Dogs are a part of our urban environment

Vinod Chandrashekar Dixit Free-lance Journalist, Writer & Cartoonist (dixitpatrakar@yahoo.in)

The increase in stray dog population dramatically and becoming a threat to humans in cities. To control street dog population it shall be incumbent for Municipal Corporation to sterilize and immunize street dog population with the participation of animal welfare organization / NGOs, and private individuals. The street dogs shall be sterilized and immunized by methods currently approved.

There are some people who seem to imagine that we have some sort of "right" to remove animals - take life, without any regard of our moral responsibilities towards creatures that share this planet with us. We are a nation that believes in ahimsa and shuns cruelty. One must remember that the earth is not for humans alone. People cannot find spitting and urinating in public spaces as a menace but they find it hard to live with these harmless species. Most stray dogs lead miserable lives, scavenging for rotten food. They starve and are affected by painful and debilitating diseases, some of which are communicable to humans. Many stray dogs chase and bark at the people and children sending jitters down the spine. Efforts should be made to ensure that the animal birth control and rabies vaccination programmes are run properly. Municipal Corporation should clean up the streets to make them rubbish free. The Municipal authorities have successfully captured many stray dogs with the help of expert dog catchers, but were criticized for their cruel treatment and killing of the captive dogs by PETA and other animal rights activists. It is seen that the stray dog menace happens mostly in the areas where there are rubbish & wastages are thrown. To discard or litter the waste along the road sides should be penalized and the door to door collection of food wastes by the municipal authorities should be encouraged instead of the road side bins. Efforts should be made to ensure that the animal birth control and rabies vaccination programmes are run properly. Municipal authorities should clean up the streets to make them rubbish free. The stray dog menace is in fact a grave problem in the City and the authorities should act immediately to tackle this issue seriously and effectively.

According to the Supreme Court directive no stray dog should be culled and only sterilisation is permitted for controlling its population. If the laws were in favour of street dogs, the Government should take measures to safeguard the public from the stray dogs. To control rabies, the municipalities in the affected areas have to get a clear picture about stray dogs in the area that must be vaccinated and leave the dogs in some far away areas. It is to be remembered that dogs as pets are wonderful but as strays, they are a threat to society.

Stray dogs are very much part of many communities and teach valuable lessons in friendship, co-operation, and loyalty to children and adults alike. They are our all weather best friend and they give us unconditional love which humans lack so we must learn to love and respect them. We need to understand that dogs are a part of our urban environment and have to be tackled with sense of humanity and compassion. Dogs love us unconditionally and there are examples where they have given up their lives for their caretakers. Other creatures are not there for our selfishness. Let us learn co-existence with other creatures in nature and give a fistful of rice to the stray dogs and they will never harm you. Dogs have lived with humans for eternity and try to warn the neighbourhood where they live about intruders. We must show the spirit of a loving nation by dealing with this problem in peaceful and humane manner. Dogs are man's best friends for ever, if we care for them. US Sutra | The reinvention of Kamala Harris: Reality or hype?

After her triumphant anointment as the Democratic presidential candidate, Vice President Kamala Harris's star has certainly risen. Her well-crafted and movingly-delivered acceptance speech, greeted with rousing applause, on the last day of the Democratic National Convention (DNC) last week, seems to have enthused and galvanised party cadres anew. I heard the speech, with its pitch to ordinary Americans, to accept Harris as an normal, friendly, and very nice person. It did humanise her and make her seem relatable as also render the United States less domineering or power-hungry to the world.

Her running mate, Minnesota Governor Tim Walz, also comes across as an approachable and affable, almost avuncular neighbour, rather than the prospective Vice President of the republic. Given his record as school teacher, coach, and armed forces veteran, he complements Harris' appeal among the Blacks, Hispanics, Asians, and other minority groups. The entire DNC was a bit of a gender bender too, with its conscious foregrounding of DEI (Diversity, Equity, and Inclusion) voices. Many more women were visible in the forefront as were people of colour. Also, widely represented were LGBTQ and other minorities. Certainly, the DNC represented a substantially different America than that of the Republicans led by former president Donald Trump and his running mate, Ohio senator J. D. Vance.

One might even think that this election is not just about politics, economics, race, and gender, but also a contest between masculinities. The Democratic male faces and voices seem to be consciously chosen from the testosterone disadvantaged, if not deprived, section of the male populace. The uncharitable would call them "unmanly" or wimpy. In contrast, in the Republican world, there is a return to the stronger American male stereotype. But the biggest contest in this election is about two quite different ways of being American. The Trump-Vance ticket projects ideas of competence, initiative, entrepreneurship, and America's continued dominance in the world - or, in a word, MAGA (Make America Great Again). The Harris-Walz campaign, on the other hand, is classically positioning itself as the soft-socialist, state interventionist, and pro-poor model of how America should be governed. The state is to take care of its citizens with the rich having to pay more for doing so. Having listened to Barack Obama's acceptance speech at the 2008 DNC, also held at Chicago, I cannot be make comparisons. This time there was tremendous enthusiasm for a woman of colour on the presidential ticket while in 2008 it was all about the US's first would-be Black president. But I would have to admit that the Obama moment was pure magic while Harris' return to the limelight was much more hype than hard facts. The refrain of "joy, joy, joy," too, seemed somewhat made up given how badly ordinary Americans are suffering due to the price rise and economic hardships they face on a daily basis.

Listening to Harris, I couldn't help thinking that her approach to the economy was deeply flawed and unconvincing. Worse, her view of the world and America's role in it was simplistic to the point of being unimpressive. Overall, her entire performance was about "feelings over fundamentals." But how far can feeling carry the voters along, I wondered. Outside the DNC, there were protests and violent street crimes. Black Americans and Hispancs, too, weren't happy with Harris for her role and position on opening the doors of America to illegal immigrants. It is the poorest citizens whose jobs are most vulnerable. Right in Chicago, for instance, African American women were complaining about how illegals were getting two-year's rent free accommodation, free food, even free internet while they had to struggle to make ends meet. One stunning feature of the ongoing fight for the presidency is the extent to which the media is biased in Harris' favour. All the major networks, led by CNN, seem to be fighting for Harris free of charge - with the sole exception of Fox, which is clear in its support of Trump.

Chinese aggression in South China Sea will push Philippines more into American arms

Speaking at a conference of the US Indo-Pacific Command, Philippine Defence Chief Gilberto Teodoro said this Tuesday that China is the "biggest disruptor" of peace in Southeast Asia. Tensions between Manila and Beijing over disputed reefs and waters in the South China Sea (SCS) have been on the rise in the last 12 months. Philippine and Chinese vessels have had showdowns. On Monday, China claimed taking control measures over two Philippine Coast Guard ships that had entered waters near Sabina

Shoal in the Spratly Islands to provide logistics relief to one of its ships at the reef. Interestingly, the Sabina Shoal is just 140 kilometres west of the Philippine island of Palawan. Hainan Island, China's nearest major landmass, is nearly 1,200 kilometres away. Coast guard ships of both sides ply near the shoal. Manila fears Beijing is about to build an artificial island. Beijing has tried to usurp nearly 3 million sq km of Exclusive Economic Zone (EEZ) by claiming or creating artificial islands in the SCS, much to the anger of many affected ASEAN countries that lost their rights. China built military infrastructure and continuously patrols to defend them. Most countries could at best protest in international forums against the much more powerful neighbour.

Bilateral relations between China and the Philippines were fairly close till the 1990s, peaking during the Philippine presidencies of Gloria Macapagal Arroyo and Rodrigo Duterte. Relations deteriorated due to territorial disputes in the SCS, particularly since the 2012 Scarborough Shoal standoff, and China's expansive maritime claims. The policy of current Philippine President Bongbong Marcos aims to distance its relations with China in favour of the United States. The Xi Jinping-led Chinese Communist Party is working towards greater influence over the Philippines and the region in general while combating American influence. China continues to be the Philippines' top trading partner. However, the average trust view of Filipinos towards China is negative. Philippines, one of the worst-affected countries of Chinese SCS aggression, had moved the Permanent Court of Arbitration (PCA) against China under the United Nations Convention on the Law of the Sea. On July 12, 2016, the arbitral tribunal ruled in favour of the Philippines on most of its submissions. China refused to participate or accept the tribunal ruling. The Philippines has been seeking international support, especially from the US, to pressurise China to allow freedom of seas. In recent years, the Philippines has complained of China's use of so-called grayzone tactics, or coercive actions that are just shy of armed conflict. But China has maintained its actions were professional and lawful. In June, the Philippine military said one of its sailors lost a thumb in a confrontation off the Second Thomas Shoal (also in the Spratlys) when the Chinese coast guard, welding sticks, knives, and an axe, also confiscated or destroyed Philippine equipment, including guns. This was typically akin to what the Chinese tried doing in Galwan on the India-China Line of Actual Control (LAC). A video taken on August 19, 2024, and released on August 24, 2024, shows a Chinese air force fighter jet deploying flares near a Philippine Bureau of Fisheries and Aquatic Resources (BFAR), a civilian Cessna aircraft, as it flew a "maritime domain awareness flight" near Scarborough Shoal in the SCS. The Chinese fighter jet reportedly "engaged in irresponsible and dangerous manoeuvres."
