AMERICAN CHIP GIANT SHARES GAIN 1% Nvidia gets US subpoena in escalating antitrust probe

IAN KING & LEAH NYLEN
September 4

THE US JUSTICE Department (DOJ) sent subpoenas to Nvidia and other companies as it seeks evidence that the chip-maker violated antitrust laws, an escalation of its investigation into the dominant provider of AI processors.

The DOJ, which had previously delivered questionnaires to companies, is now sending legally binding requests that obligate recipients to provide information, according to people familiar with the investigation. That takes the government a step closer to launching a formal complaint.

Antitrust officials are concerned that Nvidia is making it harder to switch to other suppliers and penalises buyers that don't exclusively use its artificial intelligence chips, according to the people, who asked not to be identified because the discussions are private.

Nvidia shares gained 1% on Wednesday to trade at $109.01 after falling as much as 3.6% earlier in the session. The stock has more than doubled this year — fueled by explosive sales growth at the Santa Clara, California-based chipmaker.

As part of the probe, which Bloomberg previously reported in June, investigators have been contacting other technology

companies to gather information. The DOJ's San Francisco office is taking the lead running the inquiry, the people said. A representative for the DOJ declined to comment.

In response to questions about the probe, Nvidia said that its market dominance stems from the quality of its products, which deliver faster performance. "Nvidia wins on merit, as reflected in our benchmark results and value to customers, who can choose whatever solution is best for them," the company said.

Nvidia has drawn regulatory scrutiny since becoming the world's most valuable chipmaker and a key beneficiary of the AI spending boom. Sales have been more than doubling each quarter, and it's eclipsed onetime chip leaders such as

Intel.

In the DOJ probe, regulators have been investigating Nvidia's acquisition of RunAI, a deal announced in April. That company makes software for managing AI computing, and there are concerns that the tie-up will make it more difficult for customers to switch away from Nvidia chips. Regulators also are inquiring whether Nvidia gives preferential supply and pricing to customers who use its technology exclusively or buy its complete systems, people said.

Nvidia, founded in 1993, made its name by selling graphics cards to computer gamers. But its approach to chipmaking ultimately proved useful for building AI models, a process that involves bombarding the software with data.

Traders watch $100-share level amid rout

THE SHARP selloff that wiped a record $279 billion off Nvidia's market value on Tuesday has traders scouring charts for clues as to where the pain might end. For Jay Woods, chief global strategist at Freedom Capital Markets, $100 per share is a key level to watch — around the price of last month's lowest close.

Chipmaker to fund Tokyo AI startup

NVIDIA HAS joined a $100 million-plus funding round for Tokyo startup Sakana AI, one of the larger investments the US chipmaker has made so far in Japan's AI arena. Sakana secured the Series A led by New Enterprise Associates, Khosla Ventures and Lux Capital.

Zelensky orders war reshuffle

UKRAINE'S FOREIGN MINISTER became the latest cabinet minister to resign as President Volodymyr Zelensky pushed ahead with the most sweeping government shakeup in the two and a half-year war with Russia.

Dmytro Kuleba, the public face of Zelensky's diplomatic effort to forge a path to NATO and the European Union, became the sixth cabinet member to submit his resignation in the last two days. He'll likely be replaced by his deputy, Andrii Sybiha, according to a person familiar with the overhaul. The shakeup leaves Western allies guffing after they were caught off guard by last month's incursion into Russia's Kursk region. With Zelensky's firing of his top general and the removal of a minister who worked closely with the US earlier this year, Kyiv has a track record of raising questions over the rationale of abrupt personnel changes.

And while several top officials will get new posts, the president's reshuffle caps a week of turmoil as Russia steps up missile and drone attacks on Ukrainian cities and its forces quicken their advance in the eastern Donetsk region.

Trump attempts to delay NY sentencing

DONALD TRUMP APPEALED a ruling that prevents him from moving his New York hush money case to federal court, pressing ahead with a bid to delay his September 18 sentencing until well after the November presidential election.

ruled he didn't have jurisdiction over the state case, in which Trump was convicted in May. Hellerstein's ruling is a setback for Trump, who has repeatedly sought to delay the sentencing.

Trump argues that the US Supreme Court's landmark July ruling that presidents have broad immunity from criminal charges over official conduct meant his conviction should be dismissed, even though the hush money case related to his actions just before his 2016 election victory. He has further contended that the issue should be decided by a federal court. Trump argues the New York trial was tainted by testimony and other evidence that would have been barred under the Supreme Court's immunity standard, while Manhattan prosecutors have said the high court ruling should have no impact on the jury verdict.

AMERICAN CHIP GIANT SHARES GAIN 1% Nvidia gets US subpoena in escalating antitrust probe

IAN KING & LEAH NYLEN
September 4

THE US JUSTICE Department (DOJ) sent subpoenas to Nvidia and other companies as it seeks evidence that the chip-maker violated antitrust laws, an escalation of its investigation into the dominant provider of AI processors.

The DOJ, which had previously delivered questionnaires to companies, is now sending legally binding requests that obligate recipients to provide information, according to people familiar with the investigation. That takes the government a step closer to launching a formal complaint.

Antitrust officials are concerned that Nvidia is making it harder to switch to other suppliers and penalises buyers that don't exclusively use its artificial intelligence chips, according to the people, who asked not to be identified because the discussions are private.

Nvidia shares gained 1% on Wednesday to trade at $109.01 after falling as much as 3.6% earlier in the session. The stock has more than doubled this year — fueled by explosive sales growth at the Santa Clara, California-based chipmaker.

As part of the probe, which Bloomberg previously reported in June, investigators have been contacting other technology

companies to gather information. The DOJ's San Francisco office is taking the lead running the inquiry, the people said. A representative for the DOJ declined to comment.

In response to questions about the probe, Nvidia said that its market dominance stems from the quality of its products, which deliver faster performance. "Nvidia wins on merit, as reflected in our benchmark results and value to customers, who can choose whatever solution is best for them," the company said.

Nvidia has drawn regulatory scrutiny since becoming the world's most valuable chipmaker and a key beneficiary of the AI spending boom. Sales have been more than doubling each quarter, and it's eclipsed onetime chip leaders such as

Intel.

In the DOJ probe, regulators have been investigating Nvidia's acquisition of RunAI, a deal announced in April. That company makes software for managing AI computing, and there are concerns that the tie-up will make it more difficult for customers to switch away from Nvidia chips. Regulators also are inquiring whether Nvidia gives preferential supply and pricing to customers who use its technology exclusively or buy its complete systems, people said.

Nvidia, founded in 1993, made its name by selling graphics cards to computer gamers. But its approach to chipmaking ultimately proved useful for building AI models, a process that involves bombarding the software with data.

Traders watch $100-share level amid rout

THE SHARP selloff that wiped a record $279 billion off Nvidia's market value on Tuesday has traders scouring charts for clues as to where the pain might end. For Jay Woods, chief global strategist at Freedom Capital Markets, $100 per share is a key level to watch — around the price of last month's lowest close.

Chipmaker to fund Tokyo AI startup

NVIDIA HAS joined a $100 million-plus funding round for Tokyo startup Sakana AI, one of the larger investments the US chipmaker has made so far in Japan's AI arena. Sakana secured the Series A led by New Enterprise Associates, Khosla Ventures and Lux Capital.

Zelensky orders war reshuffle

UKRAINE'S FOREIGN MINISTER became the latest cabinet minister to resign as President Volodymyr Zelensky pushed ahead with the most sweeping government shakeup in the two and a half-year war with Russia.

Dmytro Kuleba, the public face of Zelensky's diplomatic effort to forge a path to NATO and the European Union, became the sixth cabinet member to submit his resignation in the last two days. He'll likely be replaced by his deputy, Andrii Sybiha, according to a person familiar with the overhaul. The shakeup leaves Western allies guffing after they were caught off guard by last

month's incursion into Russia's Kursk region. With Zelensky's firing of his top general and the removal of a minister who worked closely with the US earlier this year, Kyiv has a track record of raising questions over the rationale of abrupt personnel changes.

And while several top officials will get new posts, the president's reshuffle caps a week of turmoil as Russia steps up missile and drone attacks on Ukrainian cities and its forces quicken their advance in the eastern Donetsk region.

Trump attempts to delay NY sentencing

DONALD TRUMP APPEALED a ruling that prevents him from moving his New York hush money case to federal court, pressing ahead with a bid to delay his September 18 sentencing until well after the November presidential election.

He ruled he didn't have jurisdiction over the state case, in which Trump was convicted in May. Hellerstein's ruling is a setback for Trump, who has repeatedly sought to delay the sentencing.

Trump argues that the US Supreme Court's landmark July ruling that presidents have broad immunity from criminal charges over official conduct meant his conviction should be dismissed, even though the hush money case related to his actions just before his 2016 election victory. He has further contended that the issue should be decided by a federal court. Trump argues the New York trial was tainted by testimony and other evidence that would have been barred under the Supreme Court's immunity standard, while Manhattan prosecutors have said the high court ruling should have no impact on the jury verdict.
