PRESS RELEASE

Pune, 13th October 2014

Safran and Bharat Forge to form partnership to address opportunities in Indian civil and military aerospace Global Aerospace, Defence, and Security leader Safran, and India's leading high technology components company, Bharat Forge, announce the start of a long-term partnership to supply critical high integrity forged and machined components, for commercial aircraft applications to Safran's global affiliates. The first step of this partnership is a Purchase Order issued today by Safran.

Over the past 18 months, Safran and Bharat Forge have successfully worked on a demonstrator phase for initial trial production of critical forgings in a variety of materials, including titanium, nickel based and steel alloys, for aerospace. This success is the result of intensive engineering and manufacturing collaboration. Both companies will also seek to explore and address other opportunities in Indian aerospace for civil and military sectors.

According to Stephane Lauret, CEO, Safran India Private Limited, "This latest development reflects our two companies' commitment to expanding our collaboration for the benefit of our customers in India and abroad." BN Kalyani, Chairman & Managing Director of Bharat Forge, added, "The partnership highlights our unwavering commitment to add tangible value to the vast opportunities offered by the Indian aerospace sector and confirms our resolve to strengthening our partnership for supplying forged components to Safran's global affiliate network."

Both Companies consider this award to be a significant milestone to cement a strong and long-term relationship.
