SANDIP G
Mumbai, June 10

A REMIXED VERSION of the centuries-old folk song Cielito Lindo whistles out from car stereos and restaurant radios. "Ay, ay, ay, ay... Cantayo no lores..." Sing and don't cry, the lines roll on, in soulful voices, from Trini Lopez to Luciano Pavarotti. The national football team's feverish fans have long embraced it as their patron song, rendered passionately in the stands, whether lose, draw or win. It is a song of both joy and lament — best accompanied, the locals insist, by pulque, not its more commercialised variant tequila — and it is how Mexicans perceive the World Cup.

The fans are said that ticket prices are unbearably expensive; proud that the mundial is kicking off in Mexico City. They grouse that they are hosting only nine games of 104, with the US apportioning 78; yet take comfort that El Tri could play all their group games on home soil. There is unalloyed optimism that they will go beyond the cursed quinto partido — the fifth game, the wall Mexico has never climbed — but anguish that the finest footballers on the planet are unlikely to step into Mexico City, Monterrey and Guadalajara. A radio programme spent an hour on why Lionel Messi's career is incomplete without a World Cup at the Azteca — the stadium where Pelé lifted the trophy in 1970, where Maradona scored the Hand of God in 1986, and which becomes the first venue in history to host three World Cup opening matches. The question was not rhetorical.

Two of the all-time greats would probably bid farewell to the grand stage. At 38 and 41, it is improbable that Lionel Messi and Cristiano Ronaldo have another World Cup in them. Messi could defend the title; Ronaldo could kiss his first. It would be the last dance of Luka Modric; the first act of Lamine Yamal's symphony; the stage for Kylian Mbappe to reclaim his lost standing.

No team is a runaway favourite, but several could wrestle the sceptre from Argentina. The tactics could be intriguing. The heavy pressing style that has defined European football could melt in the draining heat and humidity of the Americas.

Social tensions mar celebrations on eve

ESCALATING PROTESTS AND social tensions in Mexico's capital threaten to derail FIFA World Cup celebrations on the eve of the opening ceremony as protesters block off access to the main plaza set to host the country's main fan celebrations.

Mexico jointly hosts the soccer tournament with the US and

Canada and kicks off festivities Thursday with a star-studded event, even as some critics say the government has spent too much time and money catering to international visitors at the residents' expense.

The games begin as Mexican President Claudia Sheinbaum walks a political tightrope, navigating a deteriorating relationship with the US ahead of July trade negotiations, along with political scandals and security concerns following a burst of violence in a World Cup host city in February.

Pressure has mounted as guests flood into Mexico City.

A REMIXED VERSION of the centuries-old folk song Cielito Lindo whistles out from car stereos and restaurant radios. "Ay, ay, ay, ay... Cantayo no llores..." Sing and don't cry, the lines roll on, in soulful voices, from Trini Lopez to Luciano Pavarotti. The national football team's feverish fans have long embraced it as their patron song, rendered passionately in the stands, whether lose, draw or win. It is a song of both joy and lament — best accompanied, the locals insist, by pulque, not its more commercialised variant tequila — and it is how Mexicans perceive the World Cup.

The fans are sad that ticket prices are unbearably expensive; proud that the mundial is kicking off in Mexico City. They grouse that they are hosting only nine games of 104, with the US apportioning 78; yet take comfort that El Tri could play all their group games on home soil. There is unalloyed optimism that they will go beyond the cursed quinto partido — the fifth game, the wall Mexico has never climbed — but anguish that the finest footballers on the planet are unlikely to step into Mexico City, Monterrey and Guadalajara. A radio programme spent an hour on why Lionel Messi's career is incomplete without a World Cup at the Azteca — the stadium where Pelé lifted the trophy in 1970, where Maradona scored the Hand of God in 1986, and which becomes the first venue in history to host three World Cup opening matches. The question was not rhetorical.

Two of the all-time greats would probably bid farewell to the grand stage. At 38 and 41, it is improbable that Lionel Messi and Cristiano Ronaldo have another World Cup in them. Messi could defend the title; Ronaldo could kiss his first. It would be the last dance of Luka Modric; the first act of Lamine Yamal's symphony; the stage for Kylian Mbappe to reclaim his lost standing.

No team is a runaway favourite, but several could wrestle the sceptre from Argentina. The heavy pressing style that has defined European football could melt in the draining heat and humidity of the Americas.

Social tensions mar celebrations on eve

ESCALATING PROTESTS AND social tensions in Mexico's capital threaten to derail FIFA World Cup celebrations on the eve of the opening ceremony as protesters block off access to the main plaza set to host the country's main fan celebrations. Mexico jointly hosts the soccer tournament with the US and

Canada and kicks off festivities Thursday with a star-studded event, even as some critics say the government has spent too much time and money catering to international visitors at the residents' expense. The games begin as Mexican President Claudia Sheinbaum walks a political tightrope, navigating a deteriorating relationship with the US ahead of July trade negotiations, along with political scandals and security concerns following a burst of violence in a World Cup host city in February. Pressure has mounted as guests flood into Mexico City. —AP

ESCALATING PROTESTS AND social tensions in Mexico's capital threaten to derail FIFA World Cup celebrations on the eve of the opening ceremony as protesters block off access to the main plaza set to host the country's main fan celebrations. Mexico jointly hosts the soccer tournament with the US and

Canada and kicks off festivities Thursday with a star-studded event, even as some critics say the government has spent too much time and money catering to international visitors at the residents' expense.

The games begin as Mexican President Claudia Sheinbaum walks a political tightrope, navigating a deteriorating relationship with the US ahead of July trade negotiations, along with political scandals and security concerns following a burst of violence in a World Cup host city in February.

Pressure has mounted as guests flood into Mexico City.

SANDIP G
Mumbai, June 10

A REMIXED VERSION of the centuries-old folk song Cielito Lindo whistles out from car stereos and restaurant radios. "Ay, ay, ay, ay... Cantay no llores..." Sing and don't cry, the lines roll on, in soulful voices, from Trini Lopez to Luciano Pavarotti. The national football team's feverish fans have long embraced it as their patron song, rendered passionately in the stands, whether lose, draw or win. It is a song of both joy and lament — best accompanied, the locals insist, by pulque, not its more commercialised variant tequila — and it is how Mexicans perceive the World Cup.

The fans are said that ticket prices are unbearably expensive; proud that the mundial is kicking off in Mexico City. They grouse that they are hosting only nine games of 104, with the US apportioning 78; yet take comfort that El Tri could play all their group games on home soil. There is unalloyed optimism that they will go beyond the cursed quinto partido — the fifth game, the wall Mexico has never climbed — but anguish that the finest footballers on the planet are unlikely to step into Mexico City, Monterrey and Guadalajara. A radio programme spent an hour on why Lionel Messi's career is incomplete without a World Cup at the Azteca — the stadium where Pelé lifted the trophy in 1970, where Maradona scored the Hand of God in 1986, and which becomes the first venue in history to host three World Cup opening matches. The question was not rhetorical.

Two of the all-time greats would probably bid farewell to the grand stage. At 38 and 41, it is improbable that Lionel Messi and Cristiano Ronaldo have another World Cup in them. Messi could defend the title; Ronaldo could kiss his first. It would be the last dance of Luka Modric; the first act of Lamine Yamal's symphony; the stage for Kylian Mbappe to reclaim his longstanding.

No team is a runaway favourite, but several could wrestle the sceptre from Argentina. The tactics could be intriguing. The heavy pressing style that has defined European football could melt in the draining heat and humidity of the Americas.

Social tensions mar celebrations on eve

ESCALATING PROTESTS AND social tensions in Mexico's capital threaten to derail FIFA World Cup celebrations on the eve of the opening ceremony as protesters block off access to the main plaza set to host the country's main fan celebrations. Mexico jointly hosts the soccer tournament with the US and

Canada and kicks off festivities Thursday with a star-studded event, even as some critics say the government has spent too much time and money catering to international visitors at the residents' expense. The games begin as Mexican President Claudia Sheinbaum walks a political tightrope, navigating a deteriorating relationship with the US ahead of July trade negotiations, along with political scandals and security concerns following a burst of violence in a World Cup host city in February. Pressure has mounted as guests flood into Mexico City. —AP

One tournament, three nations, no shared border

SANDIP G
Mumbai, June 10

A REMIXED VERSION of the centuries-old folk song Cielito Lindo whistles out from car stereos and restaurant radios. "Ay, ay, ay, ay... Cantayo no lores..." Sing and don't cry, the lines roll on, in soulful voices, from Trini Lopez to Luciano Pavarotti. The national football team's feverish fans have long embraced it as their patron song, rendered passionately in the stands, whether lose, draw or win. It is a song of both joy and lament — best accompanied, the locals insist, by pulque, not its more commercialised variant tequila — and it is how Mexicans perceive the World Cup. The fans are said that ticket prices are unbearably expensive; proud that the mundial is kicking off in Mexico City. They grouse that they are hosting only nine games of 104, with the US apportioning 78; yet take

comfort that El Tri could play all their group games on home soil. There is unalloyed optimism that they will go beyond the cursed quinto partido — the fifth game, the wall Mexico has never climbed — but anguish that the finest footballers on the planet are unlikely to step into Mexico City, Monterrey and Guadalajara. A radio programme spent an hour on why Lionel Messi's career is incomplete without a World Cup at the Azteca — the stadium where Pelé lifted the trophy in 1970, where Maradona scored the Hand of God in 1986, and which becomes the first venue in history to host three World Cup opening matches. The question was not rhetorical. Two of the all-time greats would probably bid farewell to the grand stage. At 38 and 41, it is improbable that Lionel Messi and Cristiano Ronaldo have

another World Cup in them. Messi could defend the title; Ronaldo could kiss his first. It would be the last dance of Luka Modric; the first act of Lamine Yamal's symphony; the stage for Kylian Mbappe to reclaim his lost standing. No team is a runaway favourite, but several could wrestle the sceptre from Argentina. The tactics could be intriguing. The heavy pressing style that has defined European football could melt in the draining heat and humidity of the Americas.

Social tensions mar celebrations on eve

ESCALATING PROTESTS AND social tensions in Mexico's capital threaten to derail FIFA World Cup celebrations on the eve of the opening ceremony as protesters block off access to the main plaza set to host the country's main fan celebrations. Mexico jointly hosts the soccer tournament with the US and

Canada and kicks off festivities Thursday with a star-studded event, even as some critics say the government has spent too much time and money catering to international visitors at the residents' expense. The games begin as Mexican President Claudia Sheinbaum walks a political tightrope, navigating a deteriorating relationship with the US ahead of July trade negotiations, along with political scandals and security concerns following a burst of violence in a World Cup host city in February. Pressure has mounted as guests flood into Mexico City. —AP

SANDIP G
Mumbai, June 10

A REMIXED VERSION of the centuries-old folk song Cielito Lindo whistles out from car stereos and restaurant radios. "Ay, ay, ay, ay... Cantayo no lores..." Sing and don't cry, the lines roll on, in soulful voices, from Trini Lopez to Luciano Pavarotti. The national football team's feverish fans have long embraced it as their patron song, rendered passionately in the stands, whether lose, draw or win. It is a song of both joy and lament — best accompanied, the locals insist, by pulque, not its more commercialised variant tequila — and it is how Mexicans perceive the World Cup. The fans are said that ticket prices are unbearably expensive; proud that the mundial is kicking off in Mexico City. They grieve that they are hosting only nine games of 104, with the US apportioning 78; yet take

comfort that El Tri could play all their group games on home soil. There is unalloyed optimism that they will go beyond the cursed quinto partido — the fifth game, the wall Mexico has never climbed — but anguish that the finest footballers on the planet are unlikely to step into Mexico City, Monterrey and Guadalajara. A radio programme spent an hour on why Lionel Messi's career is incomplete without a World Cup at the Azteca — the stadium where Pelé lifted the trophy in 1970, where Maradona scored the Hand of God in 1986, and which becomes the first venue in history to host three World Cup opening matches. The question was not rhetorical. Two of the all-time greats would probably bid farewell to the grand stage. At 38 and 41, it is improbable that Lionel Messi and Cristiano Ronaldo have another World Cup in them. Messi could defend the title; Ronaldo could kiss his first. It would be the last dance of Luka Modric; the first act of Lamine Yamal's symphony; the stage for Kylian Mbappe to reclaim his longstanding. No team is a runaway favourite, but several could wrestle the sceptre from Argentina. The tactics could be intriguing. The heavy pressing style that has defined European football could melt in the draining heat and humidity of the Americas.

Social tensions mar celebrations on eve

ESCALATING PROTESTS AND social tensions in Mexico's capital threaten to derail FIFA World Cup celebrations on the eve of the opening ceremony as protesters block off access to the main plaza set to host the country's main fan celebrations.

Mexico jointly hosts the soccer tournament with the US and

Canada and kicks off festivities Thursday with a star-studded event, even as some critics say the government has spent too much time and money catering to international visitors at the residents' expense.

The games begin as Mexican President Claudia Sheinbaum walks a political tightrope, navigating a deteriorating relationship with the US ahead of July trade negotiations, along with political scandals and security concerns following a burst of violence in a World Cup host city in February.

Pressure has mounted as guests flood into Mexico City.

A REMIXED VERSION of the centuries-old folk song Cielito Lindo whistles out from car stereos and restaurant radios. "Ay, ay, ay, ay... Cantayo no lores..." Sing and don't cry, the lines roll on, in soulful voices, from Trini Lopez to Luciano Pavarotti. The national football team's feverish fans have long embraced it as their patron song, rendered passionately in the stands, whether lose, draw or win. It is a song of both joy and lament — best accompanied, the locals insist, by pulque, not its more commercialised variant tequila — and it is how Mexicans perceive the World Cup.

The fans are said that ticket prices are unbearably expensive; proud that the mundial is kicking off in Mexico City. They grouse that they are hosting only nine games of 104, with the US apportioning 78; yet take comfort that El Tri could play all their group games on home soil. There is unalloyed optimism that they will go beyond the cursed quinto partido — the fifth game, the wall Mexico has never climbed — but anguish that the finest footballers on the planet are unlikely to step into Mexico City, Monterrey and Guadalajara.

A radio programme spent an hour on why Lionel Messi's career is incomplete without a World Cup at the Azteca — the stadium where Pelé lifted the trophy in 1970, where Maradona scored the Hand of God in 1986, and which becomes the first venue in history to host three World Cup opening matches. The question was not rhetorical.

Two of the all-time greats would probably bid farewell to the grand stage. At 38 and 41, it is improbable that Lionel Messi and Cristiano Ronaldo have another World Cup in them. Messi could defend the title; Ronaldo could kiss his first. It would be the last dance of Luka Modric; the first act of Lamine Yamal's symphony; the stage for Kylian Mbappe to reclaim his lost standing.

No team is a runaway favourite, but several could wrestle the sceptre from Argentina. The tactics could be intriguing. The heavy pressing style that has defined European football could melt in the draining heat and humidity of the Americas.

Social tensions mar celebrations on eve

ESCALATING PROTESTS AND social tensions in Mexico's capital threaten to derail FIFA World Cup celebrations on the eve of the opening ceremony as protesters block off access to the main plaza set to host the country's main fan celebrations.

Canada and kicks off festivities Thursday with a star-studded event, even as some critics say the government has spent too much time and money catering to international visitors at the residents' expense.

The games begin as Mexican President Claudia Sheinbaum walks a political tightrope, navigating a deteriorating relationship with the US ahead of July trade negotiations, along with political scandals and security concerns following a burst of violence in a World Cup host city in February.

Pressure has mounted as guests flood into Mexico City. —AP

SANDIP G
Mumbai, June 10

A REMIXED VERSION of the centuries-old folk song Cielito Lindo whistles out from car stereos and restaurant radios. "Ay, ay, ay, ay... Cantay no llores..." Sing and don't cry, the lines roll on, in soulful voices, from Trini Lopez to Luciano Pavarotti. The national football team's feverish fans have long embraced it as their patron song, rendered passionately in the stands, whether lose, draw or win. It is a song of both joy and lament — best accompanied, the locals insist, by pulque, not its more commercialised variant tequila — and it is how Mexicans perceive the World Cup.

The fans are said that ticket prices are unbearably expensive; proud that the mundial is kicking off in Mexico City. They grouse that they are hosting only nine games of 104, with the US apportioning 78; yet take comfort that El Tri could play all their group games on home soil. There is unalloyed optimism that they will go beyond the cursed quinto partido — the fifth game, the wall Mexico has never climbed — but anguish that the finest footballers on the planet are unlikely to step into Mexico City, Monterrey and Guadalajara. A radio programme spent an hour on why Lionel Messi's career is incomplete without a World Cup at the Azteca — the stadium where Pelé lifted the trophy in 1970, where Maradona scored the Hand of God in 1986, and which becomes the first venue in history to host three World Cup opening matches. The question was not rhetorical.

Two of the all-time greats would probably bid farewell to the grand stage. At 38 and 41, it is improbable that Lionel Messi and Cristiano Ronaldo have another World Cup in them. Messi could defend the title; Ronaldo could kiss his first. It would be the last dance of Luka Modric; the first act of Lamine Yamal's symphony; the stage for Kylian Mbappe to reclaim his lost standing. No team is a runaway favourite, but several could wrestle the sceptre from Argentina. The tactics could be intriguing. The heavy pressing style that has defined European football could melt in the draining heat and humidity of the Americas.

Social tensions mar celebrations on eve

ESCALATING PROTESTS AND social tensions in Mexico's capital threaten to derail FIFA World Cup celebrations on the eve of the opening ceremony as protesters block off access to the main plaza set to host the country's main fan celebrations.

Canada and kicks off festivities Thursday with a star-studded event, even as some critics say the government has spent too much time and money catering to international visitors at the residents' expense.

The games begin as Mexican President Claudia Sheinbaum walks a political tightrope, navigating a deteriorating relationship with the US ahead of July trade negotiations, along with political scandals and security concerns following a burst of violence in a World Cup host city in February.

Pressure has mounted as guests flood into Mexico City.

One tournament, three nations, no shared border

Mumbai, June 10

A REMIXED VERSION of the centuries-old folk song Cielito Lindo whistles out from car stereos and restaurant radios. "Ay, ay, ay, ay... Cantayo no lores..." Sing and don't cry, the lines roll on, in soulful voices, from Trini Lopez to Luciano Pavarotti. The national football team's feverish fans have long embraced it as their patron song, rendered passionately in the stands, whether lose, draw or win. It is a song of both joy and lament — best accompanied, the locals insist, by pulque, not its more commercialised variant tequila — and it is how Mexicans perceive the World Cup.

The fans are said that ticket prices are unbearably expensive; proud that the mundial is kicking off in Mexico City. They grouse that they are hosting only nine games of 104, with the US apportioning 78; yet take comfort that El Tri could play all their group games on home soil. There is unalloyed optimism that they will go beyond the cursed quinto partido — the fifth game, the wall Mexico has never climbed — but anguish that the finest footballers on the planet are unlikely to step into Mexico City, Monterrey and Guadalajara. A radio programme spent an hour on why Lionel Messi's career is incomplete without a World Cup at the Azteca — the stadium where Pelé lifted the trophy in 1970, where Maradona scored the Hand of God in 1986, and which becomes the first venue in history to host three World Cup opening matches. The question was not rhetorical.

Two of the all-time greats would probably bid farewell to the grand stage. At 38 and 41, it is improbable that Lionel Messi and Cristiano Ronaldo have another World Cup in them. Messi could defend the title; Ronaldo could kiss his first. It would be the last dance of Luka Modric; the first act of Lamine Yamal's symphony; the stage for Kylian Mbappe to reclaim his longstanding.

No team is a runaway favourite, but several could wrestle the sceptre from Argentina. The tactics could be intriguing. The heavy pressing style that has defined European football could melt in the draining heat and humidity of the Americas.

2022 edition price, experts said, despite late-night match timings, a difficult slot for Indian broadcasters.

The company said it had received strong advertiser interest after offering customised, high-impact solutions across linear, digital, CTV, social and on-ground integrations.

"Leveraging our capabilities across TV and digital platforms, we are ensuring that advertisers can be a part of the entire journey. Our integrated model is aimed at delivering measurable outcomes," Sandeep Mehrotra, chief operating officer, advertisement revenue, Zee Entertainment, said.

Zee will air the tournament through its linear sports portfolio under Unite8 Sports and its digital entertainment platform Zee5.

Zee said active discussions were underway with several other brands across categories, which is expected to close shortly.

The tournament will feature 48 teams, 104 matches across 39 days. Nearly 90% of the matches will be played between midnight and 6 AM IST. To counter this issue, Zee has also offered repeats and highlights of matches as part of its integrated spot and sponsorship plans, sources said, to ensure maximum viewership and visibility for brands.

The free commercial time for spot buyers on TV, said experts, is about 7,000 seconds, while digital has about 2,000 seconds of FCT for spot advertisers. Zee is said to be talking to conglomerates such as Hero, Tata Group and JSW that promote football as a sport, sources said. Among global sponsors, Adidas, Coca-Cola, Hyundai and Kia, Lenovo, Qatar Airways and Visa may take spots on TV and digital, experts added.

Social tensions mar celebrations on eve

ESCALATING PROTESTS AND social tensions in Mexico's capital threaten to derail FIFA World Cup celebrations on the eve of the opening ceremony as protesters block off access to the main plaza set to host the country's main fan celebrations.

Mexico jointly hosts the soccer tournament with the US and

Canada and kicks off festivities Thursday with a star-studded event, even as some critics say the government has spent too much time and money catering to international visitors at the residents' expense.

The games begin as Mexican President Claudia Sheinbaum walks a political tightrope, navigating a deteriorating relationship with the US ahead of July trade negotiations, along with political scandals and security concerns following a burst of violence in a World Cup host city in February.

Pressure has mounted as guests flood into Mexico City.

SANDIP G
Mumbai, June 10

A REMIXED VERSION of the centuries-old folk song Cielito Lindo whistles out from car stereos and restaurant radios. "Ay, ay, ay, ay... Cantayno llores..." Sing and don't cry, the lines roll on, in soulful voices, from Trini Lopez to Luciano Pavarotti. The national football team's feverish fans have long embraced it as their patron song, rendered passionately in the stands, whether lose, draw or win. It is a song of both joy and lament — best accompanied, the locals insist, by pulque, not its more commercialised variant tequila — and it is how Mexicans perceive the World Cup.

The fans are sad that ticket prices are unbearably expensive; proud that the mundial is kicking off in Mexico City. They grouse that they are hosting only nine games of 104, with the US apportioning 78; yet take comfort that El Tri could play all their group games on home soil. There is unalloyed optimism that they will go beyond the cursed quinto partido — the fifth game, the wall Mexico has never climbed — but anguish that the finest footballers on the planet are unlikely to step into Mexico City, Monterrey and Guadalajara.

Aradio programme spent an hour on why Lionel Messi's career is incomplete without a World Cup at the Azteca — the stadium where Pelé lifted the trophy in 1970, where Maradona scored the Hand of God in 1986, and which becomes the first venue in history to host three World Cup opening matches. The question was not rhetorical.

Two of the all-time greats would probably bid farewell to the grand stage. At 38 and 41, it is improbable that Lionel Messi and Cristiano Ronaldo have another World Cup in them. Messi could defend the title; Ronaldo could kiss his first. It would be the last dance of Luka Modric; the first act of Lamine Yamal's symphony; the stage for Kylian Mbappe to reclaim his lost standing.

No team is a runaway favourite, but several could wrestle the sceptre from Argentina. The tactics could be intriguing. The heavy pressing style that has defined European football could melt in the draining heat and humidity of the Americas.

2022 edition price, experts said, despite late-night match timings, a difficult slot for Indian broadcasters.

The company said it had received strong advertiser interest after offering customised, high-impact solutions across linear, digital, CTV, social and on-ground integrations.

"Leveraging our capabilities across TV and digital platforms, we are ensuring that advertisers can be a part of the entire journey. Our integrated model is aimed at delivering measurable outcomes," Sandeep Mehrotra, chief operating officer, advertisement revenue, Zee Entertainment, said.

Zee will air the tournament through its linear sports portfolio under Unite8 Sports and its digital entertainment platform Zee5.

Zee said active discussions were underway with several other brands across categories, which is expected to close shortly.

The tournament will feature 48 teams, 104 matches across 39 days. Nearly 90% of the matches will be played between midnight and 6 AM IST. To counter this issue, Zee has also offered repeats and highlights of matches as part of its integrated spot and sponsorship plans, sources said, to ensure maximum viewership and visibility for brands.

The free commercial time for spot buyers on TV, said experts, is about 7,000 seconds, while digital has about 2,000 seconds of FCT for spot advertisers. Zee is said to be talking to conglomerates such as Hero, Tata Group and JSW that promote football as a sport, sources said. Among global sponsors, Adidas, Coca-Cola, Hyundai and Kia, Lenovo, Qatar Airways and Visa may take spots on TV and digital, experts added.

Social tensions mar celebrations on eve

ESCALATING PROTESTS AND social tensions in Mexico's capital threaten to derail FIFA World Cup celebrations on the eve of the opening ceremony as protesters block off access to the main plaza set to host the country's main fan celebrations.

Mexico jointly hosts the soccer tournament with the US and

Canada and kicks off festivities Thursday with a star-studded event, even as some critics say the government has spent too much time and money catering to international visitors at the residents' expense.

The games begin as Mexican President Claudia Sheinbaum walks a political tightrope, navigating a deteriorating relationship with the US ahead of July trade negotiations, along with political scandals and security concerns following a burst of violence in a World Cup host city in February.

Pressure has mounted as guests flood into Mexico City.

SANDIP G
Mumbai, June 10

A REMIXED VERSION of the centuries-old folk song Cielito Lindo whistles out from car stereos and restaurant radios. "Ay, ay, ay, ay... Cantayno flores..." Sing and don't cry, the lines roll on, in soulful voices, from Trini Lopez to Luciano Pavarotti. The national football team's feverish fans have long embraced it as their patron song, rendered passionately in the stands, whether lose, draw or win. It is a song of both joy and lament — best accompanied, the locals insist, by pulque, not its more commercialised variant tequila — and it is how Mexicans perceive the World Cup. The fans are sad that ticket prices are unbearably expensive; proud that the mundial is kicking off in Mexico City. They grouse that they are hosting only nine games of 104, with the US apportioning 78; yet take comfort that El Tri could play all their group games on home soil. There is unalloyed optimism that they will go beyond the cursed quinto partido — the fifth game, the wall Mexico has never climbed — but anguish that the finest footballers on the planet are unlikely to step into Mexico City, Monterrey and Guadalajara. A radio programme spent an hour on why Lionel Messi's career is incomplete without a World Cup at the Azteca — the stadium where Pelé lifted the trophy in 1970, where Maradona scored the Hand of God in 1986, and which becomes the first venue in history to host three World Cup opening matches. The question was not rhetorical.

Two of the all-time greats would probably bid farewell to the grand stage. At 38 and 41, it is improbable that Lionel Messi and Cristiano Ronaldo have another World Cup in them. Messi could defend the title; Ronaldo could kiss his first. It would be the last dance of Luka Modric; the first act of Lamine Yamal's symphony; the stage for Kylian Mbappé to reclaim his longstanding.

No team is a runaway favourite, but several could wrestle the sceptre from Argentina. The tactics could be intriguing. The heavy pressing style that has defined European football could melt in the draining heat and humidity of the Americas.
