HCL Announces Strategic Partnership with Banking Solutions Provider Alpha Insight

Noida, India and London, UK – September 06, 2017 – HCL Technologies (HCL), a leading global IT services company, today announced a new strategic partnership with Alpha Insight, an intelligent products and solutions company headquartered in London, UK, with industry leading expertise in Business Flow Monitoring and Operational Intelligence.

The transaction, which includes purchase of select assets, bolsters HCL's DRYiCE™ Platform and its positioning as an Enterprise A.I Foundation. Integration of Alpha Insight's iControl product into the DRYiCE™ suite of products, provides deep visibility into end–to–end horizontal business flows and robust operational intelligence to Digital Enterprises.

Kalyan Kumar – Chief Technology Officer – IT Services, HCL Technologies said: "HCL's vision is to provide best–in–class A.I solutions for enterprises looking to reimagine themselves on the foundation of A.I technology. We welcome Alpha Insight and iControl into the fast growing DRYiCE Product family and are excited about the new process transformation solutions that this partnership enables."

Shakir Ladak – Chief Technology Officer and Founder, Alpha Insight said: "We are tremendously excited by this agreement which allows us to benefit from HCL's expertise and client coverage, whilst fulfilling our vision to further expand iControl as a strategic operational intelligence platform."

Alpha Insight, founded in 2013, specializes in Business Flow Monitoring and Operational Intelligence with the primary focus on the financial services sector. The company's existing industry expertise in financial services processes will now be expanded to other major industries such as retail, manufacturing, utilities and lifesciences, among others.
