

Profile of Ambassador Vinai Thummalapally:

Ambassador Vinai Thummalapally recently ended his term as the director of SelectUSA in the Department of Commerce under the Obama Administration. Prior to that, he was the American Ambassador to Belize for five years. He is the first Indian American ambassador in U.S. history. Before his service in the US government, Ambassador Thummalapally was the President and CEO of Mitsui Advanced Media which was at the time the leading player in the optical media space (DVD, Blue-Ray etc).

Ambassador Vinai Thummalapally has a B.S. degree from California State University and took graduate classes in business administration from both CSU and the University of Tennessee.

Ambassador Thummalapally's background in business and his experience with the US government in Washington makes him a very good candidate for the board. He has also worked in industries that are of interest such as the technology sector and manufacturing which is very relevant to the Company's business.
