East Indians celebrate Agera harvest festival

FPJ News Service
MUMBAI

East Indians, one of Mumbai's indigenous communities, celebrated Agera, their annual harvest festival, on Sunday. In places like Gorai and Manori, where the community still preserves its agricultural and fishing traditions, the festival was marked with processions carrying a holy cross to a paddy field where the priest cut a few sheaves of paddy waiting to be harvested. In churches located in the city, the celebrations were organised with paddy brought from the villages. People dressed in traditional attire, accompanied by a traditional brass band, carried bundles of paddy to church for a blessing. The families go back home and affix the paddy on their entrance door or place it on the altar, followed by a traditional meal and thanksgiving prayer, said Gleason Barretto, founder trustee of Mobai Gaothan Panchayat, a community association reviving traditions that were fading away.

Manori desalination project: Lowest bid 26% over budget

BMC's ambitious project moves forward after 4 failed attempts, but officials may have to negotiate the budget

Shefal Parab-Pandit
MUMBAI

After more than a year and a half of persistent efforts, the BMC's ambitious desalination initiative in Manori village in the western suburbs is finally moving forward. Hyderabad-based company GVPR Engineers Limited has been identified as the lowest bidder; however, its quoted price is 26% above the BMC's estimated budget. The technical advisory committee will now carefully examine this price discrepancy before entering into negotiations with the company to ensure a viable and cost-effective agreement. The BMC floated a tender on December 4, 2023, for the construction of a desalination plant on a 12-hectare plot in Manori village. After four unsuccessful attempts, the project finally attracted interest from several prominent firms. Upon opening Packet C,

IN BRIEF

- 1 Technical advisory committee to review bid viability before negotiations
- 2 Tender for 200 MLD (expandable to 400 MLD) plant floated on Dec 4, 2023
- 3 Project cost rises to ₹3,500 crore from initial ₹2,000 crore estimate

GVPR Engineers Limited emerged as the lowest bidder. The company is already engaged in the design, construction, and operation of the 337 million litres per day (MLD) of BMC's Ghatkopar Sewage Treatment Plant. Abhijeet Bangar, Additional Municipal Commissioner (Projects), said, "The technical advisory committee will review the amount quoted by the company to assess its viability. Based on their findings, we will proceed with negotiations accordingly." The proposed desalination plant at Manori will have an initial capacity of 200 MLD, expandable up to 400 MLD. The estimated project cost has increased to Rs3,500 crore, a significant jump from the initial tender estimate of Rs2,000 crore. On July 26, the BMC invited Expressions of Interest (EOIs) for its second desalination plant, proposed on a seven-acre site with three lagoons in Versova. The project will be executed under the Design, Build, Finance, Operate, and Transfer (DBFOT) model. Under this arrangement, the private developer will fund the capital costs, while the BMC will pay a per-kilolitre rate for the treated water, eliminating the need for upfront civic expenditure. However, the deadline to submit the bid has been extended till November 11, 2025.

Dharavi project: A township for dignity and livelihoods

For decades, Dharavi has epitomized two contradictory realities: the hardship of congested informal settlements and an extraordinary homegrown economy where tiny workshops and roadside vendors drive entire supply chains. Now, after years of planning and false starts, Mumbai is set to reimagine Dharavi as a township, not a single tower solution. The promise includes larger homes, protected livelihoods, and robust neighborhood infrastructure. The scale is immense. Central to this vision is housing that prioritizes dignity. The redevelopment framework offers long-term residents a minimum carpet area of 350 sq. ft., translating to private space for growing families, a corner for work, and better storage—significant upgrades in cramped lanes where multiple families often share one room. The plan is deliberately holistic, envisioning a "township" rather than isolated towers. It includes schools, primary healthcare, parks, play spaces, and community halls, ensuring daily needs are a short walk away. A multi-modal transit hub is also planned, integrating Dharavi into Mumbai's metro and suburban rail network, enhancing mobility and elevating the area's value while preserving its walk-to-work economy. To mitigate short-term disruptions, policy measures include free upkeep and maintenance for societies and infrastructure for the first ten years, easing the transition for rehabilitated communities. Additionally, 10% of the rehabilitation component is earmarked for commercial use, enabling leasehold and small enterprises to continue operating within the new buildings. The foundation of this plan is a comprehensive survey and enumeration exercise. Authorities report mapping tens of thousands of residential and commercial structures, with public updates citing milestones of 65,000 and later over 105,000 structures. The goal is to ensure accurate eligibility and inclusivity for all entitled residents. Yet, the human story will determine success. Residents express cautious hope mixed with anxiety. "After redevelopment, they may only get one flat, which may not be sufficient," one resident noted, while others welcome the prospect of proper toilets, safer lanes, and stable addresses. This duality highlights the core challenge. While the plan promises larger homes and commercial spaces, separating living from working or disrupting rehab sequencing could weaken livelihoods. The 10% commercial allocation is promising, but its effectiveness hinges on the size, location, and affordability of these units, and whether Dharavi's micro-enterprises can maintain legal and operational continuity. There are reasons for cautious optimism. The master plan, publicly approved, aims to preserve Dharavi's live-work ecosystem. However, transparent implementation is critical. Clear timelines, grievance mechanisms, a published survey methodology, and safeguards for those temporarily displaced during construction are essential. Ultimately, dignity—not just square footage or revenue—will measure success. The project will be judged by whether Dharavi's children can play in safe spaces, businesses can restart locally, and residents feel like partners in, not subjects of, this transformation. (The author is an environment and development innovation expert and community engagement specialist)

Rly staff return purse with ₹10K

Kamal Mishra
MUMBAI

Railway staff aboard the Mumbai Central-Ahmedabad Shatabdi Express returned a purse containing Rs10,360 to a passenger who had inadvertently left it behind on the train. According to WR, Parag Pithwa, 52, was travelling with his wife, Ritu Pithwa, 49, and their daughter Akshara from Borivali to Vadodara in the Vistadome coach (seats 1, 2, and 3). After disembarking at Vadodara, the family realised they had accidentally left behind Ritu's ladies' purse. "The purse was discovered by a member of the catering staff while cleaning the coach after the passengers had alighted. Without delay, the staff informed Train Superintendent Mahesh Giri, who used a Hand Held Terminal (HHT) device to identify the passenger assigned to the seats. This allowed him to retrieve the registered contact information," said an official. Upon being contacted, Parag Pithwa confirmed the loss and provided an accurate description of the purse and its contents, which included Rs10,360 in cash, a pair of numbered spectacles, and other personal items. As the family had already exited the station, Pithwa arranged for his brother, Hemantbhai, to collect the purse during the return journey of the Shatabdi Express. After verifying his identity, railway staff returned the purse with all its contents intact. "We are deeply thankful to the staff of the Shatabdi Express. Their honesty and quick response ensured we were reunited with our belongings," Parag said.

Parsis appeal to rescue bank's 113-year-old legacy

Manoj Ramakrishnan
MUMBAI

The Parsi community is planning to appeal to the Union government to protect the distinct identity of the Central Bank of India, established on December 21, 1911, in Mumbai, by fellow community members, Sir Sorabji Pochkhanawala and freedom fighter Sir Pherozeshah Mehta. The bank, hailed as the country's first Swadeshi bank wholly-owned and managed by Indians, is considered as much a Parsi institution as the Tata companies, although it is now government-owned. Recently, the Surat Parsi Panchayat Funds and Properties, the apex trust of the community in Surat, reacted to reports that the bank could be merged with another institution to create a bigger bank. "By doing so, the Central Bank of India will cease to exist and will be rechristened as another bank with a new name, thereby relinquishing its original identity as India's first Swadeshi Bank," said Dr Homi Doodhwala, president of the Surat Parsi Panchayat Funds, which has written to Prime Minister Narendra Modi to intervene and save the bank. Xerxes Dastur, president of the Bombay Parsi Association and trustee of the Bombay Parsi Panchayat, stated that the bank has managed to hold its own for quite some time. "A few people have said that we should try to save the bank. I would definitely be writing for what it is worth. The annals of the bank say that it was associated with the House of the Tatas," said Dastur. Parsi said that the bank's creation was a direct outcome of the Swadeshi movement, and the institution holds a significant place in the community as one of its greatest contributions to society. The bank was nationalised in 1969 by the government led by Indira Gandhi. "The bank has been a significant public sector entity known for its early innovations. Generations of Parsis had worked with the bank and have held accounts here," Doodhwala. The government of India is pursuing a plan to merge public sector banks as part of a programme to consolidate smaller government-owned banks into larger and more profitable entities. In 2019-2020, Dena Bank, Allahabad Bank, and Syndicate Bank, among others, were merged with larger institutions, such as Canara Bank, Punjab National Bank, and Bank of Baroda. The Central Bank of India is 93.08% owned by the government, and it is one of four banks planned to be merged in the next phase. The Indian Banks Association did not respond to messages for a comment.
