Sunday night fever grips the country

● Hospitality firms, delivery platforms and fans gear up for World Cup final

VAISHALI DAR & SUGANDHA MUKHERJEE
New Delhi, July 17

IT'S GOING TO be a sleepless Sunday night, not just for football fans as they catch the final of the FIFA World Cup 12.30 am onwards, but for numerous gig and hospitality workers who are ready for one of the busiest nights of the year with sold-out screenings, extended hours and special offers.

The Karnataka government has already allowed extension of food service hours at hotels and restaurants in Bengaluru urban district until 3:30 am on the night of July 19, instead of the usual 1 am deadline. For bars and restaurants across the country, it is an opportunity they don't want to miss.

India's largest quick service chain Domino's Pizza is ready to accept orders till 3 am on final night, while McDonald's has extended operations until 3 am to capitalise on football fever. The Beer Café is ready to let the tap flow with a nationwide late-night promotion, offering beer at ₹189 from 11.30 pm onwards. Its Bengaluru outlet will continue serving until the end of the match, while outlets in other cities will operate as per local licensing norms. "We are adding to the football fervour by letting guests cheer for their favourite team and enjoy a memorable football night without worrying about the bill," said Rahul Singh, founder & CEO, The Beer Café.

Sports bar chain Underdogs Sports Bar & Grill expects record business, combining the final with the launch of its largest outlet, Underdogs Arena in Gurugram. "We are gearing up for one of the biggest

SLEEPLESS NIGHT

■ Karnataka govt has allowed extension of food service at hotels, restaurants in Bengaluru Urban until 3:30 am

■ Quick service chains Domino's Pizza, McDonald's have extended operations until 3 am to capitalise on football fever

■ Late-night food ordering between 11 pm-3 am has seen maximum orders, with pizzas and burgers most in demand, said Swiggy football nights with live screenings across six outlets (two in Bengaluru, Gurugram, Ludhiana, Delhi Aerocity and Noida)," said Sarthak Sidana, director, Underdogs Sports Bar & Grill. He shared that on semi-final day, their sales across all outlets reached ₹35-45 lakh and they are expecting the final night to deliver the strongest single-night revenue performance to date. In Gurugram, Abhinav Jindal, founder & CEO of BeeYoung beer & pub BeeYoung Brewgarden said they are already sold out. "The response to FIFA screenings this season has been phenomenal."

Quoin, the 24x7 sports bar at Novotel New Delhi Aerocity, will host an all-night screening with large screens, cocktails, bar bites and beer bucket offers. Baardos Qutub in Delhi will also host a special overnight screening, expecting revenues of ₹10-12 lakh from a single night.

Food delivery platform Swiggy said the FIFA World Cup has sparked a rise in late-night food ordering since the tournament began. The 11 pm-3 am slot has seen the maximum orders, with pizzas and burgers the most in demand. Bengaluru, Hyderabad and Mumbai led demand among metros, while Surat, Thiruvananthapuram and Patna topped the charts among emerging markets. In Chandigarh, a customer spent a record ₹16,444 on finger foods alone in one single order, Swiggy shared.

With an energetic Sunday night, Monday morning blues will just get deeper. Some corporates like Bengaluru-based proptech unicorn NoBroker.com have decided to give flexibility to staff to either start the day late or take a day off. "This is applicable for non-customer facing staff, which is 20% of total strength," said founder & CEO Amit Kumar Agarwal. NoBroker.com employs around 3,000 people across Bengaluru, Chennai, Mumbai, Pune, Hyderabad and Delhi-NCR.

The sole Indian streaming partner, Zee5, has already monetised FIFA rights well by hiking its subscription from ₹299 per month to ₹399 for World Cup access. The platform has enjoyed all-time high network share of 20% (for those over 15 years in urban India) in week 24 (June 8-14) this year, with a unique reach of over 300 million across its linear platforms, Zee 5 and social platforms since June 1.

Multiplex player PVR INOX has been screening all World Cup matches across more than 100 screens in 53 cities, including Mumbai, Delhi, Bengaluru, Kolkata, Pune, Hyderabad and Chennai. Gautam Dutta, CEO, Revenue and Operations, PVR INOX, said occupancies have exceeded 42%, "reflecting the growing demand for premium, collective viewing experiences."

Leaving behind an all-round legacy

ED OSMOND

GARRY SOBERS WAS born with two extra fingers — one on each hand. He removed them himself as a boy, using catgut and a sharp knife.

Sobers would go on to become the most complete cricketer to play the game. A graceful and destructive left-handed batsman, a left-arm bowler equally skilled at delivering pace and spin, and a brilliant fielder in any position, Sobers was named one of the five leading cricketers of the 20th century by Wisden Almanack.

He came second only to prolific Australian batsman Don Bradman, who himself said of the player in 1988: "I've got no hesitation at all in saying that Garry Sobers is the greatest all-round cricketer I ever saw."

Reflecting on his achievements, Sobers often played down the importance of his natural talent. "People call me a genius. I don't know much about geniuses," he said late in his life. "But I do believe that what I achieved was not just because of the ability that I was born with but also because I worked hard."

He has died aged 89, West Indies Cricket announced on Friday. No cause was given.

'Lilliputian cricket'

Garfield St Aubrun Sobers was born in St Michael, Barbados, on July 28, 1936, the fifth of six children of Shamont and Thelma Sobers. His father, a seaman working in the Canadian merchant navy, died when German forces sank the boat on which he was serving. Garfield was five years old.

Sobers excelled at many sports, including soccer and basketball, but cricket was his passion. His first memories of the sport were of playing in the road or on the beach, aged eight.

At first he played "Lilliputian cricket", which required little space and a wicket less than half the normal size. The ball would be fashioned from a lump of tar, the bat from a piece of fence. If the sun melted the tar ball, a rock wrapped in cloth would serve as a replacement.

Sobers made his first-class debut for Barbados at 16. He played his first test for West Indies in 1954. At 21, he scored his maiden hundred against Pakistan, finishing on 365 not out, then the highest individual test innings. He remains the youngest Test triple-century.

'He's done it!'

Sobers took over as West Indies captain in 1965, before joining English County Nottinghamshire. He was batting for them in 1968 when he became the first player to hit six sixes in one over in first-class cricket. "Six sixes are not good cricket," he said after his feat received worldwide acclaim. "It was an occasion where we were looking for quick runs. The idea was to get as many runs as possible. Records must not be the focus and that's the most important thing," he added.

In 383 first-class matches, Sobers made 28,000+ runs and took 1,000+ wickets. REUTERS

Lionel Messi, the Argentine maestro sculpted in Spain

SANDIP G
New Jersey, July 17

ANDRÉS INIESTA KNOWS Lionel Messi more than most. He was his source of goals, his best friend, and the man he turned to when he needed a brotherly hug. He knew his moments with telepathic intuition. They were comrades in 489 games. Yet, one afternoon in Buenos Aires, two months after Spain were crowned world champions and the universe in awe of their style, Messi showed little mercy to Iniesta, the goalscorer in the final against the Netherlands, or his other Barcelona friends.

Just eight minutes had passed when they came up against each other: Messi striding upfield, Iniesta crouched like a sumo wrestler to stop him. Messi dropped his shoulder, shifted his body to the left, but slithered to his right, leaving Iniesta still like a statue. When he turned back, he saw Messi slipping away from three markers, sliding into a pocket of space no one had spotted until it was too late, and lobbying the ball over goalkeeper Pepe Reina. The game ended with Argentina battering Spain 4-1, a near full-strength Spain. It was the last time Messi confronted Spain, the country where he spent most of his years from 13 to 34, the La Masia Academy of Barcelona that moulded and nurtured his ideas and ideals of football, the club that gave him an identity, where he made friends and bonds of a lifetime. Barcelona and Messi are as inseparable as Argentina and Messi.

Months after Messi joined La Masia, youth coach Alex Garcia wondered why Argentina were not showing enthusiasm in tracking Messi. He decided to call then Spain's youth coach Ginés Meléndez. "There's a kid here, an Argentine, but they (Argentina) don't call him up. Maybe there's a possibility he might want to play for Spain."

Most of Messi's teammates were part of the youth squads, the scouts constantly monitoring them. No one checked on Messi. Meléndez dropped by, watched him and excitedly instructed him: "Convince him, his parents, or maybe agents. He is the future." Meléndez later told ESPN Spain.

FOOT NOTES

US-STYLE CHAMPIONSHIP RINGS FOR WINNERS: FIFA

In a first, the winners of WWC final between Spain and Argentina will receive championship rings in addition to the trophy and gold medals, FIFA said. FIFA said 30 bespoke rings would be presented to the winning team following the final at New York. The rings will then be customised to reflect the identity of the winning team and individually fitted before being presented.

ADIDAS EDGES OUT NIKE

Adidas is set to score a decisive marketing win over Nike at this weekend's FIFA World Cup final and the optimism is already reflected in the German sportswear maker's stock. With finalists Spain and Argentina both wearing Adidas kits when they take the field on Sunday, the company is guaranteed prime on-pitch exposure. Adidas shares have risen about 6% since the World Cup began on June 11, reaching eight-month highs last week. Nike, by contrast, is up just 1.4% as its teams, including Brazil and France, failed to reach the final.

SHAKIRA HAILS MESSI

Pop queen Shakira turned cheerleader, celebrating Argentina's thrilling comeback win over England in the WC semifinal. Shakira, on Instagram, praised Messi's and wrote, "What @leomessi is doing is beyond extra-ordinary! It shows the values of a man who is deeply committed and disciplined, challenging times and all odds. Proving that a person is not defined by age or by what others say."
