Struggling cricketer, ex-wife among three booked under NDPS Act

Rajkot: A struggling cricketer and his ex-wife along with an alleged drug peddler were booked on Thursday under the Narcotic Drugs and Psychotropic Substances (NDPS) Act.

According to police, Akash Ambasana (24), Ami Cholera (22) and Irfan Pattani (43) were found allegedly under influence of drugs from room 301 of a hotel on Racecourse road on October 22.

The police also found three syringes — one empty, one partially used and the third was unused. The police had sent the syringes for forensic examination along with the blood samples of the trio.

The forensic report confirmed that the syringes contained drug mephedrone and the same was found in the blood samples of the accused. Based on this report, Ambasana, Cholera and Pattani were booked under NDPS and Prohibition acts.

Ambasana's mother,

Alka, on the night of October 21 had complained to police that her son had become a drug addict and was missing. The police found Akash with his ex-wife after searching throughout the night.

The police later claimed that Cholera had decided to undergo a de-addiction programme and wanted to prepare for the police constable's exam. The cops have also provided her with books and coaching to crack the exam.

Gujarat's 'mad tree' can be a good one too

Rajkot: The much-maligned gando baval or prosopis juliflora (PJ) — the invasive 'alien' weed that ravaged large swathes of traditional grassland in Kutch decimating livelihood of Banni people — may have the last laugh if a scientific paper can save its existence.

For years now, there has been a discussion to eradicate the weed to save the Banni grassland mostly under the demand of the locals. But, a paper recently published by GUIDE (Gujarat Institute of Desert Ecology), suggested making a separate management policy for PJ, as the weed has the capacity to generate lakhs of employment and can usher in major change in the entire ecosystem of Kutch's Banni land. The paper suggests that PJ can be used in making bread, biscuit, syrup, coffee, cocktails and even brandy apart from its wood being used in making charcoal and generating electricity. It says that PJ's multifarious uses are well known in various countries, though it has generated very little awareness about its full potential. The paper published in Global Journal of Science Frontier Research suggested better usage with a policy intervention to generate new industry and new employment. It, however, stated that this option is very expensive and practically not possible looking at the experience of other countries. Talking to TOI, one of the authors of this paper and director of GUIDE, V Vijay Kumar said, "We need to make a separate management policy for PJ. We have considered it an alien species but it has economic and environmental potential. We have to make a new management plan for PJ considering its positive and negative points." Kumar further said that proper planning can help generate massive employment opportunities and usher in economic development to the arid land. Prosopis pods after removing the seeds are rich in protein and glucose.

The existing temple, considered to be the seventh one, is built in the Kailas Mahameru Prasad style and India's first deputy Prime Minister Sardar Vallabhbhai Patel is its pioneer. It is designed by Prabhakar Somnath who is remembered as the architect of the present-day temple.

Ahmedabad Municipal Corporation ramps up Covid testing to 4,500 a day

AHMEDABAD: Amid fears of a third wave of Covid 19 cases, the health department of the Ahmedabad Municipal Corporation (AMC) has scaled up its daily testing for Covid-19 from 2,500 to 4,500 per day starting from Friday. A senior AMC official said the corporation is closely monitoring the situation and will further increase testing if the need arises. "We have already scaled up testing at entry

points such as bus stands and railway stations. We are prepared to start setting up testing tents at various locations if the need arises."

He said the focus of the civic body is on fast coverage of second doses of vaccines. "In five days including today, we administered as many as 60,000 vaccine doses. We are concerned as 9.3 lakh eligible people have not yet taken their second dose and some of them are overdue by over six weeks," he said. An official said that on Friday, the civic body administered a total of 21,787 vaccine doses of which 18,554 were second doses. He said that the civic body is taking all possible measures to avert a third wave of cases. "AMC has made its 'no vaccine-no entry' rule stricter on Friday. We have also started calling people who are overdue on their second dose. We are also tracing contacts of people who test positive. If despite all this we have to deal with another surge in the positivity rate, our hospitals are now better equipped to deal with such a situation," the official said.

Gujarat: Patan girl tonsured, shamed for eloping

Ahmedabad: A video of a shocking incident of a young woman being tonsured and her face blackened before being paraded in the Vadi mohalla of Harij town in Patan district sent shock-waves across the state. The video is believed to be a week old, but went viral on social media on Friday. Harij police have arrested at least 17 persons in connection with the incident including a few of the young woman's family members and neighbours. In the video, the girl is seen sitting on the ground with her hands tied. A man brandishing a pair of scissors is seen chopping off her hair even as she pleads for mercy. Those tormenting the victim are members of her family and also neighbours. In another video of the same incident, some people are seen smearing her face with black ash before being paraded thus in the locality where she lives with her hands still tied.

According to Patan district collector, Supreet Singh Gulati, the woman belongs to Vadi community. "The woman was tonsured, her face blackened and she was paraded in the locality where she lived. According to what I could gather, the woman who is engaged to be married to some other person from the community had eloped with her lover. The tonsuring, and blackening of her face was some sort of a purification ritual of the community," Gulati told.
