Facebook struggles to balance civility, growth

NEW YORK TIMES
San Francisco, November 24

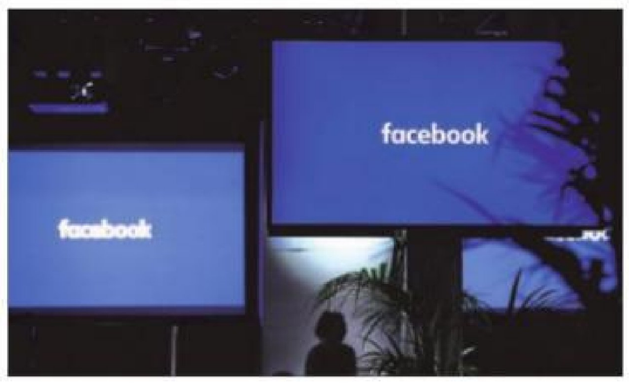

IN THE TENSE days after the presidential election, a team of Facebook employees presented the chief executive, Mark Zuckerberg, with an alarming finding: Election-related misinformation was going viral on the site.

President Trump was already casting the election as rigged, and stories from right-wing media outlets with false and misleading claims about discarded ballots, miscounted votes and skewed tallies were among the most popular news stories on the platform.

In response, the employees proposed an emergency change to the site's news feed algorithm, which helps determine what more than two billion people see every day. It involved emphasising the importance of what Facebook calls "news ecosystem quality" scores, or NEQ, a secret internal ranking it assigns to news publishers based on signals about the quality of their journalism.

Typically, NEQ scores play a minor role in determining what appears on users' feeds. But several days after the election, Zuckerberg agreed to increase the weight that Facebook's algorithm gave to NEQ scores to make sure authoritative news appeared more prominently, said three people with knowledge of the decision, who were not authorised to discuss internal deliberations.

The change was part of the "break glass" plans Facebook had spent months developing for the aftermath of a contested election. It resulted in a spike in visibility for big, mainstream publishers like CNN, The New York Times and NPR, while posts from highly engaged hyperpartisan pages, such as Breitbart and Occupy Democrats, became less visible, the employees said.

It was a vision of what a calmer, less divisive Facebook might look like. Some employees argued the change should become permanent, even if it was unclear how that might affect the amount of time people spent on Facebook. In an employee meeting the week after the election, workers asked whether the "nicer news feed" could stay, said two people who attended.

Guy Rosen, a Facebook executive who oversees the integrity division that is in charge of cleaning up the platform, said on a call with reporters last week that the changes were always meant to be temporary. "There has never been a plan to make these permanent," he said. John Hegeman, who oversees the news feed, said in an interview that while Facebook might roll back these experiments, it would study and learn from them.

The news feed debate illustrates a central tension that some inside Facebook are feeling acutely these days: that the company's aspirations of improving the world are often at odds with its desire for dominance.

In the past several months, as Facebook has come under more scrutiny for its role in amplifying false and divisive information, its employees have clashed over the company's future. On one side are idealists, including many rank-and-file workers and some executives, who want to do more to limit misinformation and polarising content.

On the other side are pragmatists who fear those measures could hurt Facebook's growth, or provoke a political backlash that leads to painful regulation.

"There are tensions in virtually every product decision we make and we've developed a companywide framework called 'Better Decisions' to ensure we make our decisions accurately, and that our goals are directly connected to delivering the best possible experiences for people," said Joe Osborne, a Facebook spokesman.

Ford's new CEO tackles warranty costs in bid to boost profit

REUTERS
Detroit, November 24

QUALITY IS ONCE again Job One at Ford Motor. Taking a page from the automaker's ad slogan of the 1980s and '90s, Ford's new chief executive, Jim Farley, is aiming to rein in rising warranty repair costs that are a key reason why the Dearborn, Michigan, automaker's financial performance in North America has lagged that of its archrival, General Motors.

As part of its new effort to cut warranty costs, Ford has told suppliers it will charge them upfront for half the cost of a warranty problem. Suppliers might get some of the money back if they resolve problems more quickly.

"What we are striving for is to fix the issues as fast as possible so that those adjustments are as small as possible," Kumar Galhotra, president of the automaker's Americas and International Markets group, told Reuters. Ford North America's chief operating officer, Lisa Drake, said in the same interview supplier contracts have always allowed such debits.

India successfully test fires land-attack BrahMos supersonic cruise missile

PRESS TRUST OF INDIA
New Delhi, November 24

INDIA ON TUESDAY "successfully" test fired the surface-to-surface supersonic cruise missile BrahMos as part of a series of planned trials of the weapon, known for its precision strike capabilities, official sources said.

The range of the new land-attack version of the missile has been extended to 400 km from the original 290 km but its speed has been maintained at 2.8 Mach or almost three times the speed of sound, they said.

"The land-attack version of the missile was test-fired in the Andaman and Nicobar at around 10 am and it was a successful trial", an official source said.

According to official sources, in the next few days, the Indian Air Force and the Indian Navy are scheduled to carry out separate test-firing of the new version of the air-launched and naval versions of the supersonic cruise missile respectively.

BrahMos Aerospace, an India-Russian joint venture, produces the lethal weapon that can be launched from submarines, ships, aircraft, or from land platforms.

'Fabulous five' can overcome pink ball inexperience: says Ravi Shastri

REUTERS
New Delhi, November 24

INDIA CRICKET COACH Ravi Shastri acknowledged his team lack Australia's pinkball experience but is convinced their "fabulous five" pacemen can bowl the tourists to a second successive test series victory Down Under.

Australia have played seven day-night tests, the most by any country, since 2015 and won each of them.

India were late to embrace the innovation and played their only pink ball test against Bangladesh in Kolkata last year.

A mouth-watering four-test series between the top two teams in the World Test Championship standings will get underway with a pink ball contest at Adelaide from December 17.

"We begin with pink ball cricket where we lack experience," Shastri told the Sportstar magazine.

"We have played just one pink ball test, but there is a qualitative difference between them (Bangladesh) and Australia. It is like cheese and chalk. "Our boys have not played much of pink-ball in domestic cricket, but I just want them to go and enjoy their game."

Skipper Virat Kohli, who led India to their maiden test series victory in Australia two seasons ago, will return home after the Adelaide test to attend the birth of his first child.

While it would take some sheen off India's batting lineup in the last three tests, Shastri was confident India's five-member pace attack, which includes Jasprit Bumrah and Mohammed Shami, could defend decent totals.

"We have a fabulous five ... You put up runs on the board and watch these fast bowlers hunt the opposition. They can beat Australia in their own den." There was no pressure on the team and India would play "fearless cricket". "Ask any international player and he will tell you that it is different. It is challenging. Toughest used to be the West Indies in the '80s and post that it has been Australia."
