'India's done the right thing on Ukraine in putting its interests first'

These can disrupt the existing order but also open new opportunities for India in global supply chains. It is in India's economic interests to not get trapped in conflicts and maintain an equilibrium of trading relationships across nations and regions.

What are the challenges before the G20 countries now, especially in the wake of the Russia-Ukraine war? How deft has New Delhi been in managing its relations with Russia and the West?

When two or more powers are caught in a conflict, there is immense pressure on other nations to choose sides. I believe India has done the right thing in putting our sovereign and economic interests first while also appealing for peace. The G20 was never envisaged as the forum for settling security-related conflicts. It is important for the G20 to set aside security differences and keep its focus on policy coordination to tackle the challenges of climate, inequality and confidence in global trade.

India and China are members of the G20 as also BRICS. The tension on the LAC is far from resolved. As a former Prime Minister how do you see the India-China relationship and what is your advice to the government?

It is not right for me to offer advice to the Prime Minister on how to handle complex diplomatic matters. It is unfortunate that the Chinese President Xi Jinping has chosen not to attend the G20 summit. I hope and believe the Prime Minister will take all steps necessary to protect India's territorial and sovereign integrity and defuse bilateral tensions.

Moon's South Pole. How do you evaluate the Chandrayaan program and its success?

It is a matter of great pride that India's scientific establishment has once again proved its mettle as being among the best in the world. Our efforts over the last seven decades in promoting scientific temper in society and creating institutions have yielded enormous gains and made us all proud. I am really thrilled that the Chandrayaan mission, which was launched in 2008, has reached new heights by being the first to reach the south pole of the Moon. My heartfelt congratulations to all the women and men in ISRO.

What are the challenges before India—in the medium term what are the reforms critical for the economy and how would you sequence them? Prime Minister Narendra Modi has said that India will become the third largest economy in his next term. How do you see this?

As I wrote in an article last year in The Hindu, India stands at the precipice of a unique economic opportunity in a changing world order. As a peaceful democracy with a large market and abundant human and natural resources, India can rise to become an economic powerhouse of the world in the coming decades through emphasis on manufacturing and production combined with services. As the world transitions to an environment-friendly development model, it opens new avenues such as green mobility, minerals and clean technologies that India must be ready to capitalise on, which can yield jobs and prosperity to our people.

As India celebrates 75 years of Independence, how do you see the challenges ahead?

On the whole, I am more optimistic about India's future than worried. However, my optimism is contingent on India being a harmonious society, which is the bedrock for all progress and development. India's innate instinct is to welcome and celebrate diversity which must be preserved.

Foxconn teams up with STMicro for chip plant in India

Prime Minister Narendra Modi has pledged $10 billion to woo chipmakers, promising his administration will bear half the cost of setting up semiconductor sites. That effort has prompted US memory chip firm Micron Technology to announce a $2.75 billion assembly and testing facility in Modi's home state of Gujarat.

Any chip project, including Foxconn's, will have to make detailed disclosures including whether it has firm, binding agreements with a technology partner for production, as well as financing plans comprising equity and debt arrangements. The applicants also need to disclose the type of semiconductors they'll make and their target customers.

Other chip-related firms moving into India include Advanced Micro Devices and equipment maker Applied Materials, which plan to spend $400 million each on R&D and engineering centres in the southern tech hub of Bengaluru. —BLOOMBERG

In a similar move to check the bias of platforms using artificial intelligence, the Telecommunication Engineering Centre (TEC) has also released procedures for accessing and rating artificial intelligence systems for fairness.

"Artificial intelligence is increasingly being used in all domains, including telecommunication and related information and communication technologies, for making decisions that may affect our day-to-day lives. Any unintended bias in the AI systems could have grave consequences," TEC said.

Simply put, online platforms today provide goods and services, and match providers and customers. AI fairness score will check how much bias is there in the systems for preferring a particular seller or product by a particular seller to the users. The standards by TEC are not a regulatory requirement for platforms as yet.

Traditional snack: Why FMCGs want a big bite of Haldiram's

While Haldiram's products would have been a good addition to Tata Consumer, which doesn't have such foods and snacks in its portfolio, industry sources said the reported $10 billion valuation was 10 times the FY22 sales of its business, which is way too expensive.

Manoj Verma, chief operating officer, Bikaji Foods, which went public last year, says, "Bhujia has emerged as an alternate to biscuits. If the focus earlier for consumers would be on biscuits and its many variants such as cookies, creams, jim-jams etc. Now, traditional snacks such as bhujia and namkeens are also competing for their attention."

Price points vary from ₹5 and ₹10 per unit at the entry level going up to ₹55 and above per unit, much like biscuits, experts say. The traditional or ethnic snacking category, according to consultancy Frost & Sullivan, is ₹18,100 crore in terms of size, growing at a clip of about 15-16% per annum. Biscuits, in contrast, are a bigger category estimated at around ₹45,000-50,000 crore in size, growing at about 8-9% per annum. No wonder, FMCG companies are keen to have a slice of the market.

In April this year, the Competition Commission of India had approved the demerger of the FMCG businesses of Haldiram Foods International (Nagpur unit) and Haldiram Snacks (Delhi unit) into a newly created entity called Haldiram Snacks Food.

Acquisition talks if any, said industry sources, would have been for this entity. Executives at Tata Consumer and Haldiram's were not immediately available for comment on the issue.

According to Frost & Sullivan estimates, Haldiram's including the Nagpur and Delhi units has a market share of 38.5% of the ₹18,100 crore, followed by Balaji at 9.6%, Bikaji at around 9%, Bikanervala (Bikano) at 6% and PepsiCo at 3.7%. Haldiram - Prabhuji (Kolkata), Prataap Snacks, DFM Foods and other organised players have the rest of this market.
