Rabies vaccine sales at 5-year high in 2025

Surge comes amid rise in dog-bite cases

SANKET KOUL
New Delhi, 9 January

Anti-rabies vaccine (ARV) and immunoglobulin sales are on the rise again after a slump during Covid, amid a marked increase in dog bite cases across the country.

According to data from market research firm Pharmarack, the combined number of ARV and immunoglobulin vaccines sold in 2025 touched 8.5 million units. This is the highest in five years, and a 17 per cent rise from 7.2 million units sold in 2024.

"ARV sales in moving annual turnover (MAT) terms from January to December 2025 stood at ₹294 crore, a 15 per cent year-on-year (Y-o-Y) increase from ₹255 crore," Sheetal Sapale, vice-president (commercial) at Pharmarack said.

This comes even as the Supreme Court has been hearing a suo motu case, initiated on July 28 last year. It is over a media report on stray dog bites leading to rabies, particularly among children, in the national capital.

In November last year, the apex court had also directed relocation of stray canines to designated shelters after due sterilisation and vaccination.

Government data suggests that there has been a 76 per cent rise in dog bites, from 2.1 million in 2022 to 3.7 million in 2024.

While full figures for 2025 are not available, response to a parliamentary query from the Ministry of Animal Husbandry, Dairying and Fisheries stated that 429,664 incidents were reported just in January 2025.

Doctors are seeing a rise in dog bite cases in their outpatient departments (OPDs), with children and gig workers most affected.

A consultant for infectious diseases at a Gurugram-based hospital told Business Standard that they handle around 25-35 dog bite cases per month. "Five years ago, we would see only 10-15 cases monthly," she said.

Manisha Arora, director for internal medicine at Delhi's CK Birla Hospital, added that children aged below 15 are most affected.

"This is consistent with clinical observations, as children are often more vulnerable as they play outdoors and due to closer interaction with animals," she added.

Another doctor added that working adults, such as roadside vendors, gig workers and pedestrians, are also at risk.

While hospitals in metropolitan areas claim to have a stable ARVs and immunoglobulins stock, several reports have indicated vaccine shortages in rural areas, where patients may need to travel long distances to access treatment.

As a result, vaccine makers are preparing to ratchet up production.

Sanjiv Navangul, managing director (MD) and chief executive officer (CEO) at Bharat Serums and Vaccines (BSV), told Business Standard that the company currently supplies more than 130,000 doses of ARVs and rabies immunoglobulins per month. It caters to public and private health systems and hospitals. "By FY26, we aim to increase supplies by 15-20 per cent, supporting India's mission of 'Zero by 30'. It aims at eliminating human deaths due to rabies by 2030 through prompt and complete post-exposure treatment."

The standard of care for rabies begins with immediate and thorough wound washing under running tap water for at least 15 minutes. This is followed by post-exposure pro-

SC refuses to go into allegations of harassment of women dog feeders

The Supreme Court on Friday said it would not go into the allegations of harassment of women dog feeders and caregivers by purported anti-feeder vigilantes since it was a law-and-order issue and the aggrieved persons could lodge FIRs about it. Hearing arguments in the stray dogs case, the apex court also refused to go into the claims about certain derogatory remarks being made about women in the issue.

The funny man from India

VANITA KOHLI-KHANDEKAR

Vir Das is provocative. You cannot sit through his shows or his online specials without feeling strongly one way or another — even if you are laughing your guts out. I have watched two of his Emmy award-winning comedian's live performances — MindFool and Sounds of India. And all of his seven specials on Netflix, several times. I have even seen a couple of the 18 films he has starred in — Revolver Rani (2014) was a blast and so was Delhi Belly (2011). Going by its trailer, Happy Patel: Khartarnak Jasoo, a film Das has directed and acted in looks like another wild party. He is witty, thought-provoking and, arguably, the only comedian from India who has a global audience way beyond the diaspora. He has performed at some iconic stand-up venues like the Comedy Cellar in New York or the Edinburgh Festival Fringe and also big mainstream ones like Carnegie Hall in the US and the Royal Albert Hall in the UK among others. That is why, picking up The Outsider: A Memoir For Misfits was a no-brainer.

It is the story of his life till his current age of 46. But you can be forgiven for thinking that you are at a Vir Das show. It has the sassy tone of his stand-up acts making for a stream-of-consciousness kind of read. Once you get past that, the book speaks. It tells the story of a boy who couldn't shut up and the influences that shaped his witty bone.

There is the childhood in Nigeria, in a secure compound. Then at nine years of age the shift to The Lawrence School, Sanawar, a posh boarding school in Himachal Pradesh where he was beaten, bullied and miserable. He tried running away so often that it became a sport. Finally he lied about stomach pain and did not recent even on the operating table just before the surgeon took out his perfectly healthy appendix. That is when the school let him go and he landed in Delhi Public School in Noida where he lived with his grandparents. He took to debating, dramatics, playing in a band, tennis and basketball. He kept winning trophies but his grades were "mediocre to terrible" as he puts it.

him lunch, let him watch MTV. "Ramesh listened or at least pretended to and he never responded.

Because of his silence I had to make a story extremely interesting to get a response out of this taciturn man. In a way he was my first audience member, one who paid in food," remembers Das. His parents came back from Africa poorer and life became tougher. While studying political science at Delhi University he managed, with great difficulty, to get through to Knox College, Illinois with 90 per cent aid to study economics. It is here that he did well in drama class prompting the teacher Ivan Davidson to coax him to change his major. "You are meant to be a performer," Davidson told Das.

That came with its own challenges, including surviving in the US doing everything from dishwashing to bartending to keep things together over the years. Das tells the story of his struggles just like he tells his jokes — with a straight face and dollops of sass. His return to India, his first major show at The Habitat Centre in Delhi, his move to Mumbai, the years with CNBC-TV18 and later tell you so much about him. His experience of working in Hindi cinema helped shape his resolve to stick to stand-up.
