CLEANLINESS EXERCISE

PM launches 'Swachhata Hi Seva' campaign

Modi exhorted citizens to fulfill Gandhi's dream of a clean India; the launch saw BJP leaders participate in the exercise across the country

PRESS TRUST OF INDIA
New Delhi, September 15

PRIME MINISTER NARENDRA MODI launched 'Swachhata Hi Seva' campaign on Saturday and took up a broom to clean a school named after Dalit icon BR Ambedkar as ministers of his government and BJP leaders and workers participated in a similar exercise across the country.

In a nearly two-hour video interaction with people from across the country, including faith leaders, Uttar Pradesh chief minister Yogi Adityanath and noted personalities such as Amitabh Bachchan and Ratan

Tata, Modi said sanitation coverage in India has increased to over 90% from 40% in the four years of the Swachh Bharat (Clean India) project.

Few crore households thought that nine crore toilets would be built and 4.5 lakh villages declared open-defecation-free in four years, he said.

He launched the "cleanliness is service" exercise to push for greater public participation in one of his government's centrepiece programmes launched on October 2, 2015, and which will continue till Mahatma Gandhi's birth anniversary next month. All sections of society and every part of the country have joined the cleanliness drive, he said, exhorting people to rededicate themselves to fulfilling the father of states and Union Territories would be open-defecation-free in four years?" he said, calling it a historic day.

Adityanath said Uttar Pradesh, the country's most populous and among the most poor states, would be ODF by October 2, 2018, as per a baseline survey of the Clean India campaign. He said that his government is working to ensure that every family has a toilet by October 2019.

His government has built over 1.36 crore toilets since it came to power last year and its emphasis on cleanliness has led to a drastic fall in vector-borne diseases, he said.

Modi lauded Adityanath for his government's efforts.

Cleanliness is playing an important role in improving people's living standards, he said, citing a WHO estimate that over three lakh lives would be saved by it and also a study that cases of diarrhoea would fall by over 30%.

Lack of cleanliness plays havoc, especially in the lives of the poor, pushing them into a cesspool of diseases, he said.

The prime minister spoke to people in states such as Assam, Kerala, Tamil Nadu, Bihar, Karnataka, Rajasthan and Haryana.

He also interacted with Indo-Tibetan Border Police personnel involved in cleaning Pangong Lake and its surroundings in Leh, besides religious and spiritual figures, including Sadhguru Jaggi Vasudev, Sri Sri Ravi Shankar and Mata Amritanandamayi.

He also interacted with Sikh religious figures from Patna Sahib Gurudwara, Muslim custodians of Ajmer Sharif and some from a media group. He praised the efforts of newspapers and news channels in supporting the Swachh Bharat campaign.

Modi said those working for the cleanliness campaign would be remembered like freedom fighters in times to come and would be known as the true heirs of Gandhi.

He said his government is working for "waste to wealth" and sought contributions from everybody. The government alone cannot do it, he added.

Building toilets and putting in place sanitation measures alone would not do, he said, asking people to inculcate cleaning habits in their lives. Indian culture has traditionally put an emphasis on cleanliness, he said.

After his nearly two-hour-long interaction, Modi took part in a cleanliness drive on the premises of Baba Sahib Ambedkar Higher Secondary School in Paharganj.

Union ministers, BJP leaders and workers from across the country participated in the exercise following the prime minister's programme.

Pradhan urges policymakers to focus on nature of future jobs

PRESS TRUST OF INDIA
New Delhi, September 15

UNION MINISTER DHARMENDRA Pradhan on Saturday called for a collective introspection on the changing nature of job profiles and urged policymakers to zero in on the nature of future jobs and their availability. Public policymakers need to come to grips with changing nature of jobs and their availability, Pradhan said while releasing a report, Future of Jobs in India-2.0 and Employer-led Models of Job Creation-Version:2, at 11th Global Skills Summit organised by Ficci here.

"Those responsible for fashioning public policy need to zero in on the nature of future jobs and where they would be available," he said, adding "the belief that technology and innovation were squeezing the job space was a myth". While some jobs were being squeezed, a multi-fold increase was being witnessed in many other sectors due to technological innovation, the skill development and entrepreneurship minister said.

Internet, he said, was changing the character of the workplace at a frenetic pace, and therefore, policy shapers need to astutely comprehend the jobs scenario. India is blessed with intellectual manpower, and the time was ripe to channelise this asset into creation of gainful employment for the people endowed with the right type of skills, he added.

TV Mohan Das Pai, chairman, Ficci Skill Development Committee, said India will witness 24 million people reach the age of 21 by 2025 and the challenge will be to absorb them in productively in the workforce.

NTPC plans boosting utilisation of low-cost power plants

INDRONIL ROYCHOWDHURY
Kolkata, September 15

PUBLIC SECTOR POWER producer NTPC has decided to put power stations operating at lower cost to optimum use, keeping the power plants operating at comparatively higher cost at reserve shutdown.

This could help ailing rates in getting power at rates a little above ₹3 a time when they are trying to buy spot power at rates below ₹3. Half of NTPC's 4.4 gigawatt of thermal capacity produce power at below ₹3.

While the power ministry is exerting pressure on the coal ministry to relax fuel and regulatory issues, the PSU power producer wants to operate its pit head plants at higher plant load factor, keeping the plants away from pit heads at reserve shutdown.

NTPC felt that, even though the demand for power has increased by 12%, this can be done if pit head plants are operated at near 100% capacity instead of the general 70-75%.

The power ministry's of the view that all power-producing units should be given access to coal to which plants, which have no PPAs or with partial PPAs, can depress coal prices.

Ashok Khurana, director general of the Association of Power Producers, clarified that if restrictions were removed from coal offtake and distressed power units given access to coal, they were willing to sell power at ₹3.50 per unit rather than the NTPC, which was forced to buy power at ₹5.84 per unit. Power prices could have been market-driven, he said.

However, in view of the discoms' purchasing capacity, NTPC was trying to produce cheaper power and supply to state discoms instead of bargaining with them with costlier power.

"NTPC has not bid for any PPA since 2011 and the company has assured coal linkage gets it in regulated price. Hence, their monopoly in the power market," Khurana said.

Although NTPC, at one point of time, was vying for taking over stressed assets and consolidating the generation business, NTPC's corporate communications made clear the company was not looking for acquisition of stressed assets unless such assets ensured high returns on equity and had proper PPAs and coal linkage.

NTPC is comfortable with banks taking over stressed power projects and NTPC running them for a fee.

Time right for policy intervention on rupee: Yes Bank

PRESS TRUST OF INDIA
Kolkata, September 15

THE RUPEE IS close to its intrinsic value of around 72 per US dollar and the time is ripe for policy intervention to check further depreciation of the Indian currency, according to Yes Bank.

"The time is right for policy intervention to anchor the sentiment and check rupee depreciation. Currently, the rupee is tracking closer to its intrinsic value," Yes Bank group president and chief economist Shubhada Rao said on Saturday.

Speaking at the Merchants' Chamber of Commerce & Industry's India Economic Forum 2018, Rao said that according to the bank's view, intrinsic value of the rupee is around 72 against a US dollar taken on a base of 2011-12.

International Monetary Fund (IMF) India resident representative Andreas W Bauer also said according to their latest report, the rupee was around its Real Effective Exchange Rate (REER). Rao said any further slide from the current levels was unlikely but it is difficult to predict exact numbers due to sentiments, global geopolitical and economic reasons. She said fundamentally the current crisis is not similar to the 2013 situation.

"During 2013, inflation was around 11%, while now the inflation has been eased to about 5% among other factors," she said. Rao, however, favours the need for policy intervention by way of controlling consumption-related imports like gold.

Current laws inadequate to check abuse of money in polls: CEC

PRESS TRUST OF INDIA
New Delhi, September 15

Chief Election Commissioner OP Rawat

CHIEF ELECTION COMMISSIONER (CEC) OP Rawat said on Saturday that the present set of laws are "inadequate" to tackle the menace of black money in elections and noted that Cambridge Analytica like "machinations" of data theft, data harvesting and fake news pose a potent threat to the electoral process in the country.

Rawat, speaking on the 'challenges to India electoral democracy' at a symposium, said democracy does not run on whims and it requires traits such as courage, character, integrity and knowledge that are diminishing and on the "verge of extinction" in the country.

The CEC, underlining a number of issues and challenges that face the electoral body, said clean elections are like a "well spring of legitimacy" for the leadership and the people of the country, and if this was contaminated by such issues, the common man becomes "cynical" about the entire system, which is an area of concern.

"With the rise of fake news, with the rise of make-believe things, with the rise of all kinds of machinations like data theft, data harvesting, profiling, targeted communication, affecting not only communication, but referendum the world over and changing the outcome of any process, which is meant to translate popular will in (taking) a healthy decision, in (choosing) a healthy representative government... that's the potent threat every democracy in the world is facing," Rawat said at the event organised by the Chief Electoral Officer (CEO) of Delhi.

The CEC said the EC is well aware of these issues amongst many others similar to them.

"Here, in our country, the Commission is seized with issues such as cyber security, securing our data, so that Cambridge Analytica kind of things do not happen over elections, about misuse and abuse of social media platforms, about fake news, about all kinds of ills that get into whether it is management of electoral rolls, campaign finance, polling process or technology," he said.

Specifically talking about the use of money power during polls, the top EC functionary said that current laws were not of much help for them to ensure a complete check of this abuse and that is why "state funding" of polls is not possible in India at present.

"Abuse of money is the main concern for India and in Indian elections. There has been a lot of talk about bringing transparency in campaign finance, even people talk about state funding. But whatever legal framework is available as on date today is not adequate to address this issue. And, therefore, the commission has been suggesting a number of reforms in this direction," the CEC said.

On state funding, he said, the commission feels that "it won't serve the purpose effectively because so long as you have torrents of money from such sources flowing into the election arena, the state funding is just like a fig leaf trying to control that torrent."

Rawat said effective use of media and curbing use of fake news and paid news are an important area on which the poll body has been working upon. "... (The) major challenge is about the management of media, including social media. That is multiple dimensions, starting from ownership of media.

"If you study the ownership of media, you will find that enormous change has come about and whatever we could think in terms of freedom of press... that 'press' is maybe just a minuscule part languishing in some corner of the whole media spectrum," he said. "So instead of treating it as a monolith, if we analyse in media component terms and focus ourselves on assuring the freedom of press... I think all these ills, which have emerged in the form of fake news, paid news, etc., will automatically evaporate," Rawat said.

The CEC, during his speech, underlined that the purification of electoral rolls was a major and important task before the Election Commission and it will go on till the poll body is fully "satisfied" about it.

The CEC said this was largely happening, as most people registered (in the electoral rolls) at new places of registration forget to get their names deleted at the old place of residence.

"That is why duplicates are generated. All these attempts (to purify the electoral rolls) have delivered rich dividends and have constituted in considerable enhancing of the percentage of polling, besides our electoral participation efforts.

"This is one initiative that has given us a lot of satisfaction... this will continue till the commission is satisfied that it is perfect all over the country," he said.

He said he was surprised to see during the Karnataka election—in Bengaluru—that the polling percentage was the lowest.
