Industry divided on plan to auction 6 GHz spectrum

'FREE IT UP'. Small players call for delicensing the spectrum while telcos want auction

Vallari Sanzgiri
Mumbai

EARLY ADVANTAGE. US and other countries delicensed the entire 6 GHz band more than five years ago, resulting in huge economic value from opening up the band KRISHNAN VV

Industry body Broadband India Forum (BIF), international bodies such as the Ultra Wide Band (UWB) Alliance and companies such as Qualcomm have called for delicensing of the 6 GHz spectrum, in contrast to leading telcos calling for an auction.

In a submission to the Telecom Regulatory Authority of India (TRAI) regarding the auction of radio frequency spectrum for International Mobile Telecommunications (IMT), the BIF said the upper 6 GHz band should be completely delicensed while low-power indoors (LPI) and very low power wi-fi should be permitted.

"India's digital future depends on broadband wireless connectivity delivered by wi-fi. Importantly, 6 GHz wi-fi technology is available now, enabling advanced and affordable communications.

However, currently in India, 6 GHz wi-fi capabilities are impaired because access to the spectrum remains unavailable," said BIF.

DEVICE COST

It pointed out how US and other countries had delicensed the entire 6 GHz band more than five years ago, resulting in huge economic value from opening up the band years ago.

"Device affordability improves when manufacturers can sell globally standard 6 GHz-enabled devices, instead of having to make region-specific variants. This brings down costs everywhere," it said.

Similarly, Qualcomm asked that the entire upper 6 GHz band (including 6425-6725 MHz and 7025-7125 MHz spectrum bands) be earmarked for IMT, and revisit the post-World Radiocommunication Conference 2027 (WRC-27). This would help India align with global harmonisation efforts and its own 6G ambitions.

"India must resist the temptation of short-term spectrum monetisation and instead prioritise strategic long-term economic and national security gains. The upper 6 GHz band is critical for mobile growth in India and it may be noted that several other countries like China, Brazil and European countries are considering the entire 700 MHz in this upper 6 GHz band for 6G," said Qualcomm.

ITU-APT Foundation of India (IAFI), a non-profit, non-political, non-partisan organisation, argued that 5G deployment relies on extensive low-, mid- and high-band frequencies across dense small-cell networks — dramatically raising capital costs.

Traditional auctions force telcos to pay high upfront fees for exclusive, long-term licenses, which limits cash flow for infrastructure expansion and innovation.

UK FTA to get Scotch whisky flowing, spurring India's alcobev industry growth

Sanjana B
Bengaluru

Mark Kent, CEO, Scotch Whisky Association

The India-UK Free Trade Agreement (FTA) is being hailed as one of the most significant trade deals for the UK in recent years as it sets a framework for greater collaboration and strategic partnership among all stakeholders, including domestic Indian Made Foreign Liquor manufacturers.

According to Mark Kent, Chief Executive, Scotch Whisky Association (SWA), the pact marks an opportunity to expand in India, currently the world's largest whisky market, with tariffs set to decrease over the next decade opening new avenues for mutual investment and collaboration between Scotch producers and Indian counterparts.

FOR MORE VARIETY

The FTA is said to support the long-term ambitions of Scotch whisky producers to grow in the Indian market. The current 150 per cent customs duty will fall to 75 per cent at the first stage of entry-into-force, followed by a progressive reduction to 40 per cent over the next decade. Over time, the lowered tariffs will allow more Scotch whisky producers to export to India, giving consumers access to a greater variety of brands.

The SWA CEO highlighted that India is the largest market for Scotch by volume, with nearly 79 per cent of exports in bulk form, primarily used for blending with IMFL. The UK currently exports to 180 markets.

India sells over 400 million cases of alcoholic spirits annually. Imported spirits, bottled in origin and bulk bottled in India, account for only 2.6 per cent of the total market.

The imported category is dominated by whisky, with Scotch making up 82 per cent of the overall imports of 10.9 million cases of spirits.

"This could present a big opportunity for Indian IMFL producers to have more options to enhance product quality for domestic consumers, while becoming more competitive globally. The agreement also opens

The changes will take time as the agreement is yet to come into effect, with the process still underway on the UK side.

Once implemented, expected by the second quarter of next year, both countries can begin the next phase of collaboration.

The FTA is also expected to spur investment in distilleries, create jobs, promote skill transfer and boost tourism and hospitality. Several Indian companies are exploring opportunities to build or acquire distilleries, marking the start of a symbiotic partnership.

"For Bottled in Scotland, we expect to see growth across segments, but mainly at that premium end of the scale. We also expect to see more players entering the market. Smaller companies previously didn't have the confidence to enter new markets," said Kent.

Even as external tariffs are reduced, regulatory frameworks at the state level remain crucial. Ensuring market-based pricing will benefit both consumers and government revenues.

Lockheed Martin hopes to strengthen India footprint with Bengaluru Suppliers Conference

Press Trust of India
New Delhi

Representatives of more than 30 Indian companies interacted directly with global defence major Lockheed Martin and international partners in Bengaluru to explore opportunities for collaboration and showcase their technological capabilities to support future procurement programmes for the Indian armed forces, according to an official readout.

Post the conference, Lockheed Martin Supply Chain teams are visiting close to 20 supplier facilities across India to assess their capabilities and establish alliances, it said.

EXPLORING OPTIONS

Lockheed Martin concluded the 11th edition of its India Suppliers Conference on November 3, reinforcing its long-standing commitment to strengthening India's defence industrial base and connecting Indian companies with its global supply chains, the firm said on Monday.

"The one-day conference saw participation from more than 30 Indian companies across large firms, micro, small and medium enterprises, and start-ups," it said.

More than 100 delegates attended the conference and close to 50 business-to-business meetings were organised to explore partnership opportunities.

Abby Lilly, Chief Supply Chain Officer, Lockheed Martin, shared her perspective on how global sourcing, manufacturing excellence and policy alignment will serve as key enablers for strengthening India-US strategic collaboration.

AWARD WINNERS

Rossell Techsys Ltd was honoured for its outstanding support to the firm's production programmes and offset commitments in India, while Veer-O-Metals Pvt Ltd was recognised for its excellent quality control and affordability initiatives, it said.
