Trump may visit India next year

DONALD TRUMP,
US PRESIDENT

He's (PM Modi) a friend of mine, and we speak... He wants me to go there. We'll figure that out. I'll go

IN THE FIRST confirmation of the Quad leaders' summit, which was to be hosted by India this year, being pushed to 2026, US President Donald Trump has said he could travel to the country next year.

Responding to questions at the Oval Office, Trump said Prime Minister Narendra Modi "wants" him to visit. He called Modi a "great man" and a friend.

"He's a friend of mine, and we speak... He wants me to go there. We'll figure that out. I'll go

Asked if he is planning to go to India next year, he said, "It could be yes."

In New Delhi, responding to questions on Trump's visit to India, Randhir Jaiswal, spokesperson for the Ministry of External Affairs, said, "I do not have anything on this to share. I will let you know when I have."

After Modi's visit to the White House this February, the two sides had agreed to hold the Quad leaders' summit in India later in the year.

But ties dived after Trump imposed 50 per cent tariffs on India, including 25 per cent over its purchase of Russian oil, and bilateral talks for a trade deal were also derailed. Now, the trade negotiations have revived and teams are working overtime to bridge the gap.

New Delhi feels that the trade deal will be key to resolving the issue of tariffs since India has also been reducing oil imports from Russia.

in the 2025–26 oil year, keeping the import dependency high," the agency stated in its latest report.

India imports about 57% of its annual cooking oil requirement, which totals around 26–27 million tonne (MT) of palm, soybean, and sunflower oils combined.

Ind-Ra has projected that total edible oil imports during 2024–25 will decline only marginally to around 15.5 MT, compared with 16 MT in 2023–24 and 16.5 MT in 2022–23.

"Lower kharif acreage may also impact the country's oilseed production
