Dabur faces a tangle of growth headwinds

Weak monsoon fears, West Asia turmoil, rising costs cloud outlook

RAM PRASAD SAHU
Mumbai, 15 April

The stock of Dabur India has shed over 17 per cent since the start of the Iran war, amid concerns that a weak monsoon, the West Asian crisis, and higher input costs will weigh on revenues and margins.

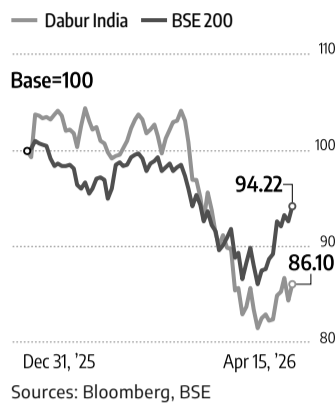

While the domestic fast-moving consumer goods (FMCG) business saw a sequential recovery in demand in the fourth quarter (January-March) of 2025-26 (FY26) and Dabur is expected to post high single-digit growth, some gains were offset by challenges in key international markets in West Asia. Given concerns around rural growth and uncertainty over international revenues, brokerages remain cautious on the stock.

The immediate worry is the impact of multiple headwinds on rural demand. Analysts at Systematix Research, led by Dhananjay Sinha, point out that the country's rural economy faces twin risks of a monsoon deficiency and sharply rising input costs in 2026, threatening agricultural output, farm incomes, rural demand, and food inflation.

Macquarie Research believes that a weak monsoon and fertiliser availability could put rural demand at risk and hurt volume growth. Rural sales salience is highest for Dabur at 45-50 per cent, followed by Britannia at 40-45 per cent. Nestlé has the lowest rural exposure at 20 per cent. The brokerage remains cautious on rural-focused plays such as Dabur and Britannia.

Compounding the weather risk

is the ongoing US-Iran conflict, which has disrupted shipping through the Strait of Hormuz, a critical route for fertilisers, raw materials (ammonia, phosphoric acid, sulphur, natural gas/liquefied natural gas), and fuel.

This has led to sharp increases in global fertiliser and input prices, supply-chain disruptions, and higher costs for Indian farmers and manufacturers. While there has already been an impact on fertiliser volumes and margins in Q4, the real challenge is expected from the first quarter (April-June/Q1) of 2026-27 onwards, during the kharif planting season, says Systematix Research. It expects softer rural demand for consumer companies, with commodity cost inflation affecting demand, pricing, and margins.

Apart from rural demand and commodity inflation, the company also faces pressure on international sales due to its presence in West Asia. West Asia is its largest market outside India, with the Middle East and North Africa (MENA) region accounting for 8 per cent of consolidated revenue. Major categories include hair care, oral care, skin care, healthcare, and food. In export markets, supply constraints, order cancellations, higher freight, and insurance costs are expected to reflect as early as Q4FY26, brokerages say.

For Q4, Dabur's consolidated revenue is likely to grow in the mid-single digits, led by high single-digit growth in the India FMCG business, while the international business is expected to remain muted with low single-digit growth. While West Asia will be impacted by the Iran war, other markets such as Türkiye, Bangladesh, and the UK have performed well and are likely to grow at double digits in constant currency terms.

Although domestic macroeconomic indicators point to a gradual recovery in consumption, persistent execution challenges keep Motilal Oswal Research cautious. Factoring in near-term headwinds in Dabur's international markets, the brokerage has cut its earnings per share estimates by 2-3 per cent.

What could support the stock, however, are valuations. BNP Paribas Research notes that Dabur has faced growth challenges, with earnings estimate cuts and a derating of valuation multiples. However, the stock is trading below its last-decade average one-year forward price-to-earnings ratio and appears attractive relative to peers.

INVESTING IN FDs VIA DIGITAL PLATFORMS

Enjoy access to multiple lenders, compare options

SANJAY KUMAR SINGH & KARTHIK JEROME

Zerodha recently introduced fixed deposits (FDs) on its investment platform Coin. Several players, such as Stable Money, smallcase, and Flipkart-backed super.money now offer FDs through their digital platforms.

Access to multiple lenders
These platforms make FD investing seamless and accessible. They allow investors to compare offerings across multiple banks and corporates at one place.

"Investors can discover, compare, invest in, and manage fixed deposits end-to-end through a single digital interface," says Saurabh Jain, cofounder & CEO, Stable Money. They can check interest rates, tenure options, and issuer details.

Diversification across institutions becomes possible instead of having to concentrate deposits with a single bank.

"Platforms also improve access to smaller institutions, particularly small finance banks (SFBs), in regions beyond those where they have a branch presence," says Jain.

Behavioural and other risks
Some risks could arise from investor behaviour. They may focus too heavily on the displayed interest rate and choose the highest-return option without adequately considering risk, especially in corporate deposits. Investors may also fail to factor in important terms of a deposit, such as the conditions for premature withdrawal.

Who regulates these platforms
These platforms are primarily facilitators. "The FDs are issued

How to turn PPF extensions into retirement corpus

In India's crowded savings market, where investors often juggle market-linked returns and capital safety, the Public Provident Fund (PPF) remains a steady, long-term option. While neither flashy nor high-yielding, its government backing, tax efficiency and disciplined structure make it a consistent choice for retirement-focused investors. At maturity after 15 years, investors face a critical choice: Withdraw the corpus or extend the account. Unlike many fixed-income products, PPF allows unlimited extensions in five-year blocks.

Investors can choose between:
● Extension with contribution:

by the respective banks which fall under the purview of the Reserve Bank of India (RBI)," says Mohit Mehra, vice president, primary markets & payments, Zerodha.

Jain says these deposits will enjoy insurance cover of up to ₹5 lakh per depositor per bank through the Depositor Insurance and Credit Guarantee Corporation (DICGC).

Financial planners, however, are of the view that regulatory oversight is confusing because the different instruments offered by them fall under different regulators. "Deposits are regulated by the RBI. But some of these platforms also offer mutual funds that are regulated by Sebi," says Vishal Dhawan, founder and chief executive officer (CEO), Plan Ahead Wealth Advisors. For investors seeking redress, the bank will address issues related to the deposit itself. If the bank does not address their concern, investors may escalate their complaint to the banking ombudsman.

"The platform can address transaction-related or operational queries," says Mehra.

Selecting a platform
Investors should assess the reliability of the platform. "Go with a known name you are comfortable with," says Arnab Pandya, founder, Moneyeduschool. Deepesh Raghav, a Sebi-registered investment advisor, also suggests going with one of the more established platforms. Platform selection should also depend on interface quality, operational reliability, the range of deposits available, and whether investors want products beyond FDs.

Buy FDs for predictability
An FD suits investors whose primary objective is certainty of return and capital protection. "They can offer decent post-tax returns to investors in the lower tax brackets," says Dhawan. Taxation is an issue. "Their post-tax return will not beat inflation, and will be quite low for those in the higher tax brackets," says Pandya. Many investors nowadays gravitate towards FDs of SFBs for higher returns. "In theory, SFBs carry a higher risk of failure than large scheduled commercial banks, even if that risk is not expected to materialise easily," says Raghav. Dhawan suggests that allocation to SFBs' FDs should not exceed 20 per cent of total FD allocation.

If inflation rises, interest rates could follow suit. "Avoid waiting for too long for better rates because rate cycles are difficult to predict," says Dhawan. Instead, stagger your investments. "Also, ladder your FDs so that they mature at different points," says Dhawan.
