Kin claim pregnant woman lost child as ambulance had no fuel; minister promises probe

PRESS TRUST OF INDIA

MUMBAI, MAY 28: Relatives of a woman in Maharashtra's Hingoli district on Thursday alleged that a delay in getting a government ambulance due to alleged diesel shortage resulted in the death of her unborn child.

Amid outrage triggered by the claim, State Public Health Minister Prakash Atkari promised that the matter would be probed. According to the woman's family, they waited for nearly two hours for a government ambulance after she developed labour pain at Jawala Bazar, but were allegedly told that the vehicle could not be deployed due to lack of diesel. The woman's relatives arranged for a private vehicle and took her to the Government Medical College in Hingoli, where doctors performed a C-section but could not save her baby, they said. Minister Atkari said in Nanded that it would be incorrect to conclude that treatment was denied due to the non-availability of diesel, but assured that the incident would be probed.

"If such an incident has occurred, we will conduct an inquiry. There is a budgetary provision for diesel for ambulances, and manpower has also been deployed."

If the infrastructure created by us has not been properly utilised for society, an inquiry will be ordered, and action will be taken against those found responsible," he told reporters. Rohini Khadse, women's wing state president of the NCP (SP), questioned the state government's claim that there was no fuel shortage in Maharashtra and asked "who should be held accountable: the health administration, ambulance staff or the government".
