Musk blinks first in Trump feud that cost him $34 billion

AKAYLA GARDNER, JOSH WINGROVE, KATE SULLIVAN & DEREK WALLBANK
June 6

WHEN ELON MUSK and Donald Trump joined forces during the presidential campaign, there was always a question over how long their alliance would last and who would prevail if it didn't work out.

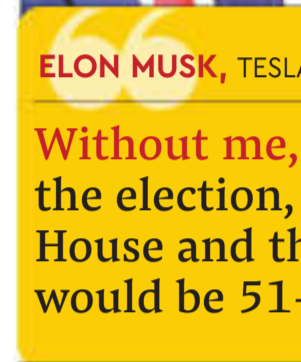

After the public spat between the world's richest man and its most powerful leader spun out of control, the answer was clear: It was Musk who eventually backed down when Tesla Inc.'s stock price tanked and his net worth crumbled by $34 billion. The damage to Musk's business empire will be difficult to repair—with Tesla's stock up only about 4% soon after the market's open, recouping just some of its previous day's slide.

After the fight wiped a record $53 billion from the market value of the electric carmaker on Thursday and dragged down broader indexes, it became clear how much Musk had to lose. And he blinked, pulling back from a threat to idle SpaceX's astronaut-carrying vehicle and

DONALD TRUMP, PRESIDENT, US

He said the most beautiful things about me, and he hasn't said bad about me personally, but I'm sure that'll be next

ELON MUSK, TESLA FOUNDER

Without me, Trump would have lost the election, Dems would control the House and the Republicans would be 51-49 in the Senate heading online advice to stand down from his attacks. At various points Musk claimed credit for Trump's victory, endorsed his impeachment and even suggested the president was implicated in the sex crimes of Jeffrey Epstein. By 9:20 p.m., Musk had calmed, telling a user on his X platform that cooling off for a couple of days was "good advice." Still, it wasn't clear Trump shared that view.

While there were signs Musk was looking for an off-ramp, including a Politico report that Trump staffers were working on arranging a call with the billionaire, a senior White House official said no call is in the works for Friday.

And in a sign Trump is still fuming over the spat, the official said the president is considering getting rid of a Tesla vehicle he obtained during a White House event staged to show solidarity with the automaker at a time when dealerships were facing protests and vandalism.

US jobs report points to moderating labour mkt

US JOB GROWTH moderated in May and the prior months were revised lower, indicating employers are cautious about growth prospects as they weigh the Trump administration's economic policy. Nonfarm payrolls rose to 139,000 last month after a combined 95,000 in downward revisions to the prior two months, as per Bureau of Labour Statistics data. The unemployment rate held at 4.2%, while wage growth accelerated.

The payrolls figure, which was slightly better than expectations, helps alleviate concerns of a rapid deterioration in labour demand as companies contend with higher costs related to tariffs and prospects of slower economic activity. President

Trump's decision to pause some of the more punitive import duties, including those on China, has helped lift sentiment among businesses as well as consumers. "Employers have been 'hoarding labour' in the face of massive corrosive uncertainty," Carl Weinberg, chief economist at High Frequency Economics, said in a note.

Judge halts Trump ban on Harvard students

A FEDERAL JUDGE late Thursday temporarily blocked a proclamation by President Trump that banned foreign students from entering the US to attend Harvard University.

Trump's proclamation, issued on Wednesday, was the latest attempt to prevent the nation's oldest and college from enrolling a quarter of its students, who accounts for much of Harvard's research & scholarship. Harvard filed a legal challenge, asking for a judge to block Trump's order and calling it illegal retaliation for Harvard's rejection of White House demands.

Tesla shares gain after $152 billion selloff

TESLA SHARES RECOUPED some losses triggered by a spat between CEO Elon Musk and US President Donald Trump, although a truce appeared uncertain on Friday as a White House official said the president was not keen on talking to his former ally.

The stock rose 4% after a steep fall in the previous session that wiped out $152 billion in market value when the world's most powerful man and its richest publicly entered a war of words over the tax and spending bill.

Earlier, a Politico report had said Trump and Musk were likely to talk later in the day.

But Trump told CNN on Friday, "I'm not even thinking about Elon," adding the billionaire has "got a problem".

Tensions escalated after Musk stepped up his criticism of Trump's sweeping tax bill, which proposed largely ending the popular $7,500 EV tax incentive by the end of 2025.

SpaceX risks losing govt contracts

ABOUT $22 BILLION of SpaceX's government contracts are at risk and multiple US space programs could face dramatic changes in the fallout from Elon Musk and President Donald Trump's explosive feud on Thursday. The disagreement, rooted in Musk's criticism of Trump's tax-cut and spending legislation that began last week, quickly spiraled out of control. Trump lashed out at Musk when the president spoke in the Oval Office. Then in a series of X posts, Musk launched barbs at Trump, who threatened to terminate govt contracts with his firms.

Musk said he would begin "decommissioning" SpaceX's Dragon spacecraft used by NASA. Hours later, however, Musk appeared to reverse course. Responding to a follower on X urging him and Trump to "cool off and take a step back for a couple of days," he wrote: "Good advice. Ok, we won't decommission Dragon."

Under a $5 billion contract, the Dragon capsule has been the agency's only US vessel capable of carrying astronauts to and from the International Space Station, making his company a critical element of the US space program.

Trump is not interested in talking to Musk: White House

US PRESIDENT DONALD Trump is not interested in talking with his former ally Elon Musk, amid a bitter feud over the president's sweeping tax-cut bill, a White House official said, adding that no phone call between the two men is planned for the day.

separate White House official had said earlier that Trump and Musk were going to talk to each other on Friday. "I'm not even thinking about Elon. He's got a problem, the poor guy's got a problem," Trump told CNN on Friday morning.

Bangladesh polls by April next year

Dhaka, June 6

BANGLADESH'S INTERIM LEADER Muhammad Yunus on Friday said that the country will hold national elections in the first half of April 2026. In a address to the nation on Friday, the Nobel Peace Prize laureate said that the Election Commission would roll out a detailed roadmap for the election in due course.

Yunus took over three days after former PM Sheikh Hasina was ousted in a student-led mass uprising in August 2024, ending her 15-year rule. Hasina has been in exile in India since. The interim government banned Hasina's Awami League party, which is one of the country's two largest political parties.

Hasina faces trial for hundreds of deaths related to the uprising in July and August last year. The Bangladesh Nationalist Party, or BNP, headed by Hasina's archrival and former prime minister Khaleda Zia, had been demanding the elections be held in December.

The BNP is the main political party and is hoping to form the next government in the absence of Hasina's party.
