TELCOS OPPOSE PROPOSAL TO OFFER ONLY VOICE & SMS FOR SHORTER DURATIONS

Trai weighs data-less mobile plans

OJASVI GUPTA
New Delhi, September 9

THE TELECOM REGULATORY Authority of India (Trai) is moving to finalise rules that will require telecom operators to offer voice-and-SMS-only mobile plans across shorter validity periods, including the widely used 28-day cycle, despite strong opposition from the industry, sources said.

The proposed regulations will require operators to offer a corresponding voice-and-SMS-only option for every validity period available under bundled plans carrying voice, SMS and data. The regulator is also looking at requiring such plans to be prominently displayed on recharge platforms, rather than being buried among other tariff options.

The move follows Trai's April draft amendment, which proposed that for every unique validity period offered under a voice, SMS and data special tariff voucher (STV), operators should provide a corresponding voice-and-SMS-only STV.

UNBUNDLE BID

■ The proposal will require operators to offer a corresponding voice-and-SMS-only option for every validity period available under bundled plans

■ The regulator is also looking at requiring such plans to be prominently displayed on recharge platforms

The regulator had also proposed that the tariff for the latter be reduced broadly in proportion to the data benefits removed.

Trai's intervention comes after the regulator's earlier 2024 rules requiring operators to offer at least one voice-and-SMS-only STV did not result in a wide range of such plans. Trai noted that only a few such vouchers were being offered, prompting representations for shorter-duration options.

The 28-day validity period has emerged as a key focus as it is among the most common

The operators are also concerned that cheaper voice-and-SMS plans could encourage some subscribers to shift away from bundled tariffs

■ The 28-day validity period has emerged as a key focus as it is among the most common recharge cycles in the prepaid market recharge cycles in the prepaid market. The proposed framework, however, is broader and could require operators to create voice-and-SMS-only alternatives corresponding to other bundled validity periods as well.

The regulator is also examining how these plans are presented to consumers. Existing voice-and-SMS-only options are not always prominently displayed on operators' digital recharge platforms. Trai wants consumers to be able to find such plans easily, potentially through prominent placement on the first page or in popular recharge sections.

Telecom operators have opposed the proposal, stating that tariff design should largely remain market-driven and that mandatory voice-only plans could disrupt existing pricing structures. Reliance Jio, Bharti Airtel and Vodafone Idea have all raised objections during the consultation process.

Jio has questioned the need for regulatory intervention, saying, "there is no need to mandate voice/SMS only plans" and that tariff forbearance should continue. It has also said that modern 4G and 5G networks use a common IP-based infrastructure, making a regulatory separation of voice and data less straightforward.

Airtel has said that removing data could undermine digital adoption, saying that "taking away the benefit of data" could deprive consumers of digital empowerment. Vodafone Idea, meanwhile, has said that data-free packs could discourage some users from adopting digital services.

The operators are also concerned that cheap voice-and-SMS plans could encourage some subscribers to shift away from bundled tariffs, putting pressure on average revenue per user (Arpu). Jio has separately raised concerns that low-cost, short-validity plans could increase the scope for misuse in spam and fraudulent activities.

For consumers, the proposed rules would particularly benefit feature-phone users, elderly subscribers and those maintaining a secondary SIM primarily for calls, SMS, banking alerts and OTPs.

Anthropic researcher quits citing irresponsible AI use

PRESS TRUST OF INDIA
New Delhi, September 9

JACOB COXON, AN AI researcher at Anthropic, announced his resignation on Wednesday, alleging that leading technology firms, including OpenAI, are acting irresponsibly in an unchecked race towards developing superintelligence and 'gambling with our lives'.

Coxon, who spent the past three years conducting pre-training research across both OpenAI and Anthropic, said that the competitive rush between labs is being pursued without adequate safeguards.

Evan Hubinger, currently Alignment Science lead at Anthropic, acknowledged Coxon's concerns, saying that the San Francisco-based company does not yet have a plan to solve alignment for superintelligence.

WARNING SIGNS

■ Coxon spent the last three years conducting pre-training research at OpenAI, Anthropic

■ He has warned that tech is advancing rapidly towards superhuman systems

In a post on social media platform X, Coxon warned that the technology is advancing rapidly towards superhuman systems that can hack anything, revolutionise any field overnight, and acquire real power and resources. He added that no other human activity poses a comparable level of danger.

"I resigned from Anthropic today. I spent the last three years doing pretraining research at both OpenAI and Anthropic. Neither company is acting responsibly. They are racing straight to self-improving superintelligence and gambling with our lives."

"At OpenAI, many have not deeply internalised the civilisational stakes. At Anthropic, the stakes are well-understood, but they are locked in a race to get there first but they believe no one else will act responsibly, so they must do it themselves, despite the risk. Accepting this race and entering the endgame is a hubristic gamble that should not be launched from a private company's Slack," he said, adding that many working in the sector earnestly believe AI could cause catastrophic harm by the end of the decade.

Better jobs drive 49% Indians to study abroad

PRESS TRUST OF INDIA
Mumbai, September 9

STUDENTS IN INDIA are becoming more outcome-focused, as nearly half of aspirants cite better job opportunities as their primary reason for studying abroad, a report said on Wednesday.

According to skilling and workforce development company upGrad's Transnational Education (TNE) Report 2026, around 49% of Indian aspirants revealed better job opportunities as the primary reason for studying abroad, compared to other factors like quality of education, permanent residency or lifestyle aspirations.

Students in India are significantly becoming more result-

THE PULL FACTOR

■ The upGrad report is based on insights from 53,800 counselled aspirants between January 2025 and June 2026

■ The respondent base was mainly made up of aspirants early in their professional journeys and fresh graduates, with 65.8% being freshers

■ Seven among 10 aspirants planning to pursue overseas education on a total budget of under ₹30 lakh

■ The report further revealed a growing interest in Europe due to rigid immigration policies and rising costs oriented and are evaluating destinations based on ROI (Return on Investment), employment opportunities and long-term career outcomes over institutional prominence, the report said.

The upGrad report is based on insights from 53,800 counselled aspirants between January 2025 and June 2026.

The respondent base was mainly made up of aspirants early in their professional journeys and fresh graduates, with 65.8% being freshers, while nearly 60% of aspirants hail from tier-II and III cities.

While traditional destinations like the US, the UK, Canada and Australia remain significant, the report further revealed a growing interest in Europe due to rigid immigration policies and rising costs.

Students are now opting for Germany, Finland, Spain and France due to their affordability, industry alignment and stronger employment-linked pathways, it added.

Meanwhile, the report found a clear shift towards more cost-effective and value-driven global education pathways.

Affordability is emerging as a key driver of international education choices, with seven among 10 aspirants planning to pursue overseas education on a total budget of under ₹30 lakh.

"The study abroad landscape is undergoing a significant shift, with Indian students increasingly prioritising future employability, career outcomes and affordability. Europe's growing appeal reflects this evolving mindset, as learners seek destinations that combine quality education with strong workforce opportunities," Praneet Singh, Vice President, University Partnerships, upGrad Study Abroad, added.

BLOOMBERG
September 9

LIONEL MESSI IS set to buy a second Spanish football team, as the Argentine star increasingly focuses on his business interests ahead of the winding down of his playing career.

The 39-year-old footballer has reached a preliminary agreement to buy a majority stake in second division side Eldense, a spokesperson for the team told Bloomberg News. A final agreement is expected within days, pending due diligence, said a separate person familiar with the discussions. A representative for Messi declined to comment. The tentative deal was reported earlier by news agency EFE.

The Argentine player, widely considered the best footballer ever, announced last month that he would stop playing international football for his national team, although he will continue playing for Inter Miami in the US Major League Soccer.

Messi has stepped up his commercial activities this year. He announced the acquisition of fifth-division Unió Esportiva Cornellà football club in April, and agreed to buy a well-known building in Barcelona in May. An Argentine restaurant chain he partially owns announced last month that it would expand to Spain.

Buying Eldense would add to the Argentine's growing club stable, as he expands his business activities. Messi's family founded a club in Argentina called Leones, he owns a stake in a Uruguayan club with teammate Luis Suárez, and he has an option to acquire a stake in Inter Miami after he retires.
