India in talks with China over business visa delays

● Visa tightening hitting Indian AI startups most

BLOOMBERG
August 22

INDIA IS DISCUSSING with China about visa delays faced by its businesses, Foreign Minister S Jaishankar said. The government has taken up the issue with its neighbour, Jaishankar said in New Delhi on Saturday, in response to a question on the inability of Indian businesses to get Chinese business visas. China has tightened the issuance of business visas to Indian executives to such an extent that even companies with "advanced partnerships" are facing visa denials, forcing them to shift crucial executive meetings to nearby countries, news reports stated this week. Indian AI startups are impacted most by this, said the reports. Relations between the neighbours deteriorated after the Galwan valley clash in early 2020, and the subsequent military standoff and tensions on the border. New Delhi, at the time, banned a large number of Chinese companies operating in India, while also tightening investment rules for that country's firms under Press Note 3 regulation, which, even now, mandates multi-ministry clearances for any Chinese foreign direct investment. Relations between the two nations have improved since then and New Delhi relaxed visa restrictions. It also allowed foreign entities with non-controlling beneficial ownership from land bordering countries of up to 10% to invest in India.

The policy rejig in March this year attracted offshore investment proposals worth ₹49 billion ($512 million) till August 20, India's Ministry of Commerce and Industry said. Jaishankar on Saturday painted a "realistic picture" of the current global situation, describing it through three Cs — competition, conflict and choke points — and suggested a four-D response of derisking, diversification, dealing with distortions and building a margin of safety. Addressing a media event in New Delhi, Jaishankar said the world has become increasingly competitive, with countries and policymakers pushing their interests to a point where competition is, at times, turning into conflict. "It's not a very comforting answer I'm going to give," Jaishankar said while describing how he sees the world today.

"I think what we've seen particularly in the last year or so, but I would really describe it as a growing trend. It looks increasingly competitive," he said, adding that countries and policymakers are pushing their interests "to a point where you actually have conflicts." He pointed to the two major conflicts currently underway, referring to the Ukraine-Russia conflict and the one in West Asia, noting that one has entered its fifth year, while there is still no clear "light at the end of the tunnel" for the other. According to Jaishankar, competition is no longer limited to traditional geopolitical rivalry and is increasingly being expressed through the "weaponisation" of different economic and strategic tools. "This is a world characterised by choke points," Jaishankar said, explaining that a choke point emerges when a country or a set of countries have established dominance "in a particular field and are willing to deploy that dominance to exert pressure. According to Jaishankar, such choke points can "inflict pain" while countries exercising that leverage may believe they are sufficiently insulated from the consequences.

He said that while "the world is chugs along" and people remain occupied with their daily lives, conflicts and choke points can create complications that affect businesses and even in far-off societies.

TRADE TALKS COLLAPSE

US-Canada amid heated tariff war

● Will match tariff dollar for dollar: Canada's Carney

BLOOMBERG/AP
Washington, August 22

CANADA'S PRIME MINISTER Mark Carney said on Saturday that starting September 8, Canada would impose tariffs on imports from the US across a raft of sectors in retaliation for President Donald Trump's new 50% tariffs that came into effect from midnight. After days of intense negotiations, the two countries failed to reach a trade deal late Friday. Trump's new tariffs hit a slew of sectors, including wine, furniture, dairy products, cement, clothing, fishing rods, hockey equipment and cover some $20 billion of Canadian exports south of the border.

"Canada will match Washington's new tariffs dollar for dollar in order to protect Canadian workers, farmers, families and businesses," Carney said at a news conference. "We cannot accept what they have offered, and we will not give what they have asked," Carney said.

US Trade Representative Jameson Greer said the Canadian negotiators made 11th-hour demands that upended a draft deal worked out over days of negotiations.

"Despite the US offer to treat Canada to the best export to our market, new demands and walk-backs of other commitments by the United States have upended the careful balance reached in the

Lula calls Trump to resume talks over US tariffs on Brazil

PRESIDENT LUIZ INACIO Lula da Silva urged Donald Trump to resume negotiations over US tariffs on Brazil during a phone call, seeking to soothe relations with Washington ahead of the country's October election. Lula pushed back on US allegations of unfair trading practices that led to the imposition of 25% tariffs on many Brazilian goods, telling Trump they were "unfounded" during a call that lasted more than one hour, Brazil's government said in a statement. Trump proposed that officials from both governments meet as soon as possible, Brazil said. He told Lula he would have top advisers return to the table.

past days," Greer said in a statement. Trump's top trade negotiator, Jameson Greer, said the Republican administration was offering to cut tariffs on steel, autos and lumber, "things that are sensitive for them. And they've always had the best deal, and they still would have an even better deal, but they didn't want that," he said.

He added: "We're moving forward with measures that respond to Canadian retaliation." The moves call into question the future of a North American trade agreement covering the United States, Canada and Mexico that is crucial to industry in all three countries.

Carney said the US added last-minute terms that would have reduced tariff relief for Canadian-made vehicles, restricted Canada's ability to strike trade deals with other countries and weakened protections for language, culture and sovereignty. He said such demands were "unacceptable." But Greer, the US trade representative, said that after a year of retaliation by its longtime ally, "We've said enough, and so we've taken countermeasures. Our interest is in protecting American workers and protecting American supply chains." No further talks are planned.

The breakdown in negotiations marked a sharp reversal from two days earlier, when officials from the two countries sounded as if they were headed toward a compromise.

The two sides had been discussing a deal that included lowering tariffs on certain Canadian steel and aluminum to 25%, cutting duties on Canadian autos to 15% and eliminating a 10% lumber tariff. The trade fight raises a fresh challenge for Trump, who is facing slumping polls and a prolonged conflict with Iran as he barrels toward midterm elections in November. A scrap with Canada — the US's No. 2 source of imports — threatens to fuel voters' concerns with high prices and further close the path for the Federal Reserve as the administration looks to tame the bond market and bring down borrowing costs.

The new 50% tariffs are being imposed under a never-before-used Section 338 provision of the Tariff Act of 1930 that gives the president the power to put duties on countries deemed to discriminate against US commerce.

In China's largest automotive recall, Tesla withdraws over 3 million cars

REUTERS
Beijing, August 22

TESLA AND EIGHT other automakers said they will recall a total of about 3 million vehicles in China over concerns that doors may be difficult to open in an emergency, marking the country's largest automotive recall. The recall remedies range from software updates to warning labels and improved markings around door handles. Beijing this year increased oversight of the EV industry and introduced tougher safety requirements, as automakers, rolled out technologies in the world's largest vehicle market.

China has also said it will ban concealed door handles from 2027, making it the first country to phase out a design popularised by Tesla and widely adopted by domestic Chinese EV makers. Tesla did not immediately reply to a request for comment, while Geely and Xpeng declined to comment. Xiaomi said it does not have additional information beyond the regulatory notice. Leapmotor said it was committed to safety. It said the upgrade involved only a warning label and upgrading the power-window control software, but that it was "managing and filing it in accordance with the recall process out of a sense of responsibility to our users." Most of the actions, classified as product recalls under Chinese regulations, target emergency mechanical door-release handles that regulators say may be hard to locate or operate in a crash — a defect that has drawn scrutiny after several cases of passengers trapped inside burning vehicles.

Chinese state media reported in October that the driver of a Xiaomi SU7 sedan died after a crash and fire because passengers could not open the doors to pull him out. The scale of the recall reflects both the size of China's auto fleet and regulators' increasingly aggressive scrutiny of safety defects as vehicles become more software-driven. The automakers, including Tesla and Xiaomi, will install warning labels free of charge to identify the handles, while most will also deploy over-the-air, or remote, software updates.
