Biden and Xi meet next week: No detail too small to sweat

This will be Xi’s first trip to the United States in six years.

Associated Press

When President Joe Biden meets Chinese President Xi Jinping on the sidelines of the G20 leaders’ summit in Bali, Indonesia, last year

Biden and Xi meet next week: No detail too small to sweat

In an unexpected move, China is sending Xi Jinping to the United States to meet with President Joe Biden, the first such trip in six years.

The meeting, which will take place on the sidelines of the G20 leaders’ summit in Bali, Indonesia, is expected to focus on a range of issues, including trade, climate change, and national security.

The two leaders are expected to discuss a variety of topics, including economic cooperation, security, and regional stability.

The meeting is likely to be a significant moment in the relationship between the United States and China, which has become more tense in recent years due to issues such as technology transfer, trade disputes, and human rights.

The meeting comes at a time when both countries are facing significant challenges, including the ongoing COVID-19 pandemic and the global economic downturn caused by the pandemic.

The meeting is expected to provide an opportunity for the two leaders to discuss ways to improve relations and address some of the key issues that have been causing tensions between the two countries.

The meeting is also expected to be closely watched by other nations, including those in the Asia-Pacific region, as it is seen as a potential turning point in the relationship between the United States and China.

The meeting is expected to take place on the sidelines of the G20 summit in Bali, Indonesia, where leaders from 20 nations and international organizations are scheduled to gather.

The summit is expected to run from November 11 to 13, and is expected to focus on a range of issues, including climate change, economic recovery, and global health.

The meeting is likely to be a significant moment in the relationship between the United States and China, which has become more tense in recent years due to issues such as technology transfer, trade disputes, and human rights.

The meeting comes at a time when both countries are facing significant challenges, including the ongoing COVID-19 pandemic and the global economic downturn caused by the pandemic.

The meeting is expected to provide an opportunity for the two leaders to discuss ways to improve relations and address some of the key issues that have been causing tensions between the two countries.

The meeting is also expected to be closely watched by other nations, including those in the Asia-Pacific region, as it is seen as a potential turning point in the relationship between the United States and China.

The meeting is expected to take place on the sidelines of the G20 summit in Bali, Indonesia, where leaders from 20 nations and international organizations are scheduled to gather.

The summit is expected to run from November 11 to 13, and is expected to focus on a range of issues, including climate change, economic recovery, and global health.

The meeting is likely to be a significant moment in the relationship between the United States and China, which has become more tense in recent years due to issues such as technology transfer, trade disputes, and human rights.

The meeting comes at a time when both countries are facing significant challenges, including the ongoing COVID-19 pandemic and the global economic downturn caused by the pandemic.

The meeting is expected to provide an opportunity for the two leaders to discuss ways to improve relations and address some of the key issues that have been causing tensions between the two countries.

The meeting is also expected to be closely watched by other nations, including those in the Asia-Pacific region, as it is seen as a potential turning point in the relationship between the United States and China.

The meeting is expected to take place on the sidelines of the G20 summit in Bali, Indonesia, where leaders from 20 nations and international organizations are scheduled to gather.

The summit is expected to run from November 11 to 13, and is expected to focus on a range of issues, including climate change, economic recovery, and global health.

The meeting is likely to be a significant moment in the relationship between the United States and China, which has become more tense in recent years due to issues such as technology transfer, trade disputes, and human rights.

The meeting comes at a time when both countries are facing significant challenges, including the ongoing COVID-19 pandemic and the global economic downturn caused by the pandemic.

The meeting is expected to provide an opportunity for the two leaders to discuss ways to improve relations and address some of the key issues that have been causing tensions between the two countries.

The meeting is also expected to be closely watched by other nations, including those in the Asia-Pacific region, as it is seen as a potential turning point in the relationship between the United States and China.

The meeting is expected to take place on the sidelines of the G20 summit in Bali, Indonesia, where leaders from 20 nations and international organizations are scheduled to gather.

The summit is expected to run from November 11 to 13, and is expected to focus on a range of issues, including climate change, economic recovery, and global health.

The meeting is likely to be a significant moment in the relationship between the United States and China, which has become more tense in recent years due to issues such as technology transfer, trade disputes, and human rights.

The meeting comes at a time when both countries are facing significant challenges, including the ongoing COVID-19 pandemic and the global economic downturn caused by the pandemic.

The meeting is expected to provide an opportunity for the two leaders to discuss ways to improve relations and address some of the key issues that have been causing tensions between the two countries.

The meeting is also expected to be closely watched by other nations, including those in the Asia-Pacific region, as it is seen as a potential turning point in the relationship between the United States and China.

The meeting is expected to take place on the sidelines of the G20 summit in Bali, Indonesia, where leaders from 20 nations and international organizations are scheduled to gather.

The summit is expected to run from November 11 to 13, and is expected to focus on a range of issues, including climate change, economic recovery, and global health.