest further weaken the farmer's position. This gives marketers, who also manufacture the byproducts, an upper hand in dictating procurement prices as they can store the processed output for long periods and wait for favourable markets," he said.

Farmers also pointed out that while tapioca prices have always fluctuated, this year's fall has been sharper than usual. In some seasons earlier, farmers had at least managed ₹8,000-₹10,000 per tonne, which sustained them. They also added that in recent years, the price per tonne has not fallen to ₹7,000 and this year's fall is unusual.

The uncertainty is now pushing several farmers towards alternative crops. In parts of Salem, cultivators have begun to shift to crops like maize, hoping for steadier returns. "It is not easy to abandon tapioca, as many of us have been growing it for generations. But when the market fails us year after year, we are left with no choice," said V Selvaraj, a farmer.

Farmer leaders argue that this imbalance begins from the absence of bargaining power. VS Govindaraj, president of Salem District Farmers Welfare Association, said farmers should be allowed membership in the Salem Starch and Sago Manufacturers Service Industrial Cooperative Society, better known as Sagoserve. "Currently, only mill owners are members and they decide the rates. Even tapioca from hilly regions like Kalvarayan Hills, which has higher starch content, does not fetch farmers its true value," he said.

Sagoserve, however, maintains that its role is limited. "We are not directly involved in determining the price of raw tapioca. Our work is focused on the processed product, sago. We are trying to expand demand for sago in markets like Maharashtra, where consumption is higher," said Sagoserve managing director R Keerthy Priyadarshini.

She acknowledged that farmers have been pressing to be included as members but said such a change requires the approval of the existing membership, which consists mainly of manufacturers. A proposal to make farmers full members was rejected by the general body, but efforts are under way to include them as associate members, she added.

Elephant ransacks kitchen at farmhouse near Thondamuthur

EXPRESS NEWS SERVICE @ Coimbatore

FIVE of a family, including three children, were left shocked and distressed as a wild elephant damaged their kitchen at a farmhouse, early on Tuesday.

K Vadivel and V Muthumari live with their two daughters, aged 9 and 10, and their seven-year-old son at the farmhouse owned by doctor K Arul at Kembanur near Thondamuthur.

Speaking to TNIE, Muthumari said, "The animal damaged the kitchen around 3.20 am, where we had stored grocery items. It consumed one kilo of dal and ransacked other grocery items. We had cooked idlies and kept them for the children's morning breakfast. However, the animal smacked the idlies away."

"My husband and I were watching this through the window, and were praying for our children's safety. We pacified our children who were scared after hearing the noise from the kitchen, which is a temporary shed raised on a concrete foundation. Usually the animals consume water from the drums. This was the first time an animal attacked the house," said

Muthumari.

She said the animal was around till 4am, and went away after her neighbours burst crackers to scare the animal away. The pachyderm also entered a nearby grove and damaged the fence. K Kathiravan (59), a farmer, told TNIE he had spent ₹18 lakh to install fences on ten acres of his grove, and the elephant had crushed the fence, causing him a loss of ₹two lakh. After receiving information, forest staff engaged in driving away wild elephants at Maruthamalai reached the spot after the animal left.

Location of new mortuary at Annur GH to be shifted after public outcry on Saibaba Colony flyover

EXPRESS NEWS SERVICE @ Coimbatore

FOLLOWING opposition from locals over the construction of a mortuary adjacent to a residential area at Annur government hospital, the health department has halted the work, and plans to shift the mortuary to another location.

The department had demolished the old staff quarters and started work to build a mortuary at the rear end of the hospital campus. However, the residents living near Rajiv Nagar voiced their concerns and requested that the project be relocated to the front of the hospital. Subsequently, the work was halted mid-way. After consideration of public demand, the health department has planned to shift the mortuary to the front of the hospital.

At Annur government hospital, a mortuary and a multipurpose building were sanctioned with funding from the 15th Finance Commission, and ₹65 lakh was allocated to build the mortuary. We held a talk with the locals and stressed on the importance of the mortuary and the necessity to build it at the rear end. However, people residing near the spot earmarked for the mortuary opposed the plan. Thus, we have decided to bring the facility to the front side, and the same has been communicated to the Public Works Department (PWD).

"If we delay the process due to this issue, funds allocated for the project will be returned. We plan to build the facility with a separate passage without affecting the hospital's functioning," said a senior official from the health department.

Leaks slow down work on Saibaba Colony flyover

ARAVIND RAJ @ Coimbatore

The Saibaba Colony flyover project on Mettupalayam Road is facing an unexpected hurdle. It is not traffic snarls or land issues, but recurring water flow on the service road beneath the ongoing construction.

Highways department officials, who have been overseeing the work for over a year, said that persistent leaks have been affecting progress and forcing them to undertake repeated repairs on the stretch. The problem, they noted, has been particularly severe at night, when water often gushes out, making the road unsafe and disrupting the construction process.

"We have been noticing water on the road quite frequently. At times, it looks like it is being released from nearby private buildings, but there has been no concrete action to address it. We end up spending time and resources on fixing the damaged stretch again and again," an official said.

The officials have expressed frustration that the issue remains unresolved despite repeated complaints to the Coimbatore City Municipal Corporation (CCMC). "Our concern is that this slows down the work. The project is progressing at a good pace otherwise," said another official.

When contacted, a senior official from the CCMC said the problem was not due to private discharge. Instead, the official pointed to a leak in the Siruvani water supply pipeline that runs along the road. "The pipeline had burst and caused water to overflow onto the road. We have fixed the leak, and the issue should not recur," the official added.

Residents in the area said they hoped the flyover project, which promises to ease traffic congestion on one of the city's busiest roads, would not face further setbacks. With the water leakage now said to be resolved, officials expect construction to move ahead without interruption.
